INTRODUCTION

It is highly unusual for a “student organization” to remain vital for over 185 years, but that is the story of Wake Forest Debate. Established in Wake Forest Institute’s second year, 1835, as two Literary Societies—Philomathians and Euzelians—the program prospered, training every Wake Forest student in debate and speaking. Continuing through the Intercollegiate Debate era (roughly 1897-1935), Wake Debaters transitioned the turn-of-the-century from an inward-looking approach to an expansive model that took the debates outside the gates of Wake Forest College.

A century after the founding, debate’s competitive team has held sway, exhibiting a prowess that continues today. The era also extended the debating canvas across the country and invited international debate to campus. The number of debate programs nationally that have exhibited sustained relevance and unbroken resilience since their inception can be counted in the single digits.

Milestones – Defining Lists of Wake Forest Debate, the third in a series of Wake Debate histories, ironically is the first volume to be made available as a publication. The reason for this choice is while researching the first two volumes the data collection incrementally assembled the records provided here. Much of the detailed data points presented in this volume can only be found through examining in detail the Society minutes, newspaper accounts, University publications, and preserved team records.

Even though it may seem ‘back to front’ to begin a historical series with a set of lists, we are aware that the audience for this series is unique. Debaters know better than most that facts alone do not argue. Any attempt to write the history of Wake Debate inevitably involves choices that are influenced by the perspective of the authors. In this case, the authors are very close, perhaps too close to the subject. This volume serves as a fact check for both the authors and the audience. It represents the good, the bad, and the ugly of an organization that was founded alongside the institution itself.

We know that readers willing to wade into the records will find key themes, patterns, and notable achievements that we would otherwise miss in the two forthcoming volumes. We are starting with the lists, in part, because we hope that this volume can inspire readers to reach out and help us as we approach the next steps of the narrative volumes.

The creation of the lists found here represent a step-by-step process unfolding since the 1980s. It has always been in the back of our minds that at some point the telling of the Wake Forest Debate storyline would come about. It has required a maturing of the program and a retirement to find the time and resources to fulfill that vision. Although it has always felt inevitable, the process of researching the history of the program has revealed that the story of Wake Debate is in many ways the story of Wake Forest University. That argument, however, is not for this volume.

Milestones – Defining Lists of Wake Forest Debate is intended not just a preservation of the historical record, a key purpose, but also as a stroll down memory lane for those who acquire this volume. We do not know how many names from Wake Forest debate history appear in these pages, but it must be in the hundreds, perhaps thousands. The volume also will be entertaining for the “debate junkie” of which there have been more than a few over the years. You know who you are, having returned for reunions and inquiring from time to time about the winning, and sometime losing, records of Wake teams.

The volume opens with the chronology of the program from inception to the present. This provides a longitudinal frame for understanding the context in which the program transformed and matured. The book is then organized in four general sections (1) historical lists that trace from the earliest days of the literary societies, (2) what debaters have argued about – resolutions, (3) tournament history, and (4) lists that are unique to the Wake Debate program.

A crucial goal of Milestones was to preserve the summary historical data before it becomes irretrievable. As with nearly any historical preservation the results are inevitably incomplete. Historical epochs, events, and varying invested persons dictate what data mattered and what was preserved. Understandably, some directors emphasized competitive engagement without an eye to future memory. Others were latent historians keeping copious records. Even for the latter group there are, unsurprisingly, lapses.

Over time alternative activities competed for attention and subsequently grabbed public interest thereby diminishing available records. In almost all periods, Coaches were faithful in promoting the team’s achievements through media stories, but the media itself offered uneven attention. In the very early decades and following the Civil War very few records survive, or perhaps they were not created in the first place. For that era, the Literary Society minutes and newspapers were primary sources.

There are certainly mistakes among these lists. We know as we added corrections until the last hours of constructing this manuscript. We attempted to be as careful as possible, often double, and triple checking various sources for accuracy, knowing that errors are unlikely to be revisited in the future. Most of the lists present data across elongated time periods. Inherently this implies comparisons which may or may not be valid. Additionally, emphasis and even the meaning of as concrete an item as a “debate” changed across the years. Most entry’s opening comments, where appropriate, speak to these tricky apples and oranges comparisons.

It can be difficult to imagine the longevity and scope of the Wake Forest debate experience when revisiting historical instances. This volume’s opening entry is designed to provide a sense of the sweep of that history. In this entry one finds the chronology of defining Wake Forest debate events. A history of Wake Forest coaches and college presidents simultaneously presents these players within the environment in which their efforts took place.

An accounting of major social and political events, along with the timeline of US presidents, gives a sense of the program’s extended lifetime. It is extraordinary to recognize when the literary societies were founded in 1835 Andrew Jackson was the sitting president. Wake Forest was far from cut off from the world in these early days, but what was their lived-world like when it took weeks for news to arrive? It helps, in part, to explain the insularity of early debate life accounts.

A sense of survival also emerges as the Wake Forest experience overlaps with the Civil War, two World Wars, and Civil Rights, all the while interspersed with economic depressions and pandemics.

A timetable of transportation and communication developments is also presented. The Wake Forest debate narrative is closely aligned with the advancements in technology. A mostly insular way of life begins to change with the 1840 construction of the Raleigh and Gaston Railroad, which opened a railroad station 1 mile south in Forestville NC. In 1874 the station is moved to the far more convenient location just outside the gates of Wake.1 Still moving beyond the campus walls remained muted until the late 1800s, an extended period of seclusion from Reconstruction to the invention of intercollegiate sport. Along with reliable train service, improvement roads, and the automobile, Wake’s “borders” expanded exponentially. Later the growth of air travel allowed entry into tournaments anywhere in the country. And probably the most impactful since the “train station at the gate” has been the Internet with its many ramifications.

LITERARY SOCIETIES BRING DEBATES TO THE PUBLIC - 1872–1958

For the first time, in 1872, “a feature of much additional interest was imparted to the anniversary celebration by [adding] a public debate.” The disputants were Messrs. F. R. Underwood and M. D. Burney on the one side and Messrs. A. R. Jones and R. T. Vann on the other. Examining the first entry in this compilation one notices the partners were paired with one debater from each group. The “friendly-mixing” of societies occasionally discussed in the Society minutes was rare. G. W. Paschal, in an article entitled The Literary Societies, provides the flavor of the moment. When initiating the first public debate the “added precaution was taken to arrange the speakers so that a member of one society might have as his colleague a member of the other. Under any other arrangement there would have been danger of a much more serious battle than one of words.”

For the next 26 years the societies held a public debate on the anniversary of their founding, continuing with mixed society teams. The debates drew an increasingly prestigious crowd and were covered in the newspapers, especially Raleigh. In 1914 the societies added Society Day, a festive fall social event named in their own honor. The Raleigh newspaper, The Farmer and Mechanic, observed, “The invitations for the First Annual Society Day of the Wake Forest Euzelian and Philomathesian in Literary societies have just been issued. The society day will be held on October 30th modeled after the anniversary occasions.”

Once a much-anticipated affair, by the late 1920s, Society Day became a less central event in the fall calendar. Competing activities, ease of travel, and the inability to guarantee a bevy of Meredith College visitors contributed to the demise. Of course, as with most activities, the collapse was incremental. Debates continued, but received diminished prime time, until the 1940s and 50s when the public debates were largely insular to the societies themselves. The public debates became contests, more mini tournaments, pitting the Euzelians vs. the Philomathesians.

2 The Farmer and Mechanic – October 14, 1914
Anniversary Day debates, formerly a celebration of the societies founding, transitioned to the celebration of the college’s founding in 1925, becoming known as Founder's Day.3 Anniversary Day stopped delivering public debates that same year highlighting oratories instead of debates (presumably a shorter more concise program). Increasingly, the responsibility for Founder's Day moved from the societies to the administration. Debates continued until 1928 but not with the same acclaim, increasingly abandoning an audience beyond the Wake confines.

The first non-Anniversary Day debate was the initial intercollegiate contest with Trinity College in 1897. These intercollegiate debates pitted the two schools in public audience programs. They became centers of entertainment and holiday celebrations. When Wake's five-year series with Trinity was summarily canceled6 the school was forced to find other outside debate partners. Intercollegiate Debates were about to explode.

The era of intercollegiate Debate continued full throttle until the late 1930s. Debates were initially held with Baptist institutions, often reachable by rail, including Richmond, Mercer, Furman. They also debated Methodist Randolph Macon (1908), Davidson (1909) and the former Trinity series. Casting a wider net of geography and perhaps prestige, a series of annual debates commenced with Baylor in 1912.7

Soon the Societies organized Debate Councils who were responsible for negotiating rules and arrangement for the increasing volume of public debates. The list of competitors remained consistent until 1920, when the “Northern Baptist school” Colgate was, with much observance, added to the schedule.4 The floodgates were open. Beginning in 1922 Oklahoma Baptist and Stetson were added. By 1925 full tours, with multiple opponents were arranged throughout the Southern states, and in 1928 additional Western and in Northern tours were added. In that year Wake debaters participated in more than twenty intercollegiate public debates. This pattern would endure throughout the 1920s. While intercollegiate debates continued, in 1930 increasingly the debater's energy and attention were directed toward intercollegiate debate tournaments.

In the 1940s and 50s, and in many forms and forums until the present, public debates with other universities continued. In the early tournament era, they became practiced debates for the upcoming season. More and more public debates were sponsored by the traveling team rather than the societies.7 The societies continued to hold “public” debates in their society halls, which were promoted and open to an audience, but attendance waned. By the late 1950s, the literary societies were no longer involved in public debates.

Composing the Literary Society’s public debate record represents a multi-year historical dig. The primary sourcing were State newspapers accessed through newspapers.com. Depending on the popularity of debate among the public, verification ranged from easy to incredibly difficult. Newspaper coverage was sold until the mid to late 1930s. Wake publications, the Howler, and earlier, Wake Forest Student and Bulletin, provided leads and verification of newspaper accounts.

Intercollegiate era debates anchored major College holidays (e.g., Anniversary Day) and were often coupled with community celebrations (e.g., Thanksgiving, Easter). During public debate’s apex, cities and towns had multiple newspapers, with special events recounted in detail. It was not unusual for newspapers to provide full or partial transcripts, along with photos/drawings of the student participants. More and more events of “higher interest” (politics and sports, in particular) relegated debates to the back pages and by the 40s to extinction. Changing societal demographics and communication modes complicated tracing the materials reported here, some of the 1940s and 1950s portion is more representative than complete. Debates were not held every year and finding the topic debated was all but impossible.

Across the years there remain blank spots yet to be discovered. Events can partially explain lapses, for example, there appears to be some years that the College did not inform the press in a timely manner. The editors of college or city publications from time to time had different agendas. Occasionally, more events of higher interest (politics and sports, in particular) relegated debates to the back pages and by the 40s to extinction. Changing societal demographics and communication modes complicated tracing the materials reported here, some of the 1940s and 1950s portion is more representative than complete. Debates were not held every year and finding the topic debated was all but impossible.

The collection of debates presented here are primarily of two categories. The first is an extension of the earlier list of literary society public debates aimed at a public audience but in this case sponsored or cosponsored by the Wake Forest debate team. Some are an extension of the Intercollegiate Debate structure wherein Wake directly debates another school, often home or away, for an invited audience. In the Shirley era there were many intercollegiate debates, many of which were broadcast on radio across the state. In the more modern era, most debates were educational for high school audiences or more often aimed for a campus audience focused on local issues.

The second category involves hosting international debates, a regular feature of the debate program beginning in the 1950s. The Speech Association of America (now the National communication Association NCA) sponsored international debates. In the early years host institutions accommodated tours with British debating unions, including the Oxford Union. Franklin Shirley oversaw many debates with the British in the 1950s and 60s. For a portion of that time, he was the chair of the Committee on International Discussion and Debate (CIDD), a subunit of NCA responsible for arranging tours. US debaters also toured England in alternate years.

The British debaters anchored the CIDD’s efforts which continue to the present. Wake last hosted in 2013. Another prominent tour series is with Japanese debaters. Wake has hosted a number of Japanese teams, two individuals who returned to Wake Forest for their graduate work. Allan Louden also participated as a coach for the Japan and Baltic states tours, the latter of which he invented while serving as CIDD chair. Faculty member Michael Hazen has toured to Japan and the USSR, helping host two Soviet teams to campus.

Other genres this list reveals includes political debates, particularly mock presidential debates. Demonstration debates for local schools or for university events also became increasing common through the 1980s to 2010s.

Tracking public debates proved difficult in that they were not typically part of the official record of season’s results. This listing undoubtedly misses several events that took place on campus and in external venues.

1 Wake is hosted 29 International Debates the most frequent the British (16) and Japanese (5). Wake has also hosted Russia, Rwanda, The Baltic states (Estonia, Lithuania, and Latvia), and Balkan states (Romania and Bulgaria teams).

1961, Nov—This house favors the admission of communist China to the United Nations now.
England: Affirmative, Leon Brittan, & David Saunders; Wake: Negative, Susie Jones, Al Baker

International Debate -British – Wake Won.

The debate was not confined to the simple pros and cons of issue dispassionately stated, however.

After Baker’s constructive speech, Saunders observed that Baker was indeed a fine Southern orator.

“Southern oratory is like a mighty river,” he observed. “It flows—sometimes in mighty gushes, sometimes indelicate whirlpools and wavelets. But Mr. Baker speaks on the subject of Southern orators can also be like rivers—narrow at the head, but broad at the mouth.”

“Seductive” Reasoning

Gaskins replied in introducing the second speech of Miss Jones, whom he had previously described as the “originator and greatest living exponent of Seductive Reasoning.” That the Cambridge team might well appreciate certain aspects of broadness on the Wake Forest team.

“Indeed, Miss Jones shows a certain broadness in many pleasing places,” said Gaskins.

The audience laughed uproariously for several minutes. Old Gold & Black, November 20, 1961. (The authors are aware of the inappropriateness of the remarks, but include as an illustration of the tenor of the times)

WAKE FOREST’S ORATORICAL TRADITION:
Senior Orations, Anniversary Day, Society Day, & Commencement
1835-2021

The single most important contribution to the ethos of sociocultural communication in nineteenth-century America was oratory as practiced in the home, the school, and the community. By nourishing a deliberative within a directly experienced speech community, oratory established the very conditions that John Dewey, in The Public and Its Problems, identified as essential to democracy.1

This entry provides a more complete accounting of Public Orations at Wake Forest than previously available. Over a century and half, four primary settings dominated this influential Wake public voice. Faculty-required Senior Orations initially dominated, followed closely and often in tandem with Commencement Senior Orators. For multiple decades, before hosting responsibilities became too burdensome, public oratory was under the full purview of the literary societies. Before appropriation and handoff, the Societies managed Anniversary Day, later augmented by Society Day. These special occasions were the featured intellectual and social events of the fall and spring season, inviting alumni and the State’s elite (as well as women from Meredith and Oxford) to the campus for oratories, debates, and celebration.

Anniversary Day, in due course, becomes Founders Day, when the member-depleted societies found it difficult to finance. Although the societies continued to determine presenters for years, with their blessing the holidays largely moved to administrative control.

Orations have endured in Wake Forest culture. The larger story of the Literary Societies and oratory is told in Volume 1 of the Debate History set. The nature of topics, purpose, evolution, and insightful/amusing stories surrounding the oratories are to be found there.

Sources that provided the majority of the information included here was found in Wake Forest publications: Commencement programs, The Wake Forest Student, Howler, and the Old Gold & Black student newspaper, and importantly augmented externally through newspapers.com (primary source for historical newspapers) and varied publications including the Biblical Recorder, The Dean’s office provided modern-day updates.

The utility of these primary sources varied dependent on the era examined. The most difficult years to access were the 1940s and 1950s. During this timeframe, the Literary Societies faded, and alternative activities dominated. The erosion of accessible source information begins earlier in the 1930s, correlated with the move from an on-campus orientation to intercollegiate debate competitions. For these three decades the membership of the traveling team and the Literary Societies largely overlapped. Increasingly across time the competitive results, winning and losing, proved more viable than the gradually waning societies.

An unfortunate result is that complete data may not exist. When data could not be found—an oration author and subject—it is left blank in this document.

In most instances various sources agreed on speakers and topic, but not always. In perhaps 30 cases newspapers would supply different information, at times, distinct from Wake Forest publications. On occasion the Wake Forest publications contradicted. Memory is to some degree reinvented (e.g., Howler) or presented “too quickly” (Newspapers) resulting in inaccuracies. Contradictions were resolved, when possible, by the greater consensus or the most contemporaneous observation of the event. Often bordering evidence provided clues that favored one source. Gathering of this information is also susceptible to its own mistakes but hopefully represents the most accurate and complete compilation to date.

Some of these materials were gathered by Dean Mullen’s office in 1977. They consulted materials from Dr. G. W. Paschal’s books, History of Wake Forest College, Volumes I, II, and III (1834-1943); from newspaper clippings in the Office of Communications and the Library; from Faculty Minutes; Bulletins for Wake Forest College; from records in the Baptist Book Collection.

The focal point of this reporting is the intersect of literary societies and oratories, not limited to the idea of “Senior Orations” as we might recognize them today. Consequently, the data reflects major public oratory events that went beyond “senior speaking” or senior Commencement addresses. The societies for nearly a century, managed and sponsored Anniversary and Society Day, celebrated venues for public oratory.

Of course, across this expansive time the nature of the events, their popularity, their importance, their conduct, and even their naming “renewed.” Where dates can be determined those shifts are noted below in the timeline. As much as possible the type of occasion for the oration is also indicated in a manner that reflects how the event was branded at the time.

2 Dockery and Childers oratories did not have a formal title, Archivist with ZSR Library suggested these titles based on content.
3 Much like the decades of civil war celebratory oratories Childer’s speech celebrates the virtues of the revolutionary government. This follows, in part, by the occasion, Independence Day.

Commencement Orators

All members of the senior class were expected to speak, unless excused by the faculty in the early years. In the early 1880’s the number of speakers was fixed at ten; others in the class wrote a thesis. 1869-1972 there were four Senior Speaking events a year, in the fall October & December, and Spring March & April. After the introduction of a debate on Anniversary Day there was one, April.

In this earlier era outside professionals – typically politician or a Baptist theologian – presented an invited address before the Literary Societies.

5 1853 and earlier Student Speeches presented at commencement appear to be declamations.
6 The speakers in many cases were not Seniors.
7 1886 Wake Forest Catalog, p. 27, SENIOR SPEECHES AND THESIS.
8 All Candidates For Regular College degrees are required to deliver four original addresses of not less than 1000 words each, or submit to the Faculty, and lien thereof, an equal number of original theses of not less than 2000 words each; provided that, by this substitution, the number of addresses on any occasion shall not be less than eight, nor shall they be more than 12. Anniversary addresses may be submitted as thesis, subject to the foregoing regulations.
“From 1862 to 1868 there was a break in the anniversaries. Twas’ during those long, sad years when the College was suspended on account of the war. Her sons left the contest of oratory debate for their Societies glory to enter those of war and blood for their countries honor.” TheWake Forest Student, March 1892, p. 193-194.

12 Yes, that W. L. Poteat, future President of Wake Forest College (1905–1927). A descriptor of a section of his speech, "the speaker describes the battles of the powers of good and evil, of truth and error, of exalting pretensions of nature and God given conscience…. The battle which the man fights on the margins of the sea, with home behind in danger and the heathen front of him, is striking in his sublimity, and its issues reached out into eternity." The Observer (Raleigh), February 25, 1877, p.3.
Edgar Estes Folk – Valedictory

‘The position of “anniversary orator” is one much coveted, as it is considered the highest honor within the gift of the societies.” News and Observer, February 13, 1887. The reporter described Carlyle’s oratory “The Lost Cause” as “… It is to be regretted that the subject was somewhat trite, yet it is one which will always be appreciated by a Southern audience, and one particularly fitted to bring out the pathos and poetry of the speaker.”

1889
‘…an excellent address in reading as well as in hearing, for the delivery of which he took nearly half an hour, audaciously relieving his tendency to hoarseness with sips now and then from one or another of two glasses, one containing a colorless fluid, the other red wine. Those who heard the speech will never forget it, nor the speaker.” The speech can be found in The Wake Forest Student, p. 505, July 1890.

‘The contests were close and spirited and the successful contestants may well be proud of their victory.” The State Chronicle (Raleigh), May 7, 1890.

Gov. Aycock was present. After the oratories and music, "the audience with one voice called for Aycock, who responded in a very happy speech. He promised to do all in his power for public education."

The Morning Post (Raleigh), February 17

The Raleigh Times, February 15, 1900, p. 1, list these orators as speaking in 1900, not 1901. Surrounding evidence would suggest as they appear here.

Until 1901 the Salutatory and Valedictory students gave a speech as well as the orators, on occasion some did both.

CLAUD E. W. MURPHY, A.B., Phi.
Savannah, Ga.

"To do a deed in the cause
And to win in the race—
For the world and every one."

Second Marshal, Anniversary; 99th Engineer; North Carolina Infantry; Commissioned, 90; Alumnum, Wake Forest University, 1927; Manager Track Team. The New World, Atlanta University, 1919; Secretary Max Medical Corps, Phi Delta, 1923; Ranger, 1923-24; Commencement Speaker, 1916.

W. W. Walker – The Problem of the City

When he goes through his paces at sports in a fast debut and pulls up his big football the last while up against twelve years, his name sounds down to deep and his large eyes broader than the ancient weasels of war. There is magic in it! You are musticed by the drama and taurant, you feel pulses pumping up your heart, you feel a thrill. When he chucks off his forest dignity and grasps the助力 pole, you may look out, for he won the state-wide Championship in 1909 and is determined to kick你需要的 best. He is the smallest little fellow you ever saw, to play the role of a leader. But he is the most effective, and he is the truest, and the best, and the fairest. He is a great man, and his name is Walker, and he is a mighty, mighty, mighty man.

The Durham Morning Herald, November 25, 1922, p. 4, said that Society Day opened homecoming week, the first time Wake Forest held a homecoming. Society Day was scheduled for November 1 but was moved until November 25 as “part of” homecoming. The tablet commemorating the “flying Parson” Maynard was dedicated (see Society Day chapter).

In 1923 the faculty voted as follows: “Nominations for Senior Speakers shall be made to the Faculty on the third Monday in April by a standing committee of the Faculty from those who have (a) submitted in writing a proposed address by the first Monday in April and (b) have spoken satisfactorily either before the committee or on some public occasion in College. The faculty will select four Senior Speakers on the third Monday in April. Senior Speakers shall present their commencement addresses to the Faculty committee for approval by May 25. The President of the College shall be a member of the committee.”

The above resolution was amended to limit Commencement speeches of the senior class representatives to one thousand words and to empower the President to appoint the Committee (Standing Committee on Commencement Addresses). [In other years it was called the Committee on Senior Orators.] Operative until 1937.

Resolution passed by both Literary Societies abolishing Anniversary Day and substituting it for Founder’s Day.

This year Society Day and Anniversary Day – previously red letter days of the year for the organizations – will be combined in the program arranged for only one day. The need for curtailing the expense to the members necessitated the combining of these two events.” Asheville Citizen Times, October 10, 1924, p. 8.

In 1926 President Poteat provided the Anniversary Day address and some thought appropriated the event to more administrative purposes. After Poteat provided a "review of Wake Forest activities during the past year, the main evening speaker was an invited outside orator, Dr. S. H. Templeman, Pastor, 1st Baptist of Elizabeth City, who shared the stage with the Society orators. The Charlotte News (February 5, 1926, p. 2) reported, "both afternoon and evening exercises, though very poorly attended by students, were about par for Anniversary Day programs here." Of course, the more sparsely attendance was a sign of the future for "public" literary society presentations.

46 Ms. Easley must not have reached the final round. Two years before women could officially enroll. Nancy Easley won the Society Day Oratory in 1944, “Miss Nancy Easley, daughter of Dr. J. A. Easley of the college religion department, was chosen as Eu president during the spring elections, thus becoming the first woman to hold a literary society presidency in the history of the school. Women were first admitted to Wake in 1942.

47 Two sources list different winners, Howler said Murphy won, a newspaper reported Slaton the victor.

48 During this period the oratories were part of an eight-event contest between the two societies that took place over four days, including with a Thursday evening banquet. The Britt-Davis contest took place on the first night during regular chapel.

49 Literary Society Metals were presented before oratories went presented to the public in 1854, continuing until the late 50s. This compilation did not attempt to record all the metal awards, the ones listed here serve as an example.

55 Senior Colloquium Program in 2010 and 2011 (perhaps more) were held at Graylyn with a dinner following.
The Wake Forest debate program has benefited from institutional investment in coaching. Just short of the first hundred years “coaching” was primarily composed of faculty members serving as advisors for the literary societies. The records reflect that the literary societies were largely self-administered and self-funded, governed by students who cared deeply for debating and their independence. The faculty were resources but rarely hands-on. After the turn of the century when former Society members matured to faculty status several were supportive in judging contests and addressing Society gatherings. G. W. Paschal (Wake’s Historian), H. B. Jones (of 1909 Randolph-Macon Debate fame) and President W. L. Poteat were among those most heavily involved.

The informal relationships started to change in the early 1930s when Wake Forest began tournament debating. Intercollegiate Debates, one-on-one school programs, dominated the Wake Forest external debate in the decade of the 1920s and continued strong through the 1930s, but tournament participation accelerated and took precedence. As one might expect the Intercollegiate debate and tournament debaters were nearly always the same students.

The increased emphasis on tournament debating led to increased roles and responsibilities for the faculty members involved. Faculty began to shepherd Wake Debaters on multi-day trips to places as far away as Wichita, Kansas, as in first coach Quisenberry’s 1930 “4,000 miles, 98 driving hours” odyssey.

The South was a little slower in moving to tournaments than Midwest and Northeast schools, likely due in part to resources, geography, and travel availability. These early tournaments coincided with the professionalization of the field of speech with the creation of the Speech Teachers Association (which would become the National Communication Association) in 1914. A cursory review of the first volume of the first journal published by the association, the Quarterly Journal of Public Speaking, highlights the scholarly conversations about the evolving roles of faculty coaches in intercollegiate debates. Legendary University of Pittsburgh Debate Coach, Frank Lane, began his 1915 essay, “Faculty Help in Intercollegiate Debate Contests,” by asking “how much help should an instructor of public speaking give a student preparing for an Intercollegiate contest?”

Undoubtedly, the early Wake coaches wrestle with the responsibility of coach versus debater in generating arguments. One may assume that the general view was coaches were more administrators than generators of arguments. The issue still is very much up for debate today but signals that faculty members were shifting from sponsors to coaches in ways that extended beyond the earlier more limited title of “sponsor.”

At Wake Forest, the transition from sponsor to coach is not completely clear and reflects the broader evolution in role that Lane references. As early as 1898, G. W. Paschal, the author of the early histories of Wake Forest University, is said to have been advising debaters for their competitions. He was officially the faculty sponsor of Pi Kappa Delta and was also described as a “coach” by the students. Similarly, Hubert McNeill Poteat was professor of Latin that did not have the formal title debate coach, but his former students that were debaters remarked that he “gave us considerable counseling regarding arguments in pronouncement of words.”

The first official person to have the title “Debate Coach” was Lewis Aycock who served in the role from 1928 to 1930 and then again from 1941 to 1948. In Aycock’s first year the debate team engaged in 18 intercollegiate debates including Emory University, William and Mary, and the University of Florida, but not yet a tournament.

From Aycock until today, there have been 16 people that have served as the Director of Debate for Wake Debate (including interim positions). The timeline reflects that the university remained committed to the debate program as several people served in interim positions when directors passed away unexpectedly, as was the case with J. Rice Quietenberry and Ross Smith, or left to complete graduate work like Franklin R. Shirley, Zon Robinson, and Allan Louden, or again for Robinson with his mysterious disappearance in World War II.

When Allan Louden left to complete his PhD at the University of Southern California, the communication department tapped David Williams as interim, and the year before his returning elevated MA student and Wake Debate alum Ross Smith to serve as the interim Coach. When Dr. Louden returned his leave of absence in 1985, the university agreed to retain Ross Smith as the Head Coach.

From 1985 through 2001, the debate program operated with the model of Allan Louden as the Director of Debate and Ross Smith as the Head Coach. In 2001, the university agreed to hire J.P. Lacy as the Associate Head Coach. From 2001 until today, the debate program has been administered by a Director of Debate, a Head Coach, and an Associate Head Coach. As the squad has been administered by coaches, much of the coaching has additionally been done by the graduate assistant debate coaches, a tradition that goes back to the founding of the Communication MA program in 1970.

A key part of the success of Wake Debate has been the Graduate Assistant Coaches that have coached debate while working towards a master’s degree in Communication. The numbers of Graduate Assistants have varied from year to year, but in total there have been 129 Graduate Assistant Coaches. The Graduate Assistant Coaches have served in a huge variety of roles from producing research to judging practice debates at home and at tournaments to helping administer the tournaments’ host of logistics (and so much more than we can list here).

Much of the success of Wake Forest debate can be attributed to the longevity associated with the faculty serving as Directors and Head Coaches alongside the consistent set of new ideas that are introduced by the Graduate Assistant Coaches. In the post-World War II era alone, Franklin Shirley and Allan Louden served a cumulative forty-six years with Ross Smith serving an additional twenty-three years as Head Coach and an additional two years as director. The greatest periods of uncertainty in Wake Debate history have been in times where the institution struggled to recruit and retain people for coaching positions. The longevity at the top has helped grow institutional support while the Graduate Assistant Coaches have helped make sure that the program has fresh ideas year in and year out.

By 2019, the debate team had expanded in argumentative scope to advise the team hiring Contract Coaches to supplement the Graduate Assistant Coaches. The Contract Coaches help with many of the same tasks as the Graduate Assistant Coaches without the daily academic demands of the graduate program. Several of the Contract Coaches were and are Wake Debate alums. The Contract Coaches have helped the debate program to diversify argument styles as these coaches are hired for their expertise in a particular argument area.

In 2021, the Director of Debate position was supported by an endowment to honor John Kevin Medica. John Medica was an alum of the business school and was serving as a Wake Forest Board of Trustee member when he passed away in 2017. His wife Megan Salzman Medica chose to honor John’s legacy with a five-million-dollar endowment for the debate program that included naming the Director of Debate position after John Kevin Medica.
Timeline of Wake Forest Debate Directors and Coaches

1928-1930 – Lewis Aycock, first to have the official title of “Debate Coach.”
1930-1936 – J. Rice Quisenberry – Debate Coach
1936 – George E. Copple – fills in with the passing of Quisenberry for the remainder of the year.
1936-1938 – Zon Robinson – Debate Coach 1936-38
1938-1940 – George E. Copple interim – Robinson on leave to finish his M.A.
1940-1941 – Zon Robinson – Debate Coach
1941-1948 – Lewis Aycock – Debate Coach
1948-1953 – Franklin R. Shirley – Director of Debate
1953-1954 – Carol O’Dohan interim Director of Debate – Shirley on leave to finish Ph.D.
1954-1967 – Franklin R. Shirley – Director of Debate
1967-1972 – Mervyn Hayes – Director of Debate
1972-1975 – A. Tennyson Williams – Director of Debate
1975-1977 – Fred McClain – Interim Director of Debate
1977-1982 – Allan Louden – Director of Debate
1982-1984 – David Cratis Williams – Interim Director of Debate - Louden leave to finish Ph.D.
1984-1985 – Michael Hayes – Interim Director of Debate - Louden on leave to finish Ph.D.

3 This factual is not verified internally. The reference was said in an article in the Twin City Sentinel February 4, 1963. It is probable that Aycock was not thought of as “the coach” until his second stint leading the program in 1941.

The aim of this entry (and the previous for Euzelians) is not to provide a detailed analysis of the topics, as that is reserved to a former volume in this series. The goal here is to provide as comprehensive a listing of topics debated as possible. A few observations nonetheless are helpful here at the guided reading through the topics.

Between 1884 and 1902 the Eus and Phis debated the topic “Was Elizabeth right in executing Mary Queen of Scots? “more than 75 times. Between 1837 to 1895 they debated, over 90 times, a variety of impacts of Napoleon’s historical imprint. The repetition of topics is illustrative of the process utilized in choosing society debates. For many decades, the societies had a “Query Book” from which the next weeks’ discussion were assigned. Topics were recycled for numerous reasons. This regularization eased the process making it more predictable preparing upcoming debates. Also, it reflects a fascination with classical history, likely an outgrowth of their academic studies, and an attempt to intentionally avoid contemporary controversies. Finally, it reflects that the training in this period emphasized speech training rather than argumentative analysis.

In the initial years topics were largely confined to literary or philosophical inquiries. Despite the recycling and level of abstraction, numerous debates did take place examining contemporary issues. Entry 3 in this section “Historical Resolutions About Race, Civil War, Reconstruction, & Immigration” is an example of detailed and continued discussion of issues impacting economics.

and politics. In the 1840s and 1850s education held sway, an emphasis the continued throughout1.
In this period the Phis considered a dozen times, “Is the education of females as much entitled to the consideration of our enlightened people as much as males?”

Increasingly, after the turn of the century, the exposition of argument and analysis took the foreground with bloviated oratory more and more out of fashion. Especially, although not exclusively, in the twenty century the societies addressed issues of gender (“The right to vote should not be restricted on account of sex equality”), foreign policy, and on occasion campus specific policies.

Constructing the topic list, of course has its own problematic aspects. Most of the years are student entered, cursive writing, which fortunately was much better trained in pre-typewriters days. Topics were not always recorded, sometimes the topic would be announced two weeks ahead but not actually be debated. The Recording Secretaries, an important position in the societies, were amazingly faithful in keeping complete records, less so in noting decisions. Faithful recording of topics generally held up for more than a century. When available debate’s decisions, an informal measure of attendance and society appeal, are provided. For a period after 1907, panels of three judges rendered decisions which do not reflect attendance. They are presented in the 2-1, 1-2 etc. format.

Sometimes it was difficult to identify when a debate took place. As the Wake’s enrollment increased and before mandatory Society enrollment ended in 1922, multiple sections might debate the same topic. The record below indicates repeated topics to the extent possible. Decisions are also presented when possible in the language of the societies minutes, resulting from era to era different decision presentations. This was not true for the Euzelian pre-civil war topics gathered by Elizabeth Carroll before this project where decisions were normalized (See Euzelian Topics entry.)

Topics give out in the 40s and 50. Fewer were debated routinely as meeting programs diversified. They became more as an entertaining inquiry or a “hot-topics” focus on campus life.

On July 5th, 1835 the Phis debated the topic “It is probable that the United States will remain a Republican government for a century to come?” Reading through the topics one is reminded “everything old is new again.”

1 Well over a hundred topic dealt with aspects of Education, from should the State provide free elementary and secondary schools to the merger of Methodist and Wake Forest Colleges. A few topics were directed to curriculum and other college choices as with a 1930 topic, “Wake Forest College should be made a co-educational institution.” It is also not surprising that students in educational setting would turn to topics affecting their lives.

EUZELIAN LITERARY SOCIETY DEBATE TOPICS 1835-1960

The Euzelian list of topics complements the previous entry for the Philomathesian society. The Eus were more intentional in avoiding controversy with political topics than were the Phis. This became less the case after the turn-of-the-century and differences were basically gone by the turn of the century. The issues addressed were similar with both societies. Some often-repeated topics were, however, exclusive to a given society.

On occasion a joint debate would be held but those arrangements were not easy to set up. They became more common in the new century but joint debates did happen in 1800s. For example, the May 19, 1874 Phi minutes spoke of a joint appearance in the – societies on “Monday night preceding the commencement of a joint debate in the College Chapel, “The nature which shall be comic for the entertainment of the public.” A resolution was offered and debated in an earlier 1947 March meeting illustrates the level of detail of the care taken with issues. We did not find evidence

EUZELIAN HALL 1887

1 1874 – Minutes Euzelian, March 7, motion by A. L. Dixon – Rules for Joint Debate

Resolved that we meet in joint debate with the Philomathesian Society four times a session. The first meeting to be held on the first Friday night in October, the second on the first Friday night in December, the third on the first Friday night in March, the fourth of the first Friday night in May, and that it be governed by the following laws.

I. The meeting shall be held in the chapel.

II. One half of the member of both societies shall constitute a quorum.
that either the resolution passed or the regularized debates took place. There was a joint debate two years later in 1876.\(^2\)

The Euzelian collection remains incomplete with three time periods yet to be extracted from the societies minutes\(^3\). When time and resources allow, they will be added. The expectation is the topics of three periods will reflect consistency with the Phis and Eu's own topic selection represented here. Elizabeth Carroll, prior to this project, compiled the Eu topics from the societies founding until disbursement for the Civil War and appear in the ZSR Archives. Chris Miller, a former communication graduate student deserves credit for compiling many of the Euzelian topics.

III. The officers shall be the President, vice president, secretary and the two disputants to be elected by the Societies in the regular session whose term of office shall continue to meetings.

IV. The President for the term commencing October 1874 shall be elected by the Philomathian Society and Vice Pres. by the Euzelian Society. The president for the term commencing March 1875 shall be elected by the Euzelian Society and Vice Pres. by the Philomathian Society and secretary by the Philomathian society, thus alternating for all succeeding terms. Each society shall elect a disputant.

V. It shall be the duty of the president to preside at the meeting of the society, preserve order, and enforce Mill's parliamentary rules.

VI. It shall also be the president's duty to appoint a committee of four, two from each society at the beginning of each term whose duty shall be to solicit queries for discussion and to report at each meeting the query for the next meeting. He shall also appoint at each meeting the members, five from each society to open the discussion of succeeding debates. In the division of speakers he shall not appoint more than three members of each society on the same side. After those appointed have finished speaking, the question shall then be open to the miscellaneous discussion, the silent members having the preference. He shall also at the beginning of each term appoint a doorkeeper to serve during his term.

VII. It shall be the duties of the vice president to preside in the presence of the absent officer.

VIII. It shall be the duty of the secretary to record all proceedings of society to be read at each succeeding meeting.

IX. It shall be the duty of each disputant to note all violations of the laws of his respective society and report the same to his Society in regular sessions.

X. No member shall speak more than twice on any question limiting both speeches to ten minutes each.

XII. Each society shall bear is proportional part of all expenses incurred.

XI. Done but active members and honorary members of both Societies shall be admitted to the meeting.

X. No member shall speak more than twice on any question limiting both speeches to ten minutes each.

VIII. It shall be the duty of the president to appoint a committee of four, two from each society at the beginning of each term whose duty shall be to solicit queries for discussion and to report at each meeting the query for the next meeting. He shall also appoint at each meeting the members, five from each society to open the discussion of succeeding debates. In the division of speakers he shall not appoint more than three members of each society on the same side. HISTORICAL RESOLUTIONS REGARDING RACE, CIVIL WAR, RECONSTRUCTION, & IMMIGRATION

This section provides a list of the topics considering race, debated by the literary societies during their weekly meetings in Wake Forest’s first 70 years. They unfold from Wake Forest’s founding to shortly after the turn of the new century. The resolutions expose how race and its repercussions were considered in the Wake community. Reading the topics shows an evolution from more muted discussions, changing in tone and hostility that paralleled national politics. These materials are provided here as a reference point, a greater exposition on these topics is undertaken in the former volume of the Wake Debate history series.

Wake Forest, geographically isolated, was hardly insulated from the pressures and politics of the society beyond its wall. The societies were imbued with politics and social concerns, staying intentionally informed. The topics on race, up to and following the Civil War, reflect the issues then existent in society.

In the early years after the school’s founding, deliberations were more philosophical, pondering whether the institution of slavery was tenable, desirable, and consistent with democratic principles. Solutions, while routinely discussed, did not typically imagine a social order absent the institution of slavery.

The tone of the topics darkened, as did national politics through the Missouri compromise and Kansas–Nebraska Act, echoing the unraveling of national consensus.

Before the War, several topics concerned the “Indian” question, asking for comparison between suffering, policy fairness, and the awkward realities of indigenous and enslaved peoples. After the war, argument shifted to discussions assessing the desirability of secession, reconstruction, and who should vote. Topics acknowledge that the institution of slavery had ended but were less generous in seeing the result as an enhanced South. The ideas were debated but the votes and topics suggest more a search for justifications of the Civil War and observance of regional nobility than embracing views outside of the Southern tradition.
The post-Civil War discussions, from reconstruction to beginning of the 1900s were, by present standards, dismissive of the “Negro Problem.” The tone was more economic advancement, reinventing the “New South.” A “Phoenix rising from the ashes” might peripherally offer improvements in the ‘Black man’ circumstance but focused on White society. Euzelians were less likely to discuss current and societal issues of the day, deciding after the Civil War to restrain resolutions to philosophical, historical questions.

Over time, there were hints of less defensiveness and more emphasis on solutions than recrimination. The first decade of the 1900s shows a segue in the topics which began looking for solutions to the segregated, tiered society, with education as the practical end of the “race problem.” The underlying assumptions nonetheless remained cynically racist.

Two sections are provided at the end of this collection of topics. The first indicates debates on race that were presented as full public debates, at Anniversary Day, Society Day, and a commencement when much of the State’s elite were gathered in the Chapel. The rhetoric of these events was cruelly racist and are discussed in depth in the earlier book.

The last section present resolutions considering the race laced topic of immigration. Debated more after the Civil War until the turn of the century, the tension resolved around finding post–slavery labor, juxtaposed with suspicion of “foreigners.”

Speakers debated the question for an Affirmative and one on the Negative. Speakers addressed the assembly while waiting for the judges then returned and decision to the question. The metal was awarded to Mr. T. B. Ashcroft.
Topic selection became the province of the Pi Kappa Delta National Honorary when they initiated a national topic at their biennial convention in 1921. Pi Kappa Delta, still relatively small, had member schools who wished to debate the same topic, making predictable regional and national convocations. The honorary grew rapidly and having more members controlled more tournaments than other honoraries which were founded shortly after Pi Kappa Delta. To attend tournaments most schools considered it necessary to debate the Pi Kappa Delta topic.¹

Rival organizations complained about the process and wording but were unable to dethrone Pi Kappa Delta. By 1934, under the burden of compiling votes for the topic, Pi Kappa Delta was ready for a new model. Member schools also were complaining that the honorary had never considered “that in selecting a honorary resolution it was selecting a ‘national question,’ presumably not the intent. Additionally, Pi Kappa Delta’s biennial convention, meeting every other year, often resulted in disorganization as to which topic to debate in the off years.”²

A consensus slowly formed that a more representative, predictable selection process would be needed.

In 1937 Pi Kap’s main competing honorary, Delta Sigma Rho, in their publication, The Gavel, editorialized “Selecting an official question is not all beer and skittles. It means a lot of work…” The real point was that while Pi Kappa Delta might be in control, other organization should be represented. Voices within Pi Kappa Delta agreed, and they started to move down that path. By 1942 motions to establish a shared topic selection process were passed.

With the National Committee on Intercollegiate Debate and Discussion Activities conducting the central meeting, “for the first time the four forensic societies⁴, with an appointee of NATS (National Association of Teachers of Speech) representing the unaffiliated schools, joined to select a truly national debate proposition, with every school having an opportunity to vote on the selection of the question they would later debate. The newly created American Forensic Association (AFA) was added to the selection committee in 1949.

Early on after joining the selection process the AFA proposed taking over and regularizing the selection process. This created a firestorm from the other constituent organizations, particularly Pi Kappa Delta which had managed national topics for quarter century. Nonetheless over time organizational hubris gave way to practical matters and topic selection currently resides with the NDT Tournament Committee, part of the AFA. Technically the NDT Committee selects a topic for the one 8 The 2006 – 2007 topic is the first merged topic of the NDT and CEDA. The Cross-Examination Association had intentionally maintained a separate debate topic from the NDT since its inception, and for much of his history had two topics one for each semester. The choice was pedagogical and provincial. At the time CEDA was the fastest expanding national debate organization. Years earlier the NDT trying to jumpstart a merger, or depending on your point of view a hostile takeover, had adopted the CEDA topic, to which CEDA responded by changing their topic, communicating they would continue to do so as long as necessary.

Resolved: The United States should significantly reduce its military presence in one or more of the following: the Arab states of the Persian Gulf, the Greater Horn of Africa, Northeast Asia.

2016–2017

Resolved: The United States Federal Government should establish a domestic climate policy, including at least substantially increasing restrictions on private sector emissions of greenhouse gases in the United States.

2017–2018

Resolved: The United States Federal Government should establish national health insurance in the United States.

2018–2019

Resolved: The United States Federal Government should substantially increase statutory and/or judicial restrictions on the executive power of the President of the United States in one or more of the following areas:

- Authority to conduct first-use nuclear strikes;
- Congressionally delegated trade power;
- Exit from congressional-executive agreements and Article II treaties;
- Judicial deference to all or nearly all federal administrative agency interpretations of statutes and/or regulations;
- The bulk incidental collection of all or nearly all foreign intelligence information on United States persons without a warrant.
2019–2020
Resolved: The United States Federal Government should establish a national space policy substantially increasing its international space cooperation with the People’s Republic of China and/or the Russian Federation in one or more of the following areas:

- arms control of space weapons;
- exchange and management of space situational awareness information;
- joint human spaceflight for deep space exploration;
- planetary defense;
- space traffic management;
- space-based solar power.

FINAL FOUR TOURNAMENT APPEARANCES
1929–2022

The following record lists Wake Forest Debate teams that reached the semifinals or finals of intercollegiate tournaments. A list, so defined, necessarily misses many competitors integral to Wake Debate history. Scores of teams have excelled competitively, for example, reaching the quarterfinals of the most rigorous tournaments, yet did not break through to a semifinal debate. Restricting the record to teams reaching semifinals or better keeps the list manageable. It also leaves out hundreds of superior efforts, important parts of Wake’s debate legacy.¹

As with most historical listings, locating Wake winners is an inexact task. Record keeping varied from era to era and coach to coach. Locating results was often dependent on the sometimes excellent and sometimes capricious coverage in the Old Gold & Black, for example. The task is further complicated by not being able to define precisely when “tournaments” began, knowing what four team divisions represented for the individuals involved, and tournaments changing names and/or locations. We also expect there are mistakes in news coverage and coaches’ recordings. Nonetheless, the list of past winners is indeed impressive, reflecting trends and growth of the program over the decades.

Around 600 tournaments are represented in which Wake Debaters were speaking late in a tournament. Wake attended many more tournaments across the nearly eight decades than reported here, some with more modest results, some with superior results but not with a 3rd place or better.

A listing of the ALL-TIME WINNERS in Wake Debate is also provided. While historically interesting, any such list suffers from apples to oranges comparison limitations. The era in which one debated, partner availability, number of years debated, and the number of tournaments to which the squad traveled all contribute to the rankings being not fully commensurate. Trophies also vary substantially on the level of competition represented.

There are, as you would expect, many notable names with seven and fewer placements, some who were the very core of a squad’s cohesion or identity. Any lists have parameters.

The All-Times Honors Appearances nonetheless reveal amazing career achievements. Names on this register were key players of their era. Each a hero for an epoch of Wake debate.

2 Some tournaments do not have 1st, 2nd, or 3rd results. Pi Kappa Delta Nationals, for example, provides superiors and excellence, often representing undefeated records. It defies to place them one, two, three, it is reasonable to consider them as similar level.

HISTORICAL WIN/LOSS RECORDS

Lists which range across one hundred and fifty years inherently include incommensurate comparisons. In early 20th century decision debates were the evening’s entertainment with another school. In the 1920s and 1930s Intercollegiate debates continued as tournaments initiated adding to a confusion of what merits inclusion. Public debates were increasingly nondecision affairs during this timeframe complicating an accurate count. Much of the time coaches’ records or Howler yearbook allowed that distinction to be made, but not always.

In addition, the availability of records fluctuates, usually dependent on whether the director or interim director had a penchant for record-keeping. There are several seasons in which it is impossible to provide a numerical accounting. However, beginning in 1968 to the present, the win/loss data is nearly complete and verified.

An added factor that makes for apple and oranges comparisons is that the makeup of squads differs markedly. A team that carries two first-round teams without younger debaters would produce different win/loss ratio than a squad with many novice teams. Focusing on the total debates one gets a sense of the programs choices and scale of participation. The totals also speak to the ease and availability of debate opportunities as well as the program’s philosophy across directors.

2 Wake Forest Alumni News, February 1932 recorded: “Last year Wake Forest debate team engaged in twenty-four debates. Eighteen of these, including four debates between Wake Forest freshmen and junior college men, were decision contests of which 50 per cent were won. Of all varsity debates Wake Forest won about 65 per cent, of varsity debate with team composed of men, 75 per cent and of varsity contests with North Carolina team, 100 per cent.”

3 First yr. to participate in 4 tournaments as well as public debates.

4 Also participated in 29 no-decision public debates.

5 Tournament debates. According to a Report released by Zon Robinson the “team traveled 3623 miles and participated in Twenty-four speech contests and ninety-one intercollegiate debates during the 1938–39 season.” Old Gold and Black, May 20, 1939. Robinson’s Annual report to the President was more specific. Wake “ninety-one inter-collegiate debates. Sixteen of the debates were home affairs, thirty-one were held at other colleges, and forty-four were engaged in at tournaments.”

6 Tournament debates. Cumulative years according to Aycock, the WWII years in which some travel was cancelled.

7 War years

8 Tournament debates. Cumulative years according to Aycock, the WWII years in which some travel was cancelled.

9 War years

10 Coach L. A. Aycock made a point to note that for two years running Wake was undefeated by any North Carolina school.

‘HALL OF FAME’

The Wake Forest “Hall of Fame” is a history of the modern era. Team debate awards were reestablished in the 1983 but existed before then. Rebuilding those entities defied archival retrieval. Parallel awards were presented in the 1960s and when those can be identified they are included.¹

Fragments of information indicate other awards, which were unable to be contextualized in this research. For example, a Mashburn Debate Metal, 1958 & 1959 – Stanley Jackman and the Tom Baker Award: 1972 - Keith Vaughn.

For many decades in the earlier Literary era there were “best debater” awards announced at commencement. For example, 1931: Most improved Metal – L. A. Howard. Tracking those was beyond the scope of this work, but examples can be found in Section II, Entry 3: Wake Forest’s Oratorical Tradition.

Most Valuable Debater

Franklin Shirley initiated the first Wake varsity invitational in 1956, the same year the new campus opened in Winston-Salem. 13 colleges attended. It is arguably now the dominant regular season collegiate tournament in the country, at least in the fall term and as measured by number of participating schools. The Shirley was ranked the “Best Regular Season Tournament of the Decade” for five decades running.

The Shirley Classic was not always known by that name. In Frank Shirley’s handwritten notes, the tournament is consistently referred to as the Dixie Classics Tournament, not the Dixie Classic as it generally referred to until 1983. The first time the tournament was referred to as “Classic” rather than “Classics” was 1964.

In 1983, the Dixie classic was officially renamed the Frank R. Shirley Dixie Classic Debate Tournament by Provost Wilson at the special honorary Shirley retirement banquet held during the tournament. For nine years this name endured, although the tournament remained casually referred to as the “Dixie.”

According to unofficial folklore Shirley named the tournament after the Dixie Classic Fair held annually in Wake’s newly adopted hometown but as likely an explanation was, as he often told attendees, he intended that the moniker reflects the “best in Southern Hospitality.”

1 A Friday bomb scare delayed two rounds of debating, but these were made up Friday night and Saturday morning. Teams were debating nuclear weapons.
Wake’s annual event, now over sixty-five years old, was renamed the Franklin R. Shirley Classic in 2003, dropping the label “Dixie.” The name change was appropriate and welcomed. One can never know for certain, but we trust that Franklin Shirley would have enthusiastically approved the name change.

Dr. Shirley served as the mayor of Winston-Salem from 1970 to 1977, exhibiting a political life that was characterized by one biographer as having faith that “public choices are highly important and that the private man and the public man are not separate entities but parts joined harmoniously by a sense of personal ethics and community justice.” His mayoral tenure was an administration of progressive principals and inclusive acts. As was his debate coaching.

Reading the names listed in this entry is akin to a Who’s Who in government, education, and private enterprise. More than a few of the Shirley alumni we have seen on TV, read their names in news articles, and have been enlightened by their academic research.

ROSS K. SMITH NATIONAL COACH OF THE YEAR AWARD

The original Coach of the Year Award was given annually at the grand Georgetown Thanksgiving tournament to the coach who had won the NDT the year before, or the next best coach in the rare event there had been a two-time winner. Everyone knew who it was to be by simple deduction. In 1965 Glenn Pelham at Emory—a coaching world giant—started a different award that recognized all coaches through the contributions of one coach.1

The award was voted on by Emory debaters and there was a spirited debate and election process to determine the winner. Mr. Pelham would give a speech about the inaugural recipient and require that candidates had the capacity to meet the standards set by the first choice: Annabel Dunham Hagood, Director of Forensics at the University of Alabama. She displayed four requisite characteristics Pelham argued that merited recognition: 1) a consistent record fielding nationally competitive teams, 2) a consistent record as a top judge, 3) contributions to the evolution of the debate field and 4) the intangible “taking debate outside itself.”

The Peachtree Coach of the Year Award was presented until the last Peachtree Tournament held at Emory in 1990. From 1985-1990 Emory fielded teams on the then very separate CEDA and NDT circuits, and the Coach of the Year Award debates became more heated. The Peachtree, following Emory’s growing demands of Urban Debate League work, withdrew as sponsor selecting the University of South Carolina to pick up the tournament dates and award. South Carolina was a CEDA school seeking to merge the two communities—and the Coach of the Year award was a draw for building an NDT division. South Carolina renamed the award in Glenn Pelham’s honor. As a Georgia Congressman and state court judge, Pelham also personified taking debate “outside itself.”

When South Carolina’s tournament ended in 2002, the award was moved to Wake Forest University—host of the 1st semester “nationals.” The award process changed from students voting to the Wake Coaches selecting initially then charged to the previous recipients voting on the recipient.

1 This history of the national coach of the year award draws heavily upon the dedication speech presented November 21, 2009 at Wake Forest University by Melissa Massey Wade, long-term Emory Director.

The NDT Coach of the Year award which recognizes the national winning coach, the James J. Unger Coaching Award, continues to date and is distinct from the award noted here.
A Ross Smith memorial was held at the 2009 Shirley Tournament where Melissa Wade proposed “that the current incarnation of the Peachtree Coach of the Year Award at Emory that became the Thomas Glenn Pelham Coach of the Year Award at South Carolina, the National Coach of the Year Award at Wake, become the Ross Smith Coach of the Year Award … most of all because Ross personifies the qualities that define those we honor in our coaches in this fabulous activity.”

In 2021 the Ross K. Smith National Coach of the Year selection responsibilities were moved to the Board of Trustees for the National Debate Tournament.

1929-1930 – Debate Council

1. College of Charleston.
2. William and Mary College.

Three unique periods are also reported: the pandemic Spanish flu, World War II, and pandemic Covid-19. Circumstance can dramatically alter if debates occur. In the Covid period virtual participation combined with fewer willing hosts reduced tournament attraction and availability. A squad attending any tournament was as easy as Internet hookup, but there seems to be more to debate than the competitive round.

SELECTED WAKE DEBATE TRAVEL SCHEDULES – 1918 TO THE PRESENT

The final entry in this compilation makes no attempt to provide comprehensive records but rather to amuse and provide a sense of how travel schedules have evolved. As one would anticipate tournament attendance adjusts incrementally to opportunity and capacity.

The first three entries were “Intercollegiate Debates” which featured two schools hosting an audience debate on home their home campus or a near metropolitan area. What began as a few outings gradually enlarged as tournaments became more readily available with improved travel. In the late 1950s and 1960s a sprinkling of air travel was added to long car trips. In the 1960s and 1970s the number of tournaments swelled, and a fully competitive program was on the road nearly every weekend, often to more than one tournament. The competitive program was on the road nearly every weekend, often to more than one tournament. The number of tournaments swelled, and a fully competitive program was on the road nearly every weekend, often to more than one tournament. The 1980s and 90s saw shifts in the proportion of regional travel to a more national orientation. In the 2000s national tournaments increasingly dominate travel availability and choice.
