Germaine Major Looks Forward To Year of Study in Berlin

BY JAYNE BRYANT

"I just couldn’t miss the opportunity to apply to live in Berlin for a year because I was already planning on studying there," says Germaine Major, a senior at Wake Forest University. "I really wanted to live in Berlin because it’s such a fascinating city, so I applied for the program and they accepted me." Major will be studying at the Free University of Berlin this fall.

Shklar Presents Alternative View of U.S. Education

BY CRYSTINE VARCHOLY

A national debate is currently raging in American education. Judith Shklar, professor of political science at Harvard University, has contributed to the discussion with an essay titled "The Black American and the Education System," which was published in the winter issue of the Harvard Educational Review.

Shklar argues that the American educational system is designed to maintain the status quo and that it discriminates against black Americans. "The system is structured to keep blacks at the bottom of the social ladder," she writes. "It is a system of segregation, a system of discrimination, a system of oppression." Shklar suggests that the only way to change this system is to change the society that created it.

Notes from the Computer Center
We have installed the 1982 version of BMDF on the Princeton computer, and we expect the first on the IBM personal computers. There are two advantages to the IBM version, however. First, everything in the manual is now available to you in hard copy. There is no machine readable text. This will make it easier for people to customize the program for their individual use. Second, since we are now using a machine readable format, it will be easier for people to print your data. The second advantage is an improvement "front end" program that will assist you in learning how to use the BMDF. It will be available for you, if you’ll ask for it, and it will automatically output the output if you ask.

Find out more about the new menus of BMDF by trying NEWS mode what you are logged in. Both versions of BMDF will be on the UNIX until the spring

What Is Lost?

In each of the last three issues of the Old Gold and Black we have run stories concerning various financial crises on the front page. All three stories centered the numbers involved and grossly underestimated the significance to the effects that crises have on the Wake Forest student.

Many critics credit this obsession with numbers to a technological age in which the individual is neglected. At Wake Forest, the Hearn administration especially has come under a great deal of criticism for being concerned with balance sheets and not the crisis.

As Wake Forest shifts its position from that of a small liberal arts institution to one of the premier athletic programs in the South, it is hard to imagine that Wake Forest student is a small school and does not have the potential of such a school.

The philosophy behind dry rush is that a period without the influence of alcohol allows the rushers to make the best decisions. As the philosophy behind dry rush is that a period without alcohol allows the rushers to make the best decisions.

Both goals of the dry rush policy are valid and should be followed by the fraternities on campus. The administrators who have recently placed responsibility on alcohol regulation in the hands of students new to the principles of the campus should accept the dry rush policy is formulated and implemented. The former policy of refusal to abide by current policies will merely jeopardize the ability of the fraternity to function for the rest of the term.

Regardless, the transition cannot be helped. The new owners of the fraternity will be left to the fraternities to assure that the campus policies are not in conflict with the new regulations. If not, the entire campus may be subjected to a stagnating social life, regulated by an astute alcoholic policy handed down by the administration.

Letters to the Editor

Maze of Contradictions

Support the Double Header

I certainly hope that Erik Badalian, whose letter was published, is still a student of the School of Arts and Sciences. The former Wake Forest students have also expressed historically significant feelings to the "Big Three" and "Big Five" of the student body. The letters expressing the state of the student body are as true today as they were then.

When Robert "Bob" Roberts first left the School of Arts and Sciences it was possible that he was content with the education that he received. But, the day that he saw his two sons leave for college was a day that Mr. Roberts knew that he would never have a chance to see his boys leave for college again.

I love to see the news coverage of the "Big Three" and "Big Five" of the student body. But, I am afraid that I would have a hard time reconciling my views on the Educational Program of our college.

To the Big Three administrators, I would urge you to adopt an open mind of ways. If you want to show our college some respect, maybe you could try it out for yourself.

I do not want the young people of today to be forced into the position of "no" for the rest of their lives. If you want your college to be respected, you must respect the views of the students.

Break Two Restrictive Traditions

Non-personal music is more welcome in the facilities; non-personal activities are not!

The Student Activities Committee (SAC) at Wake Forest University is a group of students who are elected by the student body to represent the students and assist the administration with student activities. SAC, however, has certain responsibilities and restrictions that prevent it from encouraging or sponsoring non-personal music.

SAC is responsible for allocating funds for student activities, but it is not responsible for guaranteeing the financial support of non-personal music. SAC operates under a budget that is determined by the administration, and SAC must work within this budget to allocate funds for student activities.

Wake's Frightening Symptomology

Staff Columnist...........

Wake Forest University is appalled in tradition. For over 200 years, students have trusted from this famous. They have never seen anything that might be terrifying.

Last week had the pleasure of meeting Mr. John Gingrich, new President of Wake Forest. Gliphlop is the president of Pennsylvania University, the second greatest conservancy in America. He eagerly received the news that Wake's flag had been raised in his honor.

But we did not talk about the new President's impeachment, nor his involvement in the Iran-Contra affair. We discussed kitchen and dining room decor, and the possibility of a new football stadium.

Of course, we did not discuss how the new President could improve our situation. But I do believe that his administration will be a step in the right direction.

Sound outbursts. The new President is a step in the right direction. It is encouraging to see that he is interested in the welfare of the students.

The coming week will be an exciting one, as we wait to see the new administration in action.

Elegant Violence

Wake Forest has its own special characteristic of tradition. Every leading man is required to wear a suit and tie. Every leading woman is required to wear a long dress or a suit. It is common knowledge that Wake Forest has a strong sense of tradition.

There is a definite test to be met, and you have to wear something smart. Our tradition is to be smart.

The first issue of defense is the color of the suit. A color that is appropriate is determined by the color of the tie. Sometimes, the color of the tie may be the color of the suit.

There are many different types of suits available. For example, there are the standard blue suit, the black suit, and the gray suit. Each has its own unique characteristics.

Many of the names of this article were taken from a telephone conversation between me and keyboard player of the Gewandhaus Orchestra, Kurt Masur. He was able to provide some interesting insights into the orchestra's current activities and future plans.

The Gewandhaus Orchestra is one of the most important and prestigious orchestras in the world, renowned for its excellence in music and its long history. Formed in 1741, the orchestra has a rich tradition of excellence, with many notable conductors having led it over the years. The orchestra's repertoire is vast, ranging from Baroque to contemporary music, and it is known for its high level of professionalism and technical skill.

One of the orchestra's most important features is its commitment to education and outreach. The orchestra's educational programs reach out to schools, communities, and libraries, providing educational materials and performances to a wide audience.

The orchestra's current conductor, Kurt Masur, is known for his dedication to music and his passion for passing it on to others. He has worked tirelessly to ensure that the Gewandhaus Orchestra continues to be a leader in the world of music.

Overall, the Gewandhaus Orchestra is a remarkable institution, renowned for its contributions to music and culture. Its dedication to excellence and its commitment to education make it an important part of the world's musical heritage.

The Wake Forest College College Bowl team will meet in the University of Virginia for their regional tournament. The Wake Forest College Bowl team. College Bowl is a new competitive opportunity specifically aimed at NBC and offered at Wake Forest through the English Department's Committee on the Student Union Network.

The main competition to become the Blue Ribbon System of the Southern Region. The meeting is based around question 10 points, and is being held at 20 to 30 points. Questions vary from topics dealing with the arts to those relating to physics. College Bowl members John White, Paul, Southwick, Scott Preston, and Tom Karen are all freshmen living in Huffman Dormitory. They met the first week of school and decided to compete in the intramural tournament beginning in October. The group's guidance professor of history, James Harefield, is also their academic advisor.

During the selection tournament for Wake Forest, the Freshman considered all of Olmert other teams, compared predominantly on their performance. This tournament punished individual performance of experts, so no winner was considered involved in experienced apprenticeship and graduate students.

The only female team member, junior Jane Dabney, was elected as the chair of the tournament's air competition. The younger members look to support for each other to achieve their academic goals; she is a virtual "leader."

As their season quickly winds to a close, Wake Forest's women's basketball team finds that ACC crowds in their bowl for a reason.

After falling to nationally ranked University of North Carolina last Saturday night in the meeple, the Deacon squad looks forward to a next week's action in the state of North Carolina. For the first time in the history of the Deacon squad, Winston-Salem was left with freshman Johnny Koons, whose freshman performance led to third place on the Wake Forest all-time career assist leaders' list. His contributions from eight first half runs, 7-17, were responsible for most of the team's aggressive full court pressure defense.

G-Anna's is All-American

By RICHARD NABRE

The most striking thing about G-Anna's is the combination of new and initiated elements that seem to operate the restaurant successfully. The colors are rich, yet restful; the menu is varied, yet not overwhelmingly large. The atmosphere is pleasant, yet not stuffy. As you make your way through the menu, you can feel the original paintings from The Village isles, which is in the process of a delicious meal being prepared. The food is excellent. The staff is friendly.

To begin your meal, you are greeted by your host and hostess, who seem to know you by name. They will be on hand to assist you in any way possible. The food is fresh and perfectly natural. The service is friendly and efficient. The restaurant is casual, but the atmosphere is warm. The staff is knowledgeable and willing to assist you with any questions you may have.

The main course is the same as the appetizer, but with a twist. It is served with a variety of fresh vegetables such as carrots, asparagus, and green beans. The dish is excellent and the presentation is beautiful. The sauce is perfectly balanced and the meat is tender. The overall experience is truly delightful.

After your meal, you are invited to enjoy a selection of desserts. The selection includes a variety of cakes, pies, and puddings. The cakes are moist and delicious. The pies are flaky and the pudding is creamy. The options are numerous and all look equally inviting.

To end your meal, you are offered a variety of cheeses and a selection of wines. The cheeses are fresh and the wines are fine.

In conclusion, G-Anna's is a wonderful restaurant that is sure to please any dining experience. The food is excellent, the service is friendly, and the atmosphere is warm. It is a great place to celebrate any occasion or simply enjoy a delicious meal with friends and family. If you have not visited G-Anna's yet, I highly recommend that you do so. It is truly a delightful experience.

Tocqueville’s Forum
By CRISTINE VARR
News Editor

"To want a Christian life without a Christian God," said Ernest Fortin, citing the atheist view that moral values come only from human reason.

Fortin spoke Tuesday as the guest lecturer of this spring’s Tocqueville Forum series on the topic "Christian Education and Liberal Democracy." He is a professor of Christianity and Religious Studies at The College. Fortin is also a Catholic priest.

Fortin cites liberal democracy as a major reason for the creation of liberal education. "The only premise is that the country needs a home for liberal education," he said.

"While a liberal democracy is worthwhile, it does not provide guidance to society in a similar way the Catholic Church does, not limited to the nation but worldwide, according to Fortin.

In ancient Greece, Fortin explained, "the reason for the human being was the goal to which they could make a choice," he said, as people of the 20th century.
