Sheepskins outdated: WF to use imitations

MARGARET PERRY, Editor

Wake Forest students taking the Certified Public Accountant exam last May had the best single sitting passage rate in North Carolina for the past 15 years. The 70 percent national average was topped by Wake Forest University's participation in the recent exam, with 78 percent of the students passing.

A spokesperson for the Accounting Co. said that Wake Forest had one of the highest passing rates of students who were taking the CPA exam last year. The company also reported that Wake Forest had the highest percentage of students who were taking the exam for the first time.

On the other hand, WF students who did not take the exam had a passing rate of 45 percent. The university said that it was pleased with the results, but also acknowledged that there was still room for improvement.

Religious identity studied

There's much more to religious identity than simply wearing a cross or saying grace before dinner. "Religion is never something that is to be studied in a classroom," said Provost Edwin Christman. "People are religious in their everyday lives.""The idea that religion and spirituality can be practiced outside of the church is important," said Waters. "This allows students to explore their faith in a more personal and meaningful way."

There are many different ways to be religious. Some students find religion in their daily lives, such as通过 prayer or meditation. Others find it through their relationships with others, such as being part of a religious community or attending religious services. Still others find it through the study of religious texts, such as reading the Bible or the Quran.

Senior religion major George Waters agreed. "For me, religion has been deeply personal and meaningful," he said. "I've found a sense of community and belonging through my religious beliefs, and I've been able to explore my faith in a way that's meaningful to me."

Waters said that the university has taken steps to make religious life more accessible on campus, such as through the creation of new religious organizations and events. "There are a lot of opportunities to engage with religion on campus," Waters said. "I want to find Christianity at Wake Forest, and I think the university is doing a great job of making that happen."

The university also has a Student Development Office, which provides resources and support for students who are interested in exploring their religious identities. "The Student Development Office is a great resource for students who are interested in religion," Waters said. "They offer a lot of support and guidance, and they help students find ways to explore their faith on campus."
Students discuss stereotypes

Valerie Van Natta

A forum which included a group discussion on stereotypes in the Windows community on Friday at 6 p.m. Tuesday in the library featured

The psychological center, the Women's Residence Council, the Women's Issues Alliance, the Student Activities Office and the Student Government sponsored the meeting.

Cathy Jourdan and Mary Finlayson from the psychology center led a group discussion on what they believed to be the stereotypical division of women and men on campus. The men and women divided into separate groups and discussed what they thought were stereotypes of each gender.

The problem of division among the large group, the men concerned with their appearance, poor drivers, intelligent and foolish makers. The women said the men on campus are stereotyped as superficial, materialistic and intelligent. During the last part of the forum, groups united gathered to discuss what could be done to change stereotypes and end discrimination on campus.

The group of students felt if a person was a separate individual rather than a separate group with separate stereotypes would disband. They also said if the groups stereotyped men should not stereotype women and vice versa. The group members stated they would like to listen to one another.

Marianne Schubert from students feel are the stereotypes of the opposite sex. The forum, groups again gathered to discuss what could be done to change another on an individual stereotyped male or female. When they shared their thoughts, others were not in agreement. The forum included Cathy Jourdan and Mary Finlayson from the psychology center.

The Women's Residence Council fall committee will be held Monday and Tuesday from 8:15 p.m. in the Student Theater of the Student Fine Arts Center. Admission is free.

Any student-directed lab productions will be held Monday and Tuesday from 8:15 p.m. in the Student Theater of the Student Fine Arts Center.

FUNDRAISING: Capri Sizemore hospitality will be running a football from State to Wake Forest. Homecoming week, starting 8:15 p.m. Wednesday and ending Tuesday on the Student Fine Arts Center. All proceeds from the run will go to the Laura Scammel Memorial Research Fund. Five-Pacific designs will be taken.

FORMAL: The Women's Residence Council fall formal will be held Nov. 28 at Benton Convention Center. Entertainment will be provided by the Motion Pictures.

Marine Corps Marathon Washington attracts runners

Molly Helen Frederick

If you've ever tried to run a 26.2 mile race, you might not have a clue as to how to prepare for one. After two months of training, John DeTamble was not bad, but he was ready to mold his body for the next one. He had been running for the last mile, and the 18 mile pace was not easy.

Last week Dave and Bob Roberts led another group of students in an eight-mile road race. Roberts said, "If I want to run, I can do it. The only way I'll stop is myself." Roberts is as confident as ever. He has run the road every week. "I was not bad, I was running a routine," Roberts said. "I've had to keep training."

Taking the heat for tough choices

The Institutional Planning Committee has been presented with yet another difficult task. This time, the committee has been charged with the evaluation of the construction of new science, math, and business facilities. The committee must weigh the advantages of centralized science, math, and business facilities versus the decal which the department is currently using. Further, the committee will be asked to evaluate the recommendations on the matter of which department or departments should occupy the space once the new facilities are built. The committee will also be asked to recommend the location of the enlarged science, math, and business facilities in the college.

In evaluating the issue, the committee must balance the many options and questions that arise. The department currently using the space is considered to be a delicate one; it is one which a faculty committee should not be asked to judge.

Each department has its own unique character and requires a different treatment. Venturing too far into the unknown can be a daunting task. The facilitator of the construction of the new facilities should weigh the advantages of centralized science, math, and business facilities versus the decentralization of these departments. Further, the committee should evaluate the recommendations on the matter of which department or departments should occupy the space once the new facilities are built.

Language houses provide depth

Wake Forest's language houses provide a unique opportunity for students to immerse themselves in the culture and language of another country. The language houses differ from the traditional living arrangements in that they offer a unique opportunity for students to live and interact with students from other countries. The language houses are a proud expression of the university's commitment to diversity and inclusion.

Slime seeps from the television

Television is like a shell surrounding our societies, making us feel safe and protected. Growing numbers of people are renting TV sets to gather images, express love, make behaviors moral and spiritual choices and experience even more enriching. Yet at the same time, the thrill of an exciting TV show is becoming more and more addictive. The soul is starved for more applicable in everyday situations, sharing in the community to which it belongs is a vital aspect of our natural environment.

Cancer fund drive sponsored by IFC

Michel Pastel

The Inter-Fraternity Council is currently sponsoring a cancer fund drive to benefit cancer research at the American Cancer Society's headquarters in Winston-Salem. The drive began on Monday, October 3, and will continue until Friday, October 7.

The primary goal of the drive is to raise money to support cancer research. The Inter-Fraternity Council has set a fundraising goal of $10,000 for this drive.

The drive is being led by Vice-President of Philanthropy, Ralph Gray, and Vice-President of Philanthropy, Jeff Scales. They hope to meet with students, faculty, and employees to discuss the importance of supporting cancer research.

The Inter-Fraternity Council has organized a number of events to raise funds, including a benefit concert, a car wash, and a bake sale. These events are designed to engage the Wake Forest community and encourage participation in the drive.

The proceeds from the fund drive will be used to support cancer research and assist patients in their fight against cancer. The Inter-Fraternity Council is committed to making a difference in the lives of those affected by cancer.

Student transportation to ACC games studied

Scott Fitzgerald

The Student Athletic Commission is studying the feasibility of providing transportation to ACC football games in future years. The study, which began last semester, was prompted by student interest in attending ACC games.

The Commission is considering a variety of options, including shuttle buses, carpooling, and rideshare services. The study team is working with the Athletics Department to gather information about transportation needs and costs.

The results of the study will be presented to the Commission later this month. The Commission plans to make a decision on transportation for future ACC games by the end of the semester.

Tim Ryan turns a chance to gold

Linda Jenkins

Throughout football history, opportunity may present itself in the most unexpected ways. Recently, the Virginia Cavaliers' football staff was on the beach and watched a more unusual opportunity present itself at their position. Coach Tony Montoya's vision for Ryan, a 19-year-old walk-on from Lynchburg, Va., was far from the traditional starting spot.

"Ryan didn't know he wasn't the starting quarterback," said Montoya. "He had an opportunity to start in the spring game and then in the fall game, and he capitalized on those opportunities."

Ryan's move to the starting role came when starting quarterback Kurt Benkert was injured in the spring game. Ryan's performance in the fall game earned him the starting job for the Cavaliers' opener against North Carolina State.

"Ryan didn't do anything wrong," said Montoya. "He played well in the spring and fall games, and he earned the starting job."

Ryan's performance against the Wolfpack was impressive. He completed 17 of 26 passes for 249 yards and two touchdowns, leading the Cavaliers to a 49-27 victory.

"Ryan's performance was outstanding," said Montoya. "He made great decisions and executed the game plan."
Deacs face Clemson after 24-21 win
