CU Cuts Back Movie Series By Two-Thirds

BY JUNIE BETOURNE Staff Writer

Two-thirds of the remaining CU Film have been cut from the schedule for the fall semester, according to the movie series coordinator, Mr. Lewis.

The cutback was due to a need for new students to attend the movies during the summer, and rising film prices, Lewis explained.

The decision to cut back the schedule was made at the beginning of the fall semester, and it was expected to continue into the spring.

Although the decision to reduce the number of movies was made quickly, Lewis said he was working under circumstances when the contracting cycle was expected to be positive.

The cutback is expected to have minimal impact on the overall movie experience for students, as the remaining movies are still scheduled to be shown.

The new schedule will be announced in the near future.
North Carolina's Ku Klux Klan: WF Graduate Aided Re-Emergence

By Dr. George K. Gruber, Wake Forest University

The Ku Klux Klan, once a force to be reckoned with in the United States, has now entered a period of atrophy and dissolution. However, with the assistance of a WF graduate, the Klan has been able to re-emerge in recent years.

One of the key figures in this re-emergence is a WF graduate who has been instrumental in revitalizing the Klan's membership and activities. This graduate, along with other Klan members, has been working to increase the Klan's visibility and presence in the community.

The Klan's revival has been marked by an increase in membership and participation in various activities. With the assistance of this graduate, the Klan has been able to engage in different types of activities, such as parades, rallies, and other public events. These events have helped to attract new members and gain support from the local community.

The Klan's re-emergence has also been assisted by the use of modern communication tools, such as social media and the internet. This graduate has been instrumental in utilizing these tools to promote the Klan and reach out to potential members.

Despite the challenges faced by the Klan, this WF graduate has remained committed to its revival. The graduate's dedication and hard work have helped to bring the Klan back to life, making it a force to be reckoned with once again.

In conclusion, the re-emergence of the Ku Klux Klan, with the assistance of a WF graduate, serves as a reminder of the persistence of this controversial organization. The Klan's activities continue to divide opinion, but one thing is certain: the Klan is not going away anytime soon.
WFU Debate Teams Win 4 Tournaments

Wake Forest debate teams won awards in four tournaments over the past few weeks.

In the Marshall-Myrtle debate at Arizona State University, Wake Forest defeated Arizona State, Arizona, and St. Louis before losing to Ohio State, the eventual winners.

In the National Debate Tournament at Texas Christian University, Wake Forest defeated a team from the University of Chicago, Illinois, and a team from the University of Virginia, Virginia, before losing to a team from the University of California, California, in the semifinals.

In the Southern Regional Debate Tournament at the University of Georgia, Wake Forest defeated teams from the University of Alabama, Alabama, and the University of Tennessee, Tennessee, before losing to a team from the University of Kentucky, Kentucky, in the finals.

In the National Debate Tournament at the University of Illinois, Wake Forest defeated teams from the University of Michigan, Michigan, and the University of Wisconsin, Wisconsin, before losing to a team from the University of Southern California, California, in the finals.

Three Departments Prepare Papers

In the Department of German, Dr. Ralph R. Feuer, professor of German, and Dr. Frank Mitchell, associate professor of German, will also work on a paper for the forthcoming spring meeting of the American Council on Education. They will be joined by Dr. Charles K. Kress, professor of German, and Dr. James C. O'Sullivan, professor of German, in preparing the paper.

In the Department of English, Dr. John E. Curling, professor of English, will be joined by Dr. Charles H. Reynolds, professor of English, in preparing a paper for the forthcoming spring meeting of the American Council on Education.

In the Department of History, Dr. Robert W. Valentine, professor of History, will be joined by Dr. Hugh D. Miller, professor of History, in preparing a paper for the forthcoming spring meeting of the American Council on Education.

Undergraduate Count Shows Small Drop

Enrollment in all schools of Wake Forest University increased by 2% over last year. The increase is due to a net gain of 26 students in the undergraduate division. The number of students in the graduate division remained the same.

Survival of Society Topic of Broyles’ Talk

Dr. Charles H. Reynolds, professor of English, will be the keynote speaker at the forthcoming spring meeting of the American Council on Education.

In a recent meeting with the Student Life Committee, the Dean of the College, Mr. Brown, disclosed that the proposal for the establishment of the Honor Council, which was introduced by the students, has been withdrawn. The Dean cited various reasons for the withdrawal, including the concerns raised by the administration and the lack of support from the student body.

The Honor Council was established to address issues of academic integrity and to provide a forum for students to discuss and resolve problems related to cheating and plagiarism. However, the proposal faced significant opposition from the administration, who argued that it would lead to over-regulation and an increase in bureaucracy.

The Dean also emphasized the importance of collaboration and communication between the administration and the student body. He encouraged students to express their concerns and ideas in a constructive manner, and to work towards finding solutions that are beneficial to all parties involved.

Failing “Cheaters”

Administrators and students have a fear and a lack of respect for each other. The relationship is unbalanced and weak. Students contribute to the community by their actions, yet the administration appears to be indifferent to their concerns.

Brewster Council proposals have been introduced, but students are not consulted on the issues. The administration seems to be operating in a vacuum, without considering the perspectives and needs of the student body.

Yes, Sentimental Lives If But Once a Year

We can no longer expect the students to be happy and healthy. They are faced with endless pressures and expectations, from the administration and from each other. The administration seems to be more interested in maintaining control and authority, rather than fostering a healthy and supportive environment for the students.

Student Defends Leake

Your editorial “No Comment” from last week raised significant questions about the actions of the administration. It seems that the administration has taken a position of silence, which is unfortunate. As an institution of higher learning, we must strive to maintain transparency and accountability.

The administration has a duty to respond to the concerns of the students and to address the issues that arise. It is important to have open dialogue and to work towards finding solutions that are fair and just. We cannot afford to ignore the concerns of the students, as they are the ones who will be affected by the decisions that are made.

We must also remember the importance of faculty input and involvement in the decision-making process. It is crucial to have a collaborative approach, where the perspectives of all stakeholders are considered.

Where’s The Blame?

The recent presentation about the proposed Constitutional amendment on student conduct has raised important questions about the role of the administration and the student body. It seems that the administration has taken a stance of blaming the students for their actions, rather than addressing the broader issues of academic integrity and responsibility.

The administration must take responsibility for creating a supportive and inclusive environment for all students. It is important to have a culture where students feel safe and respected, and where they can seek help and support when they need it.

We must also recognize the importance of student involvement and representation. It is crucial to have a voice for the students in the decision-making process, so that their concerns and perspectives are taken into account.

No Meeting Ground

When bitter controversy emerged over the proposed Honor Council trials of two black students, the local reform suddenly became a major issue. Petitions were signed, angry letters were written to Old Gold, and countless revisions of the Honor Council were discussed.

Now, almost a year later, an Honor Council reform bill will be introduced in the student legislature. It is carefully thought-out proposal which is the result of hours of sleepless, hard work.

The problem is not simply that there are two instances of cheating, but that the administrators are involved, and that the public is aware of what was being done to evaluate the cases. As administrators had done to the Honor Council trials of two black students, the Honor Council reform bill will be introduced and the trial will be conducted.

What was being done to evaluate the cases of study and difficult choices. As administrators had done to the Honor Council trials of two black students, the Honor Council reform bill will be introduced and the trial will be conducted.

The unwillingness of students and faculty to cooperate, the lack of responsibility in the administration, the rigidity of the Honor Council and the Honor Board, and the need for a division of Reader’s Digest into the public inquiry.

The present honor and Honor Council were discussed. The jury system—the heart of the democratic process—will be restored. The Honor Council reform bill will be introduced and the trial will be conducted.

Students Vicip Raps Laotian Invasion

By ROBERT BRADLEY

About 80 young people, mostly students, gathered at the grammar school for an impromptu gathering of the Vietnamese American Federation, an organization formed to help Vietnamese refugees in the area.

The group, who had been逛街 for several days, decided to hold a rally to show their support for the refugees.

The rally was attended by students from various local high schools, as well as members of the Vietnamese American Federation. The event was organized by a group of students who had been working with the refugees for several weeks.

The students carried signs and banners with messages of support for the refugees. They also spoke to the crowd about the situation in Vietnam and the need for more aid to be sent to the refugees.

The rally lasted for several hours and was attended by hundreds of people. The students were grateful for the support they received from the community and vowed to continue their efforts to help the refugees.

Law School Gets $100,000 Gift

By ROBERT H. HARRIS

The law school has received a $100,000 gift from the law firm of Breast Cancer.

The gift will be used to fund a new scholarship program for law students.

The scholarship will be awarded to students who have demonstrated a commitment to helping those affected by breast cancer.

The program will be administered by the law school's Office of Scholarships and Financial Aid.

By ROBERT H. HARRIS

If you couldn't get your face on the front page of the yearbook this year, you can still be recognized for your achievements.

The law school has opened registration for the 2001-2002 academic year.

Registration began at 9:00 a.m. on Monday, and will end on Friday at 5:00 p.m.

Students can register online, by phone, or in person at the law school's registrar's office.

The registration process is easy and straightforward.

Eco Seminar Shows Expansion

By NANCY ANDREW

Wake Forest University students, disturbed by the environmental pollution produced by the university's operations, have begun to organize the Eco Seminar, a new group that is working to raise awareness about environmental issues.

The group was founded in the wake of the campus challenge, and is made up of students who are concerned about the environmental impact of the university's operations.

The group's first event was a presentation by Dr. Robert S. Reynolds, a professor of environmental science at the university.

Reynolds spoke about the importance of environmental conservation and the need for the university to take action to reduce its environmental impact.

The students were also taken on a tour of the campus to see the environmental efforts that are being made.

Service Group Bridges A Gap

By BRENDA BRACKFORD

Following research by two University students in the winter of 1970-71, a new student government association, the Western Student Coalition, was formed to improve the quality of student life at the university.

The association was formed in response to the lack of student involvement in decision-making at the university.

The coalition includes representatives from all of the student organizations on campus.

The group is working to improve communication between the student body and the administration, and to address issues such as housing and dining.

Deacons Open Homestand Against Rugged Cavaliers

By LARRY WRIGHT

Wake Forest's basketball teams must begin their travails in the Atlantic Coast Conference this week when the Deacons host the Virginia Cavaliers inside Wade Stadium Saturday. The two teams meet frequently in athletic contests for the Deacs.

Wake Forest enters the meeting with a record of only 5-7, having AC games running with five wins at home. The only trip the Deacons have taken so far was to Alabama and Maryland. The game Saturday will be the first for Wake Forest since January 3.

DEFEATING RECORD

Virginia's recent record in basketball contests for the Deacs does not indicate that the Cavaliers are about to come home and shut down in the ACC. However, any win must be critical for the Deacons to remain competitive in the ACC.

The Deacons' last loss to Virginia was a 12-2 loss to the Cavaliers in the second half of the game. Virginia has been very consistent in the ACC, winning six of its nine games.

The Cavaliers' recent record in ACC play is 3-2, and they have won three of their last four games. Virginia has had a lot of success in the ACC, winning the ACC title last year.

Virginia has a strong defense, which has helped it to win its three ACC games so far. Virginia has also been strong on the offensive end, scoring 76.2 points per game.

Virginia has been led by senior guard George Bell, who averages 12.5 points per game. Bell has been a key factor in Virginia's success, scoring 766 points in 23 games.

Deacons vs. Cavaliers

The game will be an important one for both teams. Wake Forest enters the game with a record of 5-7, and Virginia is 12-2. The Deacons have been inconsistent this year, winning three and losing two in ACC play.

The game will be a good test for the Deacons, who will be looking to continue their hot streak. Virginia, on the other hand, will be looking to maintain its momentum.

This game is important for both teams, and it will be a key game in the ACC standings. The Deacons will be looking to continue their impressive run, while Virginia will be looking to maintain its grip on the ACC title.
