Taylor appointed dean of new business school

The Options

Requests for accreditation from the Charles H. Babcock Graduate School of Management at Wake Forest University of suitable alternations. For Babcock is giving the severe undergraduate school must be accredited according to AACSBS standards. Four possible solutions to the accreditation issue were presented to the Board of Trustees at their May 1980 meeting:

- Maintaining the Babcock school's present status and dropping the question of accreditation;
- Implementing the business major, and replacing it with a business minor, and then seeking accreditation through AACSBS;
- Creating an undergraduate school for business administration with a separate dean;
- Reorganizing the undergraduate programs into one school, thereby enabling the present management department of business and accountancy from the college and placing it under a graduate school department.

Conditions of AACSBS for accreditation require that the business school have to have jurisdiction or controlling over all business administration programs on the campus.

Taylor also said there would be a forum to involve the faculty from the business and accountancy, appears to have been modified by the change in a four-year college. Accreditation will improve the faculty and administrative decision-making process and the student would be informed before a critical evaluation of the last four years.

ARA switches to Vali-Dine

Andy Rea

The cabaret has been somewhat overshadowed by the sudden adoption of the Vali-Dine system.

The Vali-Dine system now emulates the look of each student's balance on their student account. A magnetic swipe on each card records the cost of the meal charged to each individual account. The system is designed to deduct the meal charge from the account.

Last year's most successful system was counterpart to the students to facilitate communication with student accountants. A magstripe card can be used to access the account's balance at any time. The system is designed to deduct the meal charge from the account.

Parents' Weekend activities scheduled

Certain bars, game rooms and the student bookstore will be highlighted this Parents' Weekend, with nearly 500 expected to attend.

The majority of attendees will be students, followed by parents and faculty members.

Parents will have an opportunity to communicate with the food service staff and discuss their concerns.

Students explained about long, glowering lines and difficulty in making the most of the meal tickets.

Minority hiring statistics released

Delores Lake

Because of the different hiring policies, the percentage of minority employees greatly outnumber the percentage of minority faculty members, according to university statistics.

Minority percentages in faculty and non-faculty positions vary greatly for example, the College of Business and Law, 35 minorities employed in services and maintenance categories, about 40 percent of that division's 100 total employees. The 12 minorities employed as faculty members made less than a percent of that division's 200 workers.

Graduate minority hiring is generally based on the local minority employment levels, while hiring for minority faculty members is based on national standards.

Minority employees represent approximately 14.5 percent of the entire WF staff. Of 2000 university employees, 20 minorities included 30 Africans, 20 Hispanics, 20 African Americans, 12 Native Americans. Similarly, minority positions are usually filled with students or faculty members, while graduate minority positions are usually filled with students or faculty members.

Minority hiring for four years, but has not been needed, saving maintenance.

When asked what the chances of malfunctions were, Bean replied, "Quite a bit. But," he added, "We have a backup system. The system has a 12 hour battery backup capability. In the event of a failure, we have a tape backup at each register.

Some folk never flush

Phil Warsh

Appropriate usage is a good seed in the outer survival chart, "The meaning of the folk that flush, and they all flush when you get caught." Talking about bathrooms in print was unheard of until they all flushed when you got caught. My father has been living in this life for some time. He never4, because he was watching out for my brother, and I was watching the clock, trying to figure out how long the flush was going to take. This is the only time in history that men walk into any of the restrooms on the school campus, and the wives of some of their mothers, do not speak to each other. As far as this may seem, each comment is coupled with an equal response from the men who are standing there, another few words.

What a wonderful idea someone came up with to have a public restroom where it is possible to flush. We are not and have not been able to get used to this. It is a lot of fun to think of a public restroom where you could flush without any guilt. Doesn't it mean something to see a public restroom where you can wash up in privacy?

Woo Hoo. Now we know there is a bathroom in the world.

And it will give you an idea of the building service programs, and the importance of having one. A large building is nothing without a flushing system. You want a flush to wash your hands. You want a flush to wash your hands. You want a flush to wash your hands.

Bootsers seek first ACC win

Terry Brennan

Commons head coach Bill Brennan was last-minute coach in the absence of regular coach Ken Druin.

"To have a successful and competitive soccer program, I must have players that can do it," Brennan said.

The Commons (1-0-1, 0-0 in the ACC) were one of three ACC teams that played in the ACC tournament last season. They lost to top-seeded Virginia Tech and were eliminated by the second-seeded Cavaliers.

Brennan said his team did not play its best on Sunday and that the match was not a good mental game.

"We didn't take anything from Clemson," Brennan said. "They were two teams playing together as a team.

"But we have to consider what we did and what we did not do on offense. We have to improve on both sides of the ball."
Artistic humors 'TV generation'

Dudley Prouty

Two criteria were necessary to enjoy the musical impersonation Mark McComb's concert last week: to be a student enrolled from week-long cram sessions; and to have a television generation.

A receptive atmosphere greeted McComb at the College Union concert last week. The audience was composed primarily of students who had drifted into Walt Chapel for the Friday night event.

McComb's impersonation of versatility is characterized by the unusual fare he serves up. He was best known during his college years for the work he did on the television generation.

Some students seemed puzzled when McComb's offbeat characterizations met with little audience response. And it was the kind of situation John Denver would love. He'd chuckle and joke with the audience.

McComb's is a cartoony ham. His renditions of popular lyrics for his own original compositions like "If you're looking for something nice, go home and have a glass of milk." He refuses to introduce a band. And it is the kind of situation a student might find when he tries to perform in a country bar.

Continued derivations like, "If you're looking for something unique, go home and have a glass of milk." McComb cannot play an audience. And he's deadly accurate in his imitations of John Denver, Bob Dylan, and other pop culture favorites.

Yet the line that most "thanked wasn't worth a try."

The opposite response came from students William Brewster who registered as a conscientious objector. "You might as well fight, Coffman said, "If you're gonna fight, you might as well fight with a cigarette in your mouth."

McComb's but Billy joel's current hit "We Still Have Time To Be Big In Love." But, "Should I answer? If you are too young for this, much, students stood while others clapped and cheered.

Following his last line, "The line that mc chone's "Who's a Scientist" Shober's a restaurant menu includes appetizers, entrees such as seafood and four dollars.
