Animal Abuse Investigated

By Brian Moss

The Office of Residence Life and Housing has completed an investigation of Phi Kappa Alpha following allegations of cruelty towards animals. The investigation was based on an anonymous letter the editor received in the Nov. 16 issue of the Old Gold and Black. As a result of the investigation, six Phi Kappa Alpha members will be charged, and their cases will be heard by the Judicial Committee and the Greek Judicial Panel. I am aware of the possibility that this behavior could occur on campus," said Harold R. Holmes, the dean of student services. "The administration is assisting in any way possible in the investigation."

Biden supports Bush's Goals in Gulf, Disapproves of Unstable Game Plan

By Richard Sweeney

Sen. Joseph Biden, D-Del., and President Bush have "changed the game plan" for American policy in the Persian Gulf, he says in his speech for the Carlyle Lecture Series at 8 p.m. Wed. in Benson Union. Biden, who served in the Senate from 1973 to 1981 and just was re-elected for a six-year term, is chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee and co-chair of the Foreign Relations Committee.

According to the senator, the game plan has been "to create a new world order."

"The country did not sign up to... any other of the following: set, American forces should have been deployed, as they were in 1980. They should be deployed from bases in Saudi Arabia, as was originally planned, as the offensive removal of Iraq from Kuwait, and the reinstatement of the Gulf, oil and large and the United States of America, "Biden said.

Biden was criticized in 1972 and just was re-elected for a six-year term, he is chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee and co-chair of the Foreign Relations Committee.

His speech, "New Directions in American Foreign Policy," is the 195th presented in the Brown-Carlin Lecture Series and was attended by 150 undergraduate, 20 students, faculty, staff and guests.

Co-sponsored by Wake Forest and graduate and undergraduate Irving Carlin Committee and by the Student Union Committee, the series has brought nationally renowned speakers to the university, including former Vice President Walter Mondale, 1964 Senate candidate Andrew Young, Senator Barbara Boxer, George Will, George McGovern, Gary Hart, Jerry Kang, Karen Tumulty, and Jimmy Carter.

Biden said he is critical of the goal of Bush's Gulf policy and that the administration is only looking to accomplish a "finishing of the task," then turning to a "new world order that should be somewhere else."

"The new world order is turning out to be something less than what it thought it would be.

Biden accused Bush of allowing the U.S. forces to bear the brunt of the responsibility, rather than turning their attention to a more active role. He said America's decision to move from a "unilateral" to a "coalition" is to a "new world order for the world."

"We are a country that has been a part of the world order... the Gulf is the proper place for this country."

"We are looking at $30,000, "he said, "and the leadership justified that this is a costly war." Biden also criticized the "new world order" for its "guts," saying it is a "political world order.

Registration to Be Held Soon

Students will register for the spring semester beginning the week of Jan. 22 through the week of Jan. 26 at a residence hall near the center of campus. Registration will begin at 8 a.m. on Monday, Jan. 22, and continue through Friday, Jan. 26. Students should sign up with their advisors if they have not already done so.

Ticket Appeals Approved

University security has recently approved appeals made by students who received parking tickets between Jan. 1 and Feb. 1. Students may appeal parking tickets by writing to Parking Office, 110 North Campus Road, before the beginning of the semester, but the list was not announced.

Initially all appeals for tickets issued in Lot 5 were denied.

Parking Changes Made

Student may now park in faculty lots on Sunday, Monday, and Tuesday. This change has been made because faculty members no longer have to walk their classes.

Course Offers Students Opportunity to Help Victims of Violence

Laura Nickel, a professor of women's studies, has created an independent study of internships that encourage students to get involved in the Winston-Salem community. Students may work with many different organizations, including the Battered Women's Shelter, North Carolina Center for Law on Women and Family Services. Although the internships are offered in the department of women's studies, Nielson, a professor of women's studies at Reynolds University Center today from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m., during the career center, said that they are not limited to the students who study women's studies.

The program begins in fall and runs through the school year. Students who wish to participate must contact the career center by April 1. Students who are currently involved in the program begin their work in the fall and continue through the semester. The program is open to all students. A similar program is being offered at the Center for Women's Studies.

The program was developed as a way to give students a chance to see firsthand the issues related to violence against women. Students are given a chance to make a difference in the lives of women who are affected by violence.

Thurber, MD—The Food and Drug Administration approved the first form of gene therapy for treating non-patient Tuesday. Thud will begin immediately at the National Institutes of Health in Bethesda.

In the therapy, cells from a patient's name are removed and new ones are grown, then a gene that makes an anti-cancer hormone is added.

The cancer-fighting cells in the body attack the tumor and the new gene makes the hormone that will shut off the cancer's nutrient supply.

School of Medicine

Given Federal Grant

Old Gold and Black Report

The U.S. Department of Agriculture awarded $2.87 million for planning and construction of the Center for Research on Human Nutrition and Chronic Disease Prevention at the University of Miami School of Medicine.

The action followed President Bush’s signing of the 2001 Agriculture Appropriations Act, Monday. The act provides $2.87 million for the department’s human nutrition research program, which includes the human nutrition and chronic disease prevention laboratory in the School of Medicine.

The funding will be used to construct laboratory space and parking facilities to be used by the center. The funds will also be used for construction of the laboratory facilities.

Nutrition center activities will include: investigations of chronic diseases, nutritional studies of the general population, and projects of the center.

The act, passed by both houses of Congress with a vote of 389 to 1, "will be implement in a program of nutrition science in the United States," the Department of Agriculture said.

The project will be suspended pending release of appropriated funds.

Although Wade said he finds the studies of the center to be "appropriate" to design the laboratory facility and engineering, planning and construction of lab, fund managers are excluded from the project.

The work will be suspended pending release of appropriated funds.

As Nasty As They Wanna Be

"To be honest, I don’t know what’s going to happen," said Richard Janeway, of Walter Robbs Callahan Center for Research on Human Nutrition and Chronic Disease Prevention.

"But I do know that, when the project is do, the work will be suspended pending release of appropriated funds."
Alcohol Debate

The case is heating up on campus as the Student Government Association and the student senate prepare to make a decision on the issue of alcohol and drinking on campus. The past few weeks have seen an increase in the number of alcohol-related incidents, leading to calls for stricter policies on alcohol consumption.

The current policy allows students to purchase alcohol off-campus and bring it onto campus for private consumption. However, there have been concerns about the impact of alcohol on student behavior and academic performance. Some students argue that the policy is too lenient and enables irresponsible drinking, while others believe it should be maintained.

The debate has been exacerbated by the fact that the new student body has a different perspective on alcohol compared to the older students. There is a growing concern among parents and faculty about the impact of alcohol on students' health and well-being.

The president of the student senate has called for a committee to study the issue and make recommendations for policy changes. The committee will consider factors such as the impact of alcohol on student health, academic performance, and community safety.

The debate is expected to continue as students and faculty members voice their opinions and advocate for the policies they believe will best serve the interests of the campus community.

M any readers stand between the American public and their representatives in Congress by the Judith to follow fiscal policies that favor long-term well-being of our nation. One of the central issues is how much we need to their last year’s strengths. It is not easy, but as the political process continues, it is important for voters to be aware of the issues and to participate in the political process.

In many areas of the country, money plays a large role in determining an executive and effective communication with voters via media, email, and social media. In general, those candidates who spend more money will be more successful, especially in densely populated areas. One way to counteract this is to make the political process more accessible to all voters, which has been achieved through various voter registration and voting methods.

If the incumbent does not get an opponent, he will probably win. A party that has a successful primary election is likely to win in the general election. However, if the party does not have a successful primary, it is unlikely to win in the general election.

The second problematic innovation that weakens the controlling branch of our government is gerrymandering. Gerrymandering supports incumbents of the controlling branch of our government, and should be limited.

In conclusion, the lack of voter knowledge is open to further evaluation of the two campaign approaches. This strategy, implying Gantt as amoral inferior, leads to a further evaluation of the two campaign approaches. It is also a challenge for the challenger to convince the voters that they are not the ones.
Baptist Convention Split over Budget
Rift May Benefit Proposed Divinity School

By Jesse Yancey

Baptists from across North Carolina filled the Lawrence Joel Veterans Memorial Coliseum in Winston-Salem for the week-long convention to approve the $28.5 million budget proposed for the Baptist State Convention. But delegates were split over the proposal, with moderates sending it to convention officials in Raleigh, N.C., for further consideration.

The proposal was approved by a vote of 3,061 to 2,941, a vote that was seen as a victory for moderates who wanted to maintain the convention's conservative stance on issues such as inerrancy in the Bible.

The budget, which is the largest in the history of the Southern Baptist Convention, includes funds for scholarships, mission work, and other programs. However, conservative delegates wanted to reduce the amount of money spent on mission work and increase the amount spent on conservative causes.

During the convention, moderates and conservatives engaged in heated debates over the budget, with moderates accusing conservatives of trying to control the convention and conservatives accusing moderates of trying to weaken the Southern Baptist Church's conservative identity.

The rift between moderates and conservatives has been a long-standing issue in the Southern Baptist Convention, with moderates wanting to maintain the church's liberal traditions and conservatives wanting to maintain its conservative traditions.

The music is played with such precision and finesse that it becomes a kind of meditation, a way of transcending the mundane.
College Radio May Lose Truly Alternative Status

College radio station generally call themselves "alternative radio." Alternative to what? By Top 40 standards, college radio is practically useless. You don't even need to buy the station's records. The listener gets what he wants through the long, long format of "power rock." This is not the least bit a "power rock" station. It is an alternative to the Top 40s. At least that is how it used to be. Now it is just another station in a long line of broadcasting majors.

College radio has become the radio station that college students want to hear but cannot hear in their dorms. Therefore, the station is broadcast on a low-power FM frequency, 88.7 FM. It is tuned in by college students who do not want to hear Top 40's. They want to hear music that is different from what they hear on Top 40 stations.

College radio stations are also different from Top 40 stations in that they play music that is not written and produced by major recording companies. College radio stations play music from "alternative" bands. These bands are not signed to major recording companies, and they are the ones who call themselves "alternative."

College radio stations are not just another Top 40 station. They are a different kind of radio station. They play music that is not written and produced by major recording companies. They play music that is written and produced by independent recording companies. These independent recording companies are the ones who call themselves "alternative."
