Appalled at African apartheid

As long as some Africans are willing to die for freedom, others must be willing to die for oppression.

The United States cannot go on indefinitely accepting the guarantee of the rule of a one-man system. We opened the eyes of the world to the regimes in the past, preventing the immediate danger of the world's largest continent; we should not continue to open the eyes of the world to the darkest continent.

Deacons top Tigers and Tech

By KEITH SYKES

The Deacons recovered after their second loss of the year this week, toppling the Tigers, 83-61, last Saturday afternoon in the Knollwood Coliseum in Winston-Salem. The win allowed the Deacons to advance to 11-3 overall and 3-2 in Atlantic Coast Conference play.

The Deacons are now tied with N.C. State for second place in the ACC. However, the next five games are crucial for the Deacons as they face the defending champion, Wake Forest. The Deacons' next three opponents are all top five teams in the ACC.

The Deacons began the second half a point behind after scoring four unanswered points to pull within one point of Clemson. However, they were unable to sustain the momentum and fell behind by four points.

The Deacons are now 8-2 in ACC play and are looking to maintain their momentum as they prepare for their next game. The Deacons are currently ranked 18th in the latest AP poll and are looking to continue their impressive performance on the court.

Sports

Wake Forest hosts clinic

Wake Forest director of track and cross country John Goodridge is hosting a distance running clinic on the Wake Forest campus Saturday, February 1. Goodridge has been with the Deacons for 13 years.

The clinic will focus on the fundamentals of distance running and will be held in the Coliseum from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. The clinic is free for all runners and is open to the public.

Women finish first at Madison Tourney

By JOHNNY ACKER

The Deacons women's basketball team took second place in the James Madison Invitational Tournament this past weekend. The Deacons defeated Ohio State in the first game, 65-60, and lost to Virginia Tech in the championship game, 71-61.

The Deacons are now 9-4 overall and 3-2 in ACC play. They are currently ranked fifth in the women's basketball team nationally in scoring defense, 54.1.

EAST CAROLINA UNIVERSITY

The Deacons traveled to El Paso, Texas to participate in the Tournament. In their opening game, Wake Forest lost to Texas-Eil Paso, 67-65.

The Deacons shot well above percentage in the second half. The Deacons defeated Ohio State in the first game, 65-60, and lost to Virginia Tech in the championship game, 71-61.

Movie Review

More time needed on scripts

By ELIZABETH A. ASHLEY
Los Angeles Times

Comedy seems to be the lone market mercy this winter, and two new comedies appear to be drawing moderately sized crowds this time. "Nick and Meat," starting Davies, seems promising and may develop into something. It is both funny, though somewhat predictable. The big problem is the low budget, and the director seems to be trying to keep the plot as simple as possible. "Protocol," on the other hand, is a film about a diplomat who has a wife who is a spy. It is not very funny, but there are some good moments. The script is a little too contrived, and the acting is not very good. The plot seems to be about the importance of diplomacy and the success of a particular mission. The film is not very well directed, and the pacing is slow. Overall, "Protocol" is not a very good film and does not live up to its potential.
What is LEAD?

LEAD is a leadership development program for Wake Forest student leaders and potential leaders.

LEAD is predicated on the philosophy that the campus, community and society in general need leaders who are knowledgeable, skilled and effective.

LEAD is based on the belief that these qualities and skills can be developed, and that it is part of the educational mission of the University to provide its students with a quality curriculum in leadership.

LEAD is a product of the division of student life at Wake Forest University and springing from a desire to provide students with the opportunity to develop the skills they will need to be effective leaders now and in the future.

Who Participates in LEAD?

Wake Forest freshmen and sophomores who exhibit promising leadership potential and are interested in personal development as leaders. It is particularly aimed at students with interest in leadership training who wish to develop a broad working knowledge of group development and organizational management.

How to Participate in LEAD?

Contact Susan Stevens, New Dorms office (Ext. 1204) or Michael Reed, College Union office (Ext. 1223) for application materials and additional information. Application deadline is January 30.
