Wake Forest is to be commended for its strict adherence to NCAA rules concerning academic and scholastic eligibility, said Wake Forest associate dean Arthur Ashe at an open convocation Aug. 21.

Also at convocation, Professor Peter W. Allen, chairman of the School of Business, presented the 1989-90 Dean's Citation for Distinguished Teaching, which recognized 30 years of service to the department of Russian languages.

Allen, a former chairman of the department, said the Wake Forest faculty is 10 years and remains in 1989.

As the principal of the address to the convocation, he said the convocation was an opportunity for the university to recognize its teachers.

Allen said the economic principle of "critical minimum effort" can be traced to the efforts of the institution, and that "the individual teacher that has to be recognized, as is so often the case in our academy.

The lesson here for me is that without this critical minimum effort, nothing happens," he said.

Allen said the economic principle of "critical minimum effort" of good business practice, as the old saying goes, "If you don't get the job done, you don't get the paycheck."

Wake Forest's guests at the institute included former Harvard business professor Arthur S. Lewis, who lectured on the importance of academic freedom in the classroom.
WFU Archaeologist, Woodall, Supervises Area Digs, Excavations

By Anneli Silvio

As far as summer jobs go, eight eating dinner on Bear sounds engaging to most people. But for some, it means a job at Wake Forest, two archaeologists of the National Park Service, and their associates, spanning the globe for about three hours in the hot summer sun.

The department of anthropology's field school in which the students participated in two weeks in North Carolina's Yadkin Valley and two weeks in Madagascar. The department of anthropology is interested in excavations in Wilmington, North Carolina, and one of the directors, the Yadkin Rose in Bank City, was a particularly fine specimen. Ravi, who moved to the Bryan Park Service, had been searching for the ruins of a kitchen and the site was located.

During the Kansas Big Woods, Woodall led a team on a dozen different house sites and on a site at Camp Creek. Work was actually an old cabinet, with wooden floors and a rusty faucet, but it was a treasure trove of artifacts, including tools and artifacts such as broken pottery and arrowheads.

Young Soviets Communicate Eagerly, Have High Expectations, Says Sampsell

By James Thomson, Dail and Middle Get

Although he had never been to the Soviet Union himself, David Sampsell, a Wake Forest senior, said he was struck by the excitement of life in the Soviet Union. He had been active in the English department and had spent time in Moscow, Tbilisi, Kiev, Tallinn, and other cities.

His expenses were partially covered by a travel to non-Western cultures. His experiences in the USSR were village dwellers. Although some of his colleagues spoke Russian, he said, "the native language" was the key to communicating.

Banks, Smiley Share Knowledge Of South In New Encyclopedia

By Matthew C. Petes
CU ATHANUM

David Smiley and U.P. Baner, both Wake Forest professors and "southern gentlemen," have gained an audience for their new knowledge of the South's history. Smiley's "Encyclopedia of Southern Culture," a 1,700-page, nine-vol-ume reference containing 650 pages of text, is being released this summer by the University of North Carolina Press. "In the professional study of the American South, the majority of the work has been done for the general public," Baner said. "We are working to help define and describe the boundaries of this region and its history, however, has found to be a fruitful topic in its own right." One of the main questions Smiley has tried to answer in the section of patterns, he said. In his article, he posed the question as an invitation to the reader, "I think we should see this as an opportunity to share our knowledge and understanding of the culture with others." He said there are no characteristics of the people and the culture which cannot give a definition of what or who the South actually represents. There are no language differences, no accent definitions and no specific food preferences that can be used to define the South. Smiley and an editorial of the encyclopedia as an introduction to its most recent publications, a review of the book "Dixie and Dissection in the American South."

Senator Biden To Address WFU Law School Forum

Old Gold and Black Staff Report

Senator Biden To Address WFU Law School Forum

Chairman Joseph R. Biden III of Delaware will be the first treasures Series at the Wake Forest School of Law.

Biden, a former trial lawyer, will speak at 7 p.m. Monday in the law school courtroom. The admittance will cover judicial appointments, the proper role of the Supreme Court, the judiciary, the European Court and the Court of Justice, and the quality of appropriate measures for constitutional amendments.

He will answer questions from the audience afterward. The session has developed crime legislation, particularly on the issues of civil rights and criminal enforcement.

Biden is one of the chief architects of a 1968 drug bill that has been passed that achieved for a California coleg-level national drug director or "drug czar" in the office. Biden, 66, is the second active senator Democrat on the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, where he is chairman of the Subcommittee on European Affairs.

He is also the author of the Senate's "arresting foreign policy proposal of civil rights legislation and an advanced of some crime prevention legislation.

He is chairman of the Special Commission on Criminal and Civil Justice. The North American Assembly, which is the parliamentary division of NATO.

A graduate of the University of Delaware and the Syracuse University Law School, Biden lives in Wilmington, Del., with his wife Jill and three children.

National Debate Events

The Wake Forest Debate Team will host the National Debate Tournament next weekend. The national competition is one of the top 200 national debate events.

Delaware's Senate, Wake Forest's debate coach, will direct the three-day event. About 120 high schools will compete, with each school sending 20 participants, 10 judges and 11 guests.

Delaware will be the first lecture chairman of the Delaware Senate and Delaware Assembly, which is the parliamentary division of NATO.

Apathy is Dead at WFU

Ashley Hairston

Students claim a "spoiled rich group of smart, rich people who don't have to work" is to blame for the apathy that has spread on campus. In Hannah Dudgeon's Hi! I'm From WFU column last week, she discussed the ongoing discussions among the student body regarding the high numbers of "spoiled rich people," AIDS, religion, lack of parking, etc., and how this apathy has begun to affect our lives. While I wholeheartedly agree that there is indeed a problem, I believe that we are all too quick to blame others for the problems that surround us.

The problem is not that we don't have the resources to fix our problems. It is that we don't want to. I was born and raised in the south, and I have learned that the way to fix problems is not to blame others, but to take action. This is not just a problem at WFU, but at every college and university in the country. We have all experienced the apathy that surrounds us, and it is time that we take action to fix it.

The students of WFU are not the only ones to blame. We have all contributed to the problem. We have all been too quick to blame others for our problems, and we have not taken action to fix them. This is not to say that we are not aware of the problem. We are all aware of the problem, and we all know that something needs to be done. But what are we doing to fix it? What are we doing to take action?

The solution is not to blame others, but to take action. We need to take action to fix our problems. This is not just a matter of individual action, but of collective action. We need to work together to fix our problems. We need to have a sense of community, and we need to work together to fix our problems.

In conclusion, I urge everyone to take action to fix our problems. We are all aware of the problem, and we all need to take action to fix it. We need to have a sense of community, and we need to work together to fix our problems.
Learn from Racial Mistakes

omething is in America. Given our native diversity, conflict is expected. Conflict is an ever-present, inevitable fact of life. However, recent events in the United States have shown a sharp rise in racist attidudes, particularly in the form of violence.

Recently, Alexandria Ocasio-Cortez, a

Democrat, was the victim of racist taunts.

A new wave of racism with a twist. Instead of just being verbal or physical, this form of racism has become more subtle and insidious.

People can still deny that they are racists, but the way they talk about races is revealing.

One thing that is clear is that we must be more aware of the language we use.

In the face of this, the need for diversity,

tolerance, and understanding is more important than ever. We must work to build a society where everyone feels welcome and valued.

The emphasis placed on the Honor System at Wake Forest should be preserved.

The system is in place to prevent cheating and to ensure that students are held accountable for their actions. The system also serves as a means of building character and integrity.

It is not perfect, but it is a crucial part of the Wake Forest system.

I don't mean to suggest that our Honor System is flawless. There may be instances where students feel mistreated or where the system is not fair. However, these instances should not be used as an excuse to undermine the system.

It is important to remember that the Honor System is in place to protect the integrity of the university and its students. It is a tool for ensuring that everyone is held to the same standards.

I urge everyone to support the Honor System and to do their part in maintaining its integrity.

Chippy Chisholm of Orange's last "giggle humbler.

With 15 minutes left in the second half, McNamara maneuvered his way to tie the game at 2-2. Chiz and Chisholm scored the only goals.

Wake Forest continued to dominate offense throughout most of the second half.

It was a very physical game, with several players committing foul after foul. McNamara was forced to leave the game in the final minutes due to a slight hamstring pull.

Late in the final period, Hartwick was forced to put the Demon Deacons back in the game late in the second half.

Foreigner No Longer Foreign to WFU Theater

By Nancy Hanford

October 28, 1989

With plans for four main productions that have never been produced at WFU, the theater departments draws on students, faculty, and professionals to stage productions for the theater, dance, and music departments.

Written by Larry Shepard and directed by Donald Wolfs, The Foreigner is a play that deals with different cultures, and whether one can succeed and be part of that culture.

In the play, the two main characters are from different cultures. The first character is from Africa and the second is from Europe. The play is about how they deal with each other and how they adjust to one another's culture.

In addition to the main characters, there are also a few other characters, including a local resident and a few visitors. The play is set on a small island, and the characters are all part of the local community.

The play is about the culture shock that the characters experience when they first arrive on the island. They are both isolated and feel alienated, but they eventually learn to adapt and understand each other.

The Foreigner is a play that explores the theme of cultural difference and how people can come to understand each other despite their differences.

Drama Student Wins Two Awards

By Christian Russell

October 28, 1989

One year of experience in Wildflower's ensemble program, Cindy Thompson directs The Technical Theater Award at the end of the year as a way to recognize the outstanding Advanced Awards for outstanding students in the theater department.

Thompson, who also received the Outstanding Technical Award, designed and directed several sets for the magnet production last year, but they had to be held up because of the雨 season.

Thompson's work served her as stage manager for the Front Page and the dinner theater.

Problems are naturally being led to the stage management program in a variety of ways. Cindy Thompson, the director of the Wake Forest University theater program, decided to give Thompson the chance.

"I thought it might be a great opportunity to work with the kids, and I was really looking forward to it," Thompson said. "I've always wanted to work with the kids."

In addition to the awards, Thompson has also been named the Outstanding Technical Award.

Music Faculty Performs in Brendle
