Leaking heart valve requires surgery, President to be sidelined

By Les Manno

The School of Business and Accountancy will announce Wayne Calloway, chairman and CEO of PepsiCo Inc., as a Founders' Day convocation speaker.

Calloway, born in Elkin, grew up in Winston-Salem, attended Wake Forest High School and graduated from the university in 1959. He then attended the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, where he earned a degree in business administration. He went on to concentrate on marketing, and has risen to the top of American business being named for Wayne Calloway, chairman and CEO of PepsiCo Inc. in 1978.

The explosion actually didn't do any major damage to the building, said Dana Watson, the vice president for student life and instructional resources. The vice president will be administering his or her function.

‘Everyone was fine,” Calloway said.

“With any problem there's definitely a way to get to the president, he will fix it and he will follow up,” Buckalew said.

“Wayne Calloway represents the best of Wake Forest. He has risen to the top of American business leadership, and is known for his grittiness in maintaining a sense of what is right,” Thomas S. Hearn, Jr., chairman of the Board of Trustees, said.

The Rev. Dr. J. Lee Green, Wake Forest president, said the university will continue to manage the incident with the results of the architectural report.

“People were very, very concerned about the students being there and the professor being there,” Sides said.

“The moral of the story is to know your way around the campus,” said Facilities Management.

Senators denounces balanced budget amendment

Speaker               Date
Dr. Eunice B. Marsh               Committee on Finance

Balanced budget amendment is a goal of President Bush, Senator Christopher "Kit" Bond of Missouri, and several other Republican senators. According to the senator, "It is a goal shared by the vast majority of the American people."

"The Senate has a responsibility to protect the American people from the risk of inflation," the senator continued. "To provide a moral compass on this issue, the Senate has a responsibility to consider the implications of its actions.

The senator went on to say that the amendment would "require Congress to balance the budget within 10 years. It would require that the federal government live within its means. It would require that the government operate with a surplus, or at least a small deficit."
Vietnam symposium offers multifaceted perspectives

By Jan Aydie

The Vietnam War profoundly altered the conceptions of a generation, strife growing from the ancient border conflicts of the region. Since the early 1960s, the war has been considered one of the most significant historical events of the 20th century. As a result of the war's lasting impact on the region, the United States, and the world, a symposium was held at Wake Forest University to reflect on the experiences of Vietnam in other conflicts. Two events were held in addition to the symposium: "Vignets: 20 Years After," a week-long event highlighting many South Vietnamese students who had come to speak with me, and "Ashcraft: Vietnam: 20 Years After," a week-long event featuring many South Vietnamese students who had come to speak with me.

The symposium, in turn, was divided into three main events: "Aschcraft: Vietnam: 20 Years After," a week-long event highlighting many South Vietnamese students who had come to speak with me, and "Ashcraft: Vietnam: 20 Years After," a week-long event featuring many South Vietnamese students who had come to speak with me. Following his discussion, Phang Ngoc shared light on the Vietnam Perspective of the war. He discussed the role of the United States in the war, the impact of the war on the Vietnamese people, and the lasting effects of the war on the region.

Students studying yellow ribbons around campus next week will also be seriously donating to the cause. Moreover, they will be participating in an annual event to raise money for the Vietnam Veterans of America.

This is the first year that Yellow Ribbon Awareness Week, or "The Yellow Ribbon Week," will be observed in campus.

"It's a candlelight commemorative ceremony in which anonymous testimonials of rape and sexual assault victims will be read," said Taylor. A campus community member will light a candle every minute throughout the ceremony, in recognition of the fact that a rape occurs every minute.

A Date Rape Mock Trial will be held at 7 p.m. Thursday in Reavis 301. The trial will play the part of the accused, victim, and friends, and advanced law students will assist in the production and defense attorneys.

Hubble turnover necessitates move

Scholastica Della Macchietto delivers a lecture and slide presentation Feb. 9 on the universe as seen through the Hubble Space Telescope.

By Beatrice figula

When over 200 people came to hear Della Macchietto’s lecture “The Universe at Last by the Hubble Space Telescope” in Reynolds Hall recently, it was part of a program that would outlive the slide show itself.

As Della Macchietto was finishing up her presentation last week, the slide on the screen showed a picture of the universe's edge, the edge at which the big bang's heat and light reached us. We see that edge as a black hole, which is very "bored" with us. We think we are a black hole, but the universe is too vast for us to see our own black hole.

During the lecture, Della Macchietto mentioned the recent news that the Hubble Space Telescope will be retired after five years of operation. This is because the telescope's orbit has tilted enough to make its observations less accurate. The decision to retire the telescope was made after consultations with NASA and the European Space Agency.

However, the telescope has already made many important discoveries, including the discovery of thousands of extrasolar planets and the confirmation of the accelerating expansion of the universe. It has also helped scientists understand the nature of dark matter and dark energy, two mysterious components of the universe.

Della Macchietto explained that the Hubble Space Telescope has been a valuable tool for astronomers and that its legacy will live on through the data it has collected. She also mentioned that the telescope's successor, the James Webb Space Telescope, is currently under construction and is scheduled to launch in 2021. This telescope will have a much larger mirror than the Hubble, allowing it to see even farther into the universe.

The lecture was well-received by the audience, who asked many questions about the telescope and its discoveries. Della Macchietto was gracious in answering their questions and inspiring the audience to continue learning about the universe.
New campus organization to promote awareness of AIDS through education

By BENJAMIN BROWER

Many college students are fully aware of the dangers of AIDS, but what can they do to prevent it? A new organization has been created to allow students to participate in an effort to educate other students about AIDS.

Senior Catherine Coleman, who heads the group and has traveled to South Africa to assist in an AIDS workshop, said, "The basic goal is to educate other students on campus about AIDS and to teach them what they should know about AIDS."

There are currently 14 members of the group, which meets every Thursday night. The group has already met with the director of Residence Life, Connie Carson, who said the organization is "very important," but she would like to see it grow. The group plans to continue its search for sponsors.

At the meeting on February 8, the group decided to invite special guests to their meetings, instead of just holding lectures. The group plans to have members from the school's Health Educators, which is already a busy organization, work with them.

The group is also planning to set up an emergency response team, which will provide students with information about AIDS and AIDS-related topics.

It should be noted that the repair crew was on location two days before the explosion when Whitlock returned home from New York. When the Whitlocks finally got home Monday, the hit man was gone, but the tank was still on top of the roof. The tank was not removed from the house until Wednesday.

The Killing Fields
Humanity, nature must reconnct

Ealhan, the average American is amazed by the magnitude of the world's problems. The growing news stories of famine, disease, and environmental degradation permeate our daily lives. We are aware of the interdependence of the human species on the health of our planet. Politicians seemingly recognize the time has come to address the impacts of human activities on the earth's life-giving climate.

Among us are those who, through the convictions of their consciences, find it necessary to change direction. These individuals are faced with the question of what steps they must take to make the world a better place. They are aware of the urgency of the situation and wish to contribute to the solution.

Fiscal cutbacks are often more than a minor inconvenience to those who have no legitimate claim. The fortunate few who inherit great wealth, or who have inherited great wealth, are able to indulge in the finer things of life. For the rest of us, the burden of these fiscal cutbacks is much greater.

For instance, the student who is forced to sell off their personal belongings to pay for tuition, or the family who must choose between paying rent and putting food on the table, does not have the luxury of indulging in fine wines or expensive jewelry. For them, every dollar counts.

The cuts to the university's financial aid programs will undoubtedly hurt those who are already struggling. It is important that we recognize the impact of these cuts on the lives of our students and work to alleviate their burden.

The very core of the university's mission is to provide a quality education to those who wish to further their studies. We must continue to advocate for increased funding and support for our educational institutions.

The importance of the arts in the nation is evident. They provide a means for self-expression and a way to express our collective values. The arts are essential to the development of a healthy society.

This fall, the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill will begin a year-long celebration of the arts. The celebration will include a variety of events, such as concerts, lectures, and art exhibits.

The arts are not just for the elite. They are available to everyone. Whether you are a professional artist or simply enjoy watching a good movie, the arts have something for you. The arts are a way to connect with others and to explore new ideas.

The arts are also a way to express our values and beliefs. They provide a means for us to communicate our ideas and thoughts to others. The arts are a way to express our humanity.

The arts are important to the nation and to the university. They are a way to express our values and beliefs and to connect with others. The arts are a way to express our humanity.

On February 4, President Thomas K. Starr Jr. announced that the renovation project of the academic facilities on the campus of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill will begin in the fall of 2022.

The project, which is estimated to cost $450 million, will renovate existing buildings and construct new ones. The renovation will include improvements to the existing facilities, including the addition of new classrooms, labs, and study spaces.

The project is part of a larger plan to enhance the university's facilities and provide a better learning environment for students. The renovation will involve the demolition of some existing buildings and the construction of new ones.

The project is expected to be completed in 2025. During the renovation period, classes will continue to be held in existing buildings, and alternative space will be provided.

The renovation project is expected to create jobs for local contractors and tradespeople. The university has reached agreements with several local companies to ensure that the project will benefit the local economy.

The project is part of the university's efforts to improve its facilities and provide a better learning environment for students. The university has received support from the state of North Carolina and other sources for the project.

The renovation project is expected to be a boon for the local economy, creating jobs and promoting economic growth. The university has made a commitment to use local contractors and tradespeople, as well as to provide training opportunities for local residents.

The project is expected to be completed in 2025, and the university is committed to ensuring that the project is completed on time and within budget.

Vietnam: A visual essay

Alumnus captured war in photos

By Christopher Leonard

BY CHRISTOPHER LEONARD
Converse whose war there were not enough men of prime age to serve.

Ashcraft’s role in the war was as a freelance photographer, capturing images to send to newspapers around the world. “I sold my first photo to AP (The Associated Press) for $100,” he said. “They (AP and newspapers) wanted things for impact, which I tried to be manipulative.”

Since that time, Ashcraft has had photos of six television films and reprinted in several books. Ashcraft’s photos, now on display in the atrium of the Z. Smith Reynolds library, have been donated to the university.

Ashcraft added, “I don’t think anyone. I don’t have causes or agendas anymore. I just meet people who do.”

Ashcraft’s perspective on Vietnam and the combustions: “No one wins in a war.”

Twenty years ago, Barr Ashcraft took more than 30,000 photographs of the war in Vietnam. Ashcraft’s goal was to capture the brutality of the war as well as the faces of a country’s people and cultures. These photographs belonged to many others will be on display throughout February in the Z. Smith Reynolds library.

For Left: Montagnard sister in Vietnam instead spent several years outside the war on Ashcraft and, in addition to his more graphic photos for five to ten dollars, “I had a war, I wouldn’t want him to go fighting in a foreign land,” he said. Although Ashcraft’s distaste for war is unshakable, he said he believes that the U.S. needs a strong military with a very intelligent military leadership and especially President Bill Clinton, the commander-in-chief.

“I want people who have been hurt by war to make decisions about foreign policy. We live in a terrifying time. We live in a powder keg,” he said.

The effects of the war on Ashcraft are lasting. “Most of my friends of the Vietnam War are dying. I have four friends (Vietnamese photographers) and I’m the only one surviving. All of the other people are being killed,” he said. “I think of Vietnam as a ‘test run’ for the future.”

Ashcraft is suspicious of the current leadership in the U.S. “They say ‘nothing happens’ then nothing happens. I think that happens. There is no 30,000, or 300,000. There are not enough men of prime age to serve.”

Ashcraft added, “If you want to save people, you have to have causes and agendas. I just meet people who do.”

Ashcraft’s perspective on Vietnam and the combustions: “No one wins in a war.”

Having just discussed the constitution of society, I learned of one case last week in which a rather high-minded man, who was a resident of the city, decided to reside along with the gathering of approximately 500 persons at an organization meeting. Fascinated by this possibility, I was disappointed that the second annual open meeting of the center of the city was rather poorly attended, and instead chose to attend a different gathering. As I focused on the organization behind the facade, after some time, I found myself in the midst of a large crowd. I was heartened to see the organization of the people and the happiness that seemed to emanate from the crowd. However, I could not help but notice the multitude of people who seemed to be the only ones enjoying the event.

The Epicurean Englishmen come to the City Diner

By Paul Torelli

The Epicurean Englishmen are having their annual dinner at the City Diner. The Englishmen are a group of intellectuals who gather every year to discuss the latest in literature and philosophy. They are known for their sophisticated taste in food and drink. The dinner is a celebration of their shared interests and the opportunity to engage in meaningful conversation.

The Epicureans are known for their love of fine dining, and they have developed a reputation among the city's elite for their refined taste. They often choose to dine at the City Diner, which has been praised for its exceptional cuisine and attentive service. The dinner is a chance for the Epicureans to come together and enjoy each other's company in a setting that is both elegant and comfortable.

The Epicureans are a diverse group, with members ranging in age from their mid-twenties to their mid-fifties. They are united by a shared passion for literature and philosophy, and they meet annually to discuss the latest books and ideas. The dinner is a highlight of their annual gathering, and it is a chance for them to reconnect with old friends and make new acquaintances.

Track team enjoys plenty of sweet success at Virginia Tech Invitational meet

The women's basketball team continued to have a successful season, winning the Maryland Terrapins 66-61 at Cole Field House in College Park, Md. The teams were both fighting furiously for the ACC Tournament crown as the ACC Tournament opener on Nov. 20.

The first half was tightly played, with the Terrapins jumping out to a 32-22 lead at the half. The second half was equally close, with the Terrapins leading 40-39 at the end of the third quarter.

The two teams battled throughout the game, with neither team able to pull away.

In the end, the Terrapins won the game 73-61, despite a strong effort from the Maryland Terrapins.

The senior guard from Washington, D.C., scored 25 points to help lead the Terrapins to victory.

Deacons topple Tech for second ACC win

By SCOTT PLEASANCE

Although things were looking dicey initially, the Deacons emerged victorious 6-2 on Sunday afternoon at Wake Forest. The Deacons captured their second victory in the ACC after edging Georgia Tech 57-67 in Durham the previous weekend.

This game marked the team's first away game in the ACC season and a big road win to start the season was just what the team needed. "It's huge," said senior Mike Mulligan. "We've spent the last three weekends getting ourselves ready for this one."

The Deacons had nine players win their singles matches and three doubles matches, including the No. 1 team of Mike Mulligan and David Byrnes.

"We all remember the first time we played them," Mulligan said. "It was our first ACC game and we were 25-6 at-pressing performance winning our first match."

The Deacons won 13 straight matches from them over the country, including seven from the ACC. "We're ranked No. 1 in the country," said senior Julian Burt. "I think we deserve it."

Some pizza chains use some pretty strange ingredients. Apparently, they don't mind, but we think it matters. At PieWorks, we use only the freshest, best ingredients. Choose from the "classics" or try one of our 50 specialty pies.
