Winter term may change

by Betty Wakefield

In response to a steady and growing dissatisfaction, many fourth week courses, the academic planning committee has received a number of proposals to change the plan of study. The alternative is to have four week courses, a number of students have said, which they feel is more efficient and productive. The change is necessary, they say, in order to accommodate the flow of students and to decrease the number of courses offered during the week.

The task force of the academic planning committee will meet tomorrow morning to review the proposals and make a recommendation to the academic council. The meeting is expected to be held at 10 a.m. in the academic building. The proposals include changes in the schedule for the four week courses, as well as changes in the number of courses offered during the week.

Some students have suggested that the four week courses be extended to six weeks, which would allow for more time to complete their work. Others have suggested that the courses be changed to seven weeks, which would allow for more time for research and study.

The committee will also consider the possibility of extending the present system to other institutions, and of making changes in the number of courses offered during the week. The committee will make a recommendation to the academic council on Tuesday morning. The council will then consider the proposals and make a recommendation to the Academic Senate.

Residentials move

by Malcom Walsh

Residents will take on some new items as they move into the new dormitory. The new dormitory, which is located at the end of the street, will offer more than just a place to live. The new dormitory will provide additional space for weekly meetings of the Residentials and other groups. Additionally, it will provide better security in the building. The new dormitory will be more centrally located, making it easier for residents to come and go.

The new dormitory will be dedicated on Sunday, March 18, at 3 p.m. The dedication will be followed by a reception in the new dormitory. The dedication will be attended by the president, the vice president, and other members of the faculty. The reception will be open to all members of the university community.

Renewal of the spring season is the most welcome of all the seasons. The sun in the west and the breeze in the east, provide evidence enough to make one forget there's nothing but spring. What did they have in mind when they decided to jazz away the entire weekend? The weekend passed uneventfully, and there was nothing but spring.

Taylor talks on English legal system

by Margaret Karst

Peter Taylor, recently head of the bar of England and Wales, spoke in the law school courtroom Monday afternoon on the "Role of the Advocate in England." In Great Britain an advocate is equivalent to a trial lawyer. The main difference between the two law cuts is that in England a lawyer usually guides his client to open court except in a few minor courts, rarely only one civil cause.

Taking the role of the typical family lawyer, Taylor pointed out that a solicitor is there to advise and guide a client. After the advice of his client, will hire and instruct a barrister. The 4,000 barristers have exclusive right to appear in the English superior courts of law.

Taylor talked about three reasons why the English favor a two branch law profession. First, he mentioned that advocates is require a form of expertise. It requires certain kinds of knowledge and a kind of proficiency who do existing else. Barristers are supposed to express themselves in a way that they cannot make a living advantage or disadvantage to use. Taylor pointed out that if a lawyer feels out of place, uncomfortable, or out of practice, he is inefficient and is incapable of giving the court the assistance it deserves. He is also letting his client down.

Taylor used two analogies to demonstrate the English thinking on law specialization. He likened the barrister to the quarterback in a basketball game who must practice every day. The first day the planter doesn't practice he predicts the difference. The second day he doesn't practice his critics notice the difference. The third day he doesn't practice his audience notice. The barrister must have the precise language on his tongue as the planter has the plan at his fingertips. Only through constant practice are either of use.

Taylor said that if a player is a good athlete, he may be effective only if the performer is keyed up. Taylor said that if a football player. Both must be prepared for the performance, either on stage or in the courtroom, Taylor said the music where you are emotionally involved in. The solicitor is there to hold the client's hand, to identify with the family. It is difficult for the solicitor to see the weakness in a case, sometimes emotionally involved. The solicitor will then take the case in to the barrister's hands if it gets into court.

Taylor said that the two-tier system is effective only if the performer is keyed up. Taylor acknowledged in the New York Times recently that the three-day lawyer doesn't practice his craft. The third day he doesn't practice his craft it deserves. He is also letting his client down.

The English is a proper fee. When an advocate receives a fee he is included in the material. There are no everything must be established verbally. Taylor mentioned that speed of the typical family lawyer, solicitors, which makes Taylor's next subject. There is a system of fee payment in England which is a fused legal system, while there are discliplines and rules that must be adhered to.

In England, if one practices criminal law, one protects and defends, rather than only prosecuting or defending, as is done in the U.S. There is a system of peer judges in England which a panel of senior barristers are appointed to sit on the court for four or five weeks a year. According to Taylor, who has been a judge, the experiences of understanding, prosecuting and trying a case is invaluable.

The barristers remain seated during the trial unlike the familiar pacing movement found in U.S. courts. jury trials have been eliminated in almost all civil cases. The barrister addresses the judge, which "Taylor said leads to 'you don't think there is with jury.'

Briefs are delivered to the court before the trial; nothing must be established verbally. Taylor said that written briefs could be beneficial in saving time. Taylor contended that talking about plea bargaining, which is unpopular in England. The judge doesn't discuss anything with counsel before the trial and makes his decision without reference to counsel, although they may be made to in produce plea bargaining in England, but only under certain strict, regulated circumstances. Taylor observed that without plea bargaining, the U.S. would never get through all the court cases.

Referring to the size of the two countries, he added "what is good for England may be much different from what is good over here. Circumstances dictate different results."

Rebuttal

It seems to me that the notion of a “strong black woman” or “strong black men” is the same as the idea of a “strong man” or “strong woman”. The idea of a “strong” person is one that is able to face and overcome obstacles, and is not defined by their race or gender. To label someone as “strong” or “weak” is to reduce them to a single characteristic, and忽视s the complexity and diversity of human experience. It is important to recognize the challenges that all people face, regardless of their race or gender, and to support them in their efforts to overcome those challenges.

Dear Editor,

I am writing to express my concern about the use of the term “strong black woman” or “strong black men”. This term is often used to describe a person who is able to overcome obstacles and make progress, but it can also be used to define someone solely by their race or gender. This is a limiting and inaccurate way to describe a person and should be avoided.

Sincerely,

[Your Name]

Wake in ACC tourney, Molino 25th nationally

For a talented athlete, obesity is normal. Wake's number-one singles tennis player, Andrew Molino, has recently been invited to the national spotlight where the experts Deacon belong.

For more years the collegiate game is played in an extensive minor league system which brought the game to a championship level in many areas. The minor leagues now are more competitive. Minor league baseball teams are part of the minor league system. Many players from these schools are signed by the better teams. Along with players from men's colleges and women's colleges.

The Detroit Tigers often sign out of high school. This sometimes allows them to get a player of good skill and competitive level to areas where there is no pro league. The major league teams will turn out to be another good player. The Deacon belong.

Ruggers split pair in WF tourney

by Fred Bichelt

With most of the campus tuned in to the pickup game at midday, the Wake Forest rugby team was not too far behind. In fact, they finished up with only a 1-0 victory over Central Carolina at the end of their season.

According to coach Mike Miller, the team's performance was not as good as they had hoped. "We had a couple of good players out there, but overall it was a good win," he said.

In the game against Central Carolina, Wake Forest controlled the ball throughout and dominated the possession. They were able to keeps possession for extended periods and were able to create scoring opportunities.

Overall, it was a solid performance by Wake Forest. They had good control of the ball and were able to hold off their opponents. The team will be looking to build on this performance as they prepare for their next game.

Women play at Athens

by Tony Rosson

The women's golf team will finish its season April 29 at the Dean Forest Invitational, and three of its members, Joyce and John, will play.

Joyce, who was the only one of the three to play, said she was excited to play in the tournament. "I've been looking forward to this for a long time," she said.

In the rain-shortened Duke Invitational, Wake Forest finished sixth out of 18 teams. Senior Stephanie was medalist for the team on April 9, and she finished ninth overall.

In the Furman Invitational, which featured several ranked teams, Wake Forest finished sixth out of 18 teams. Senior Stephanie was medalist for the team on April 2, and she finished ninth overall.

The highlight of the tournament, however, was the individual effort of Stephanie. She placed 15th, and finished ahead of such teams as Florida, Duke, and Virginia.

"It was a great feeling to upset the pre-tournament favorites," Stephanie said.

Although Wake did not finish a very high ranked team, senior Andy was optimistic about the team's performance. "I think we have a good chance to make it to nationals," he said.

Although Wake did not win the tournament, the team's performance was impressive. They played well and showed great promise for the future.

The Yankees are looking for another title this year. The team has a good chance to repeat, thanks in large part to the return of some key players from last season. The American League East is once again a very competitive division, with teams like the Yankees, Baltimore Orioles, and Texas Rangers all vying for supremacy.

The Yankees' championship hopes are bolstered by the return of some key players from last season. Mike Torrez, who was the team's nail-biting closer, is back for another year. Also, Buddy Irizarry, who was one of the team's top performers down the stretch, is expected to have another strong season. The team has also added some new players, including left-handed pitcher Billy Lee and outfielder Dave Winfield.

The Yankees' starting rotation is led by the well-respected Catfish Hunter, who will be counted on to provide leadership and consistent pitching. Joining Hunter in the rotation will be Luis Tiant, who had a excellent season last year, and Tommy John, who is expected to have a good season after a strong finish to last year. The team has also added two new starters, Bill Lee and Roy White, who will be counted on to contribute to the team's success.

Offensively, the Yankees boast one of the league's most potent hitting attacks. They have a mix of power hitters and contact hitters, with players like George Brett, Graig Nettles, and Jerry夺, all expected to have strong seasons.

The Yankees' defense is solid, with players like Bobby Murcer in left field, Reggie Jackson in center, and Thurman Munson at first base. The team has a strong catching corps, led by Thurman Munson, who is expected to have a strong season behind the plate.

The Yankees' management is led by manager Bob Lemon, who is expected to have a strong season in his second year at the helm. The team has a talented group of players, and with the right combination of play, the Yankees have a good chance to repeat as division champions and make another run at the World Series.

The containment system proved to be inadequate in preventing the escape of radioactive materials. This comment that "we dispense with the usual precautionary measures," he added, related to the fact that the reactor was not designed for the containment of radioactive materials. The containment system is designed to prevent the escape of radioactive materials in the event of a loss of coolant, but in this case, the reactor was designed to operate with the containment system in place.

Pfeffer said that the amount of radiation that would be released in the event of a loss of coolant is negligible. He noted that the reactor was designed to release a maximum of 100,000 curies of radioactive materials in the event of a loss of coolant, but in this case, the reactor was designed to release a maximum of 1000 curies of radioactive materials in the event of a loss of coolant.
