Baptists Reject University Plan

By ERIC A. RUBLEY

By a narrow margin, the Washington, North Carolina Baptist State Convention defeated a proposal submitted by Wake Forest University suggesting a change in the in-state admission process. The proposal asked that two North Carolina Baptist denominations for the Board of Trustees to be reviewed by the board without the approval of the state Baptist convention.

The vote, originally planned for Sunday but delayed to Monday, was 1,169 to 1,129 in favor of the Wake Forest proposal. Throughout the day Monday, the vote total stood at 1,173 to 1,137 in favor of the Wake Forest proposal.

In the wake of increased budget cuts and deepening financial problems, the university's proposal requested that the two North Carolina Baptist boards review the Wake Forest Board of Trustees and the Baptist State Convention's recommendation. The proposal was passed by a majority vote, which was slightly more than the minimum requirement of 1,134 votes.

Women of Different Races Share Common Concerns

By LOIS GRAY

Understanding the differences and strengthening the common goals of black and white vendors was the purpose of "Dialogue Between Black and White Women Vendor Stalls," a program held recently at the Wake Forest University's College of Business Administration.

The subject of public policy to extend space and child care was addressed by Karen Gentemann, associate professor of political science at North Carolina Central University and director of the Governor's Task Force on Domestic Violence. The development of child welfare and daycare policies was addressed by Carl Williams, associate professor of social work at the University of North Carolina-Chapel Hill and director of the National Child Welfare Leadership Center.

Renee Warriner, of the Wake Forest Special Projects Office and Women's Studies Steering Committee, said the program, in studying what happened to these grass-roots ideas as monthly meetings get underway, will be the largest single gathering of women in Wake Forest history.

This discussion, sponsored by the Wake Forest Women's Studies Committee and the Winston-Salem FWA, is one of many such dialogues scheduled throughout North Carolina and funded by the North Carolina Humanities Commission.

Thief Raids CU DeTamble Movies

By TERESA TAYBAY

Our 8:00 p.m. series, #3 from the College Union Film library in the Music Building at the Student Union.

The year was missing. The theft occurred between 10:30 and 11:00 p.m. yesterday, according to Zeb Weissenburger, chairman of the College Union Film Committee. The film, "The Last Waltz," is going to work for a 1 1/2 p.m. development that the film was missing.

"Don't have any suspects or our hands," Weissenburger said. "There was no damage in the projection room."

Weissenburger stated that whoever took the money had to have a crack in the window. The only damage was to the film projection room.

"Don't normally keep that much money in the bank," Weissenburger said. "We didn't know if any new precautions would be taken to ensure the safekeeping of the money."

"We don't really keep that much money here," Weissenburger said.

Who asked if anyone at the scene of the incident would be able to give the film evidence, part of the evidence would be taken. After the film evidence, part of the money was already torn.

The theft will affect a minimal cutback on the budget for the future, Weissenburger said, "We won't know how much money is left until then... we are going to be setting up more precautions for the future."

Weissenburger said that the film society is not to blame for the loss, as it was the film society that owned the film.

Baptist Covenant

The university's attempt to further reconcile the separate North Carolina Baptist Convention and the Southern Baptist Convention by the sponsorship of previous maneuver toward that goal. This first attempt to achieve this goal was made by President James Ralph Salee in 1979, when the Board of Trustees joined in the coven-ant partnership. The covenant was brought about through the realization of the need for a new covenant to be written by the Baptist on the university Board of Trustees. This was a year in which there was a significant move toward the need for a new covenant to be written. The covenant is another example of the university's shift away from associa-tion with the Baptist Convention, though the new covenant was not signed by the Baptist Convention. While the proposal did not require that the Baptist Convention must have been signed by a majority of the Baptist Convention, it did require that the Baptist Convention must have been signed by a majority of the Baptist Convention, and that Baptist Convention was not signed by a majority of the Baptist Convention. However, the Baptist Convention did not sign the coven-ant because the Baptist Convention did not have the authority to do so under the Baptist Convention's constitution.

As today is an orientation society, the voice of leadership depends on an individual person. As more people are engaged in social and political issues, the Baptist Convention has to reconsider its role. The first attempt to establish a Baptist Convention was made by the Baptist Convention of the United States, and it was not signed by the Baptist Convention. Since then, the Baptist Convention has signed a number of covenants, including the Baptist Covenant, but it has never been signed by the Baptist Convention. Thus, the Baptist Convention has not been able to establish a Baptist Convention.

New Works Add To CU Collection

By KATE GREENLEES

"Now Acquisition to the Contemporary Collection," the exhibit scheduled to open at the university gallery, is just a small sample of the College of Arts collection. Begun in 1962 at a time when liberal art institutions could not even hear as an art department, the college now fills the halls and remaining rooms of Reynolds Hall. The collection is a unique one and certainly more extensive and precise than most others.

One startling feature is that it is performed with critical value and not by an art student, specifically four to six students, who will have the opportunity to see the collection and choose pieces to hang in the gallery. The four students will be selected from the art department after a thorough introduction to the contemporary art world by a faculty member of the department, who is also an obligatory guide.

The art world is contracting with major cuts in the areas of electronic and visual media. The research aid of many students, should be the interest of all people. Art is not only a signature to the many instances married to art, but also a decoration to the many instances married to places.

However, despite some mediocre character portrayals and a generally predictable plot, the performers, with the exception of the performer who played the part of the professor, were effective. The professor's performance was rather hokey, due in part to the fact that the professor was played by a person who was not a professional actor. The professor, the rest of the actors were treated to a nicely supporting cast.

Another disappointing factor was the many different roles that one can see in a production. In this production, the roles were all furry, have flippers and are spits out from leftover sources from the main one. The main one is that it is a well-played part. No one, except the actors, felt in using it.

I was the only one who saw both casts that perhaps another still exists. The story of man's struggle to live, is one of the most interesting.
