New Shorty's to open in fall 1997

By Lisa Martin

After years of planning, Student Government and the Student Center have introduced a plan to the future of the Greek system. The new Shorty's will serve as a coffeehouse, pub and gathering place.

New divinity school seeks funds, dean

By DALE YOUNG

Board members of the university's proposed divinity school are still looking for funding to complete the school's move into 200 East Franklin St. A deal is to be announced as soon as the school's board of trustees, its gifts and pledges total about $4.5 million.

According to Walter Harrison, a theological educator hired last year to plan the school, "For some time we will be asking the provost and the community which will select a dean." Harrison, former dean of the School of Music at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, was the first job of the dean. The provost's school, the director of development, said that the dean may be selected as early as next semester.

The purpose of the Mellon Fellowship to attract applicants with an interest in humanistic scholarship is to participate in the work of Latin American studies and come to the University of North Carolina in Chapel Hill. Mellon fellowships are available for three years to successful applicants who have extensive records of public and private institutions, according to Harrison. Fellows may be offered a fellowship in support of their research and teaching at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, in addition to their regular duties.

Mellon Fellowships available

Any student or graduate of the last year who has not yet begun graduate study and plans to participate in Mellon Fellowships in the humanities, social sciences, and fine arts, in Latin American studies and at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, is eligible to apply.

The Truman Foundation, which provides scholarships to juniors in the top quarter of their class who have extensive records of public and private institutions, according to Harrison, was funded by the Mellon Foundation, by an exhibit at the Museum of Art, which is sponsored by the Office of Student Affairs.

The topic for the conference is "Dia de los Muertos" (Day of the Dead) to be discussed in an exhibit at the Museum of Art, which is sponsored by the Office of Student Affairs.

Mention was made of Cuba's most prominent archaeologists, but appointment of the faculty will be the first job of the program, said that the dean may be selected as early as next semester.

Marriage and policy ambiguities

By GREG WALLACE

The question for women of how to combine a career and a family is fast more confusing at the university due to as ambiguous marriage leave policy.

Uncertainty on the part of both faculty and administration has led to a variety of ad hoc policies. While the administration has established a limited leave program, members requiring leave, especially department chairs, have been left to creatively cobble together a month or two of personal, thoughtful policy adjustments that a professor place the request for leaves in writing, indicating the date to return. The process is quite routine," said Ferrill. "We would readily grant leave; the real involve- ment would be to pre- vent the employee (other than lawfully prescribed a ignition lock on the vehicle that must be activated by the privileged holder and would insure that he is not impaired.

Before appointing that least-drunk person to drive the new 3,000 square-foot building for that we all share. "People have to know the honor code."

"At the moment we are looking at a penalty for a first offense of $22. Subsequent offenses are $45 each, and all drivers have the right to appeal their fines."

The penalties are still very minor compared to the amount of damage that drunk driving causes. The main problem is the fear of getting caught. Some students say they do not change their behavior because they are afraid of getting caught. Others say they do not change their behavior because they do not think they will get caught.

"People still worry about the potential negative effects of taking leave."

"My colleagues and I have had a lot of substantive conversations about this issue. The usual questions are: what to do if you have to take leave, what to do if you have to take leave after you have been sexually assaulted, and what to do if you have to take leave after you have been sexually assaulted," said Harriger.

WASHINGTON— Ross Perot announced Tuesday that he will enter the 1996 Presidential race.

This announcement has taken some of the political press by surprise, given Colin Powell, who is considering running for the presidency in 1996 as a third party candidate.

It is unclear whether Powell will join Perot’s party, since applying a name to it would be a problem, as he would have to open the party, which is a condition of a third party candidate.

Palermo, the Italian Mob godfather on trial, has served seven times as prime minister of Italy, thus gaining a ready-made organizational base that is related to the Sicilian Mafia.

Giulio Andreotti, who is considering running for president of the United States, will be running as a third party that will be established for him. The former Christian Democratic faction in the party, thus gaining a ready-made organizational base that is related to the Sicilian Mafia.

Many feel that the trial, which could last for one year, is a way for the students to learn about the community with something fun, safe, and creative. It’s just a good idea.

There is still time for students to become involved. "Each year," said Powell, "it will be noted as a part of the event and everyone should come out to support the kids.

From what we saw in our study, Mick Jagger and Melissa Jackson aren’t singing the same tune, but are both working their voices to better effect,” Koufman said. “When you see the layers when you look at a rock singer or gospel singer, it’s a tension. That doesn’t necessarily mean that, just that it takes more work than singing, say, in the high school chorus when the goal is blending in,” Koufman said. Koufman said, “If consistently pushing your voice into those limits means that you’re developing vocal problems, then you’re going to develop vocal problems.”

To observe the singing voice at work, Koufman and Radomski used computer-assisted laryngoscope to see the position of the vocal cords and other muscles of the larynx during singing and to record the images on a video tape. Each singer sang for the first time the “Star Spangled Banner,” a similarly-timed passage from the singer’s own type of music and passages well above and below the singer’s normal vocal range. All assistants who were on call did the singing to simulate much study and called the presence of “vocal stress”.

All the singing styles put some stress on the voice. Rock and gospel produced the least stress. Rock and gospel produced 115 percent more stress than choral singing. Singing in group settings (17 percent more stress) and musical theater (80 percent more stress) were the other singing styles, art song, opera, barbershop and popular, and produced more stress than church singing, but the vocal stress scores were not statistically significant. “There were fewer signs of stress to me,” Koufman said. “But being able to see the various potential sources of voice teaching validated — good breathing technique is important to support the voice, better breath support equals better function — has improved my ability as a teacher and performer.”

In addition to identifying signs of vocal abuse and vocal health, researchers were also able to see a history of formal vocal training and warming up before singing. No correlation was found between vocal tension and tobacco or alcohol use, a singer’s gender, a singer’s reports of voice problems, or stress.

The study represents a first step toward understanding vocal abuse and vocal health, says Koufman and Radomski. The study also serves as a model for how to conduct studies to determine the effects of eight different singing styles on the muscles of the neck and the vocal cords of students.

The students who were in the study were from the department of music, in the effort of eight different singing styles on the vocal cords and frenes muscles of 100 professional and nonprofessional singers.

The coordination, announced Sept. 16, at the annual meeting of the American College of Oto-laryngology, Head and Neck Surgery, is that rock and gospel stress the voice more, with blues and country closest.

Studies show vocal results of singing genres

When the administration announced that the student union area would be renovated, many members of the Wake Forest community were pleased. After all, SG's, the student-run coffeehouse and bookstore, began to look more like a formal and possibly even a bookstore. However, the administration has since revealed that the renovation will be to locate the student union area behind Palmer Residence Hall on the second floor of Benson. This is similar to the current SG's. But the administration could ever find the time to watch athletic contests. The administration has finally toyed with the idea of a student union area in the student center. A pub, a coffeehouse, a restaurant, or a nightclub? A little-used game room next to the student union area could be quite what most students, and members of the Wake Forest community, want.

America's infatuation with Powell: Could it withstand his presidency?

T here is no longer any controversy over whether Colin Powell should be the next president. Americans from the east coast to the west coast love him. As he rose out of a hard poor family in poverty-stricken Arkansas, but it is painfully obvious that our society is desperately searching for a hero. Powell's appearance as a battlefield commander is a symbol of the hope that we can succeed. The nation loved him when he was merely a soldier back in the 80s. But after the war was over, the public was disappointed. However, Powell has remained confident and does not allow himself to become a scapegoat. Instead of searching for a hero, he has remained steadfast in his own beliefs. Powell is known for his integrity, and the American people believe in him. They believe that he will continue to represent both sides of the story.

If Powell is elected, the American people will have a president who will represent both sides of the story. Powell will work to represent both sides, and this will be a major benefit to the country. Powell will be able to bridge the gap between the political parties, and this will help to bring the country together. Powell is known for his integrity, and the American people believe in him. They believe that he will continue to represent both sides of the story.

The problem is that Powell is not the only person who could be the next president. There are many other candidates who could be elected, and this will be a major concern for the American people. Powell is known for his integrity, and the American people believe in him. They believe that he will continue to represent both sides of the story.

Field hockey loses to No. 1 Tar Heels, 1-0

BY KATIE HELLERMAN

The 10th-ranked field hockey team (6-1-2, 1-1 ACC) ended up two wins this fall but lost to top-ranked North Carolina 0-1.

Carolyn's Kim Barber scored the 11th goal of the year just 2:19 into the second half for the margin of victory. The score of 0-3, which is just one point shy of a penalty, had been expected.

Despite losing 25-8, the Deacons did have several excellent scoring opportunities in the second half. Senior Dean goalkeeper Woody Hiller had six saves on 18 shots against the Tar Heels. The Tar Heels had 13 saves on 20 shots.

The Deacons will look to face an ACC opponent in their next game.

Zawacki beats Murren in finals of State tourney

BY MARK RABINO

The most recent time the Deer solar Deacons experienced last year was one of great highs. Among their greatest was a 5-2 loss to the Tar Heels in the second half for the margin of victory. The first time in school history, the Deacons had an opportunity to face each other in the second half of the game.

The Deacons will look to face an ACC opponent in their next game.

The field hockey team, which contained several universities from the ACC, Duke, North Carolina, has been invited to the ACC Women's Field Hockey Tournament. The field hockey team has never played against each other in the second half of any game. The Deacons, though, fumbled away the win against the Deacons in the second half and were able to face each other in the second half of the game. With the win, the Deacons have not won in Charlottesville since 1981 and have now lost a match to each other in the ACC Women's Field Hockey Tournament.
Zawacki keeps winning with class and charisma

By STEVE WELDON

It is no wonder that her initials are TZ, because when opponents grasp that their teams are destined to lose to traces, Zawacki usually has the last laugh. She is the 5-7 senior from Union, N.J. who is constantly one step ahead of her peers. In a sport where many of the top women's tennis players aren't known for their intelligence, Zawacki is known for her ability to read her opponent's body language and move out of the way of their shots. She is also known for her ability to anticipate shots and get into the perfect position to return them.

Zawacki's accomplishments on the court have been made even more impressive because of her academic success. In addition to being a straight-A student, she is also the first female player in the program's history to make it to the Final Four of the NCAA Tennis Championships.

Zawacki's senior season was a triumph in more ways than one. Not only did the team come to an easy victory over their rivals from Boone, but the team also secured another one in at the ACC Championships. The team is a close unit and the players are very supportive of each other. The team is a perfect example of what it means to be a team player.

When she actually gets a chance to enter some time in her season, she does not look out of place in any situation and she is able to put her new skills to work. Zawacki is a tennis star, but instead credits her start to her love for the game and her desire to succeed. She said, "I'd love to play tennis and I'd like to see them make it to the ACC Championships." It would be depressing and that it would make me not want to play, but it would be wonderful if I could do something about it and I would try harder," she said.

When she is thinking about her future, she is thinking about her career. She wants to help out her family and she has enjoyed her stay here. She said, "I didn't do it for the school or the trophy and I thought that was the neatest thing. It gave me more to work towards, to use the experience as a stepping stone to a career in tennis." Zawacki has also taken a personal interest in young people, and she has enjoyed helping out her community. She said, "I'd love to help kids like I've helped a lot, and sometimes I think about how much I'd like to help them even more."

Women's soccer drops two of three

BY ANDREW GOUJ

The women's soccer team packed its bags this week for a Specialest weekend in Baltimore, Md. The team continued its impressive season, and has been the best team in the ACC so far. The team has a 2-0 record, and is currently ranked #1 in the country.

The team will head to Raleigh this weekend to face North Carolina, their biggest rival. The team is confident, and is looking forward to the challenge.

One of the first questions many anxious students ask when visiting school is, “What is campus safety and security like here?” Although the question may seem obvious, the answers to it often vary. The point that safety and prevention is an integral part of university life in itself is, “We just try to be very visible.”

A police officer stated that “We don’t want students to feel like if they are in the middle of the street, they’re going to get a ticket.”

According to Zick, the satellite office, which opened in 1992, was a result of the “outreach concept of the campus community. Because the satellite office is more accessible to students, it is easier for the students to report crimes and also easier for police officers to interact with students.”

Security officials have indicated that the rise in crime is not as available as more basic police officers are perceived to be. Some people have reported feeling more secure because of the presence of police officers on campus. However, others feel that the officers can be too noticeable, as they are often identified by their uniforms. Some students have even suggested that they would prefer to have more police officers on campus, as they feel that their presence would make them feel safer.

Zick said that crime on campus has increased significantly over the past several years, with an “increase in crime and other incidents.” He said that “the increase in crime is in response to the increase in alcohol use on campus.”

Another type of increase in crime is related to property offenses, such as thefts of cars and bicycles. Zick said that there has been an increase in the number of reports of thefts of cars and bicycles on campus. He said that “the increase in thefts of cars and bicycles is because of the increased availability of cars and bicycles.”

Because of (a) rise in crime and other incidents, university security was drastically improved in 1989. The university security office was created in 1989. The security office includes a security director, a security officer, and a security secretary. The security office is responsible for the safety and security of the university campus.

Because of this rise in crimes and other incidents, university security was drastically improved in 1989. “We expanded the program and paid for it,” said Zick.

According to Zick, the satellite office, which opened in 1992, was a result of the “outreach concept of the campus community.” Because the satellite office is more accessible to students, it is easier for the students to report crimes and also easier for police officers to interact with students.”

Security officials have indicated that the rise in crime is not as available as more basic police officers are perceived to be. Some people have reported feeling more secure because of the presence of police officers on campus. However, others feel that the officers can be too noticeable, as they are often identified by their uniforms. Some students have even suggested that they would prefer to have more police officers on campus, as they feel that their presence would make them feel safer.

Zick also said that the change in name from university security to police was made by the Adventure General of North Carolina Mike Tse. He said that the change in name was made to better reflect the role of the police officers on campus.

Zick said that the change in name is related to the increase in crime on campus. “The increase in crime is in response to the increase in alcohol use on campus.”

Another type of increase in crime is related to property offenses, such as thefts of cars and bicycles. Zick said that there has been an increase in the number of reports of thefts of cars and bicycles on campus. He said that “the increase in thefts of cars and bicycles is because of the increased availability of cars and bicycles.”

Goldstein stuns with varied program

By STEVE BENDIX

As students, we tend to view the faculty as a minor circle of scholars. Louis Goldstein, an associate professor of music, performs in Brendle Fine Arts Hall Thursday that nothing could be further from the truth.

With his program of Haydn, Beethoven and Schoenberg, Goldstein powerfully demonstrated that an ability to think and act creatively is an instrument exclusive to a human being. He is a professor; and perhaps by simple definition, a match maker.

Unfortunately, however, most of the faculty’s spontaneous music has a Pandoras box quality made which the grand manner would have resulted in a sauce, either according to a faculty member, a companion fresh breeze.

Although Goldstein shared his liquid consistency concert with his own students, it was Haydn’s global excellence which could make the grand manner seem, more or less, suddenly and easily out of the water. Goldstein’s forte was the piano, but he also could employ his voice in a poetic way.

In every recital, it delivered an emotional and intellectual transformation. It was clear that the pianist was aware of the signs and the forces.

This second recital was one of Goldstein’s splendid achievements. Louis Goldstein, an associate professor of music, performs in Brendle Fine Arts Hall Thursday that nothing could be further from the truth.

In particular, I was impressed by the sheer beauty of his pianistic work. Any expression of music in the actual recital, would have been...and not to mention his technique. He has been quite the recipient.

After making her debut with her 20th Century, Faith made a splash in the music industry by releasing her debut album. Faith, who sounds like a natural performer, has been praised by critics for her vocal abilities.

In particular, I was impressed by the sheer beauty of his pianistic work. Any expression of music in the actual recital, would have been...and not to mention his technique. He has been quite the recipient.
