Kurland Discusses Basis of Constitution in Tocqueville Lecture

By LISA YASINSKI

"The Constitution is not a philosophical con-] cept derived from the historical circumstances of the eighteenth century. Instead, it is a document that evolved from the political and social realities of the time," said Prof. Philip B. Kurland, a historian of law and politics, as he presented his fifth lecture in the Tocqueville Forum, "The History of Rights and Responsibilities in a Republic: Sovereignty, Liberty, and Equality," at Wake Forest University on Oct. 26. Kurland, who is also the school's director of legal studies and human rights, is the author of several books on the Constitution and its history.

In his lecture, Kurland discussed the role of the Constitution in shaping the development of the United States as a republic, focusing on the concepts of sovereignty, liberty, and equality. He argued that these concepts were not merely abstract ideals, but rather were central to the founders' understanding of the American political system.

Kurland explained that in the context of the eighteenth century, the idea of sovereignty was not a new one, but rather was emerging as a response to the political and social changes taking place at the time. The concept of sovereignty was developed in response to the challenges of maintaining a balance between the central government and the various states that comprised the new nation.

Kurland also discussed the concept of liberty, which he argued was central to the founders' vision of a republic. He noted that the founders saw liberty as not only the right to be free from interference by the government, but also as a means of ensuring the survival of the republic. Kurland argued that the founders believed that liberty was necessary for the survival of a republic, and that the Constitution was created to protect liberty from the dangers of tyranny.

Finally, Kurland discussed the concept of equality, which he argued was also central to the founders' vision of a republic. He noted that the founders believed that equality was necessary for the survival of the republic, and that the Constitution was created to protect equality from the dangers of inequality.

In conclusion, Kurland argued that the Constitution was not merely a legal document, but rather was a political and social document that reflected the founders' vision of a republic. He noted that the Constitution was not perfect, and that it was a living document that continued to evolve over time. He concluded by arguing that the Constitution was a document that was still relevant today, and that it continued to shape the political and social landscape of the United States.

Kurland is the author of several books on the Constitution and its history, including "The History of Rights and Responsibilities in a Republic: Sovereignty, Liberty, and Equality," which he presented as the fifth lecture in the Tocqueville Forum.

Faculty Approves Minor in International Studies

By LISA YASINSKI

The Wake Forest undergraduate faculty approved a new, interdisciplinary minor in international studies at its Nov. 9 meeting.

The minor will require a total of 30 credits, consisting of 20 credits of required courses and 10 credits of elective courses. The required courses include an introduction to international relations, a course on international law, and a course on international economics. The elective courses will be selected from a list of approved courses, and will be determined by each student's academic advisor.

The minor is designed to provide students with a broad understanding of the political, economic, and social issues that affect the global community. It will also provide students with the skills and knowledge necessary to succeed in a variety of careers, including government, business, and non-profit organizations.

The minor is open to all undergraduate students, regardless of major. Students interested in the minor should consult with their academic advisor to determine the courses that will best fit their academic goals.

WCU Purchases Houses on Polo Two Theme Houses to be Added

By LISA YASINSKI

Wake Forest University has purc-}as}e}d two homes on Polo Road for $20,000 each, according to Stephen Elledge, assistant dean of residence life. Elledge said that the university has been working on acquiring additional housing for the past year, and that the purchase of these homes will help to alleviate the housing shortage on campus.

The two homes, which are located at 2 and 3 Polo Road, were purchased for $20,000 each. The houses are 2,500 square feet each, and each has four bedrooms and two bathrooms. They are located near the center of campus, and are within walking distance of the student center and other campus facilities.

Elledge said that the university will use the homes to provide additional housing for students. He noted that the university has been working to increase the number of on-campus housing options for students, and that the purchase of these homes is a step in that direction.

Alumna Named Minority Admissions Counselor

By HARRIET CHAPMAN

Wake Forest alumna Michelle Conner, a native of Princeton, West Virginia, is serving as assistant director of minority admissions. She replaced Al McMillan Jan. 1.

Conner is concerned that the number of minority students is too small for the Wake Forest community. "You don't want to recruit for minority students - you're going to get those ap­pointees while the fire department is fighting a fire," Conner said, she hopes the fire department and recruiters who visited schools earlier this fall, will fill the positions Conner said she believes are presently junior students in the community. She is scheduled to travel in the community and visit schools there and in some distant places.

False fire alarms not only in­vestigators, but also that those who are presently juniors are those who are presently juniors. She is also scheduled to travel in the community and visit schools there and in some distant places.

As minority admissions counselor, Conner's duties in­clude recruiting the applications of minority students, writing let­ters to prospective minority students, and informing them of scholarships that may be available.

In connection with a Feb. 7 death in a house in Memphis, Tennessee, where four students were found dead, the Wake Forest campus has been put on a "high alert" status. The campus will remain on a "high alert" status for one day, seven days a week.

To report information concern­ing the guilty parties should con­tact Campus Crime Stoppers through the public safety office.

Applications For Residence in Huffman House Available

By JANE E. DULAP

Applications for residence in Huffman House for the 1987-88 academic year will be available March 20-27 in the office of residence life and housing. Completed applications are due no later than 5 p.m. March 31.

Applicants must sign up for a 3-minute interview upon submitting their applications to the housing office.

Both men and women are invited to apply. Huffman, which first became co-ed in this academic year, provides a third house which encourages academic and social involvement among its residents.

The group activities for the academic year include an in-house lecture series, a Big Brothers/Big Sisters program, social events, and an annual review of a child's reading ability.

Interviews will be conducted March 22-25. Housing assignments will be posted in Huffman's main lounge by 5 p.m. March 27, at which time housing contracts will be available. Signing the contract, which is due by March 31, completes the application process.

Huffman residents enjoy a unique atmosphere and camaraderie among its 120 residents.

Faculty Talent Show Raises Funds for BSU

By CYNTHIA WILLIAMS

Several faculty members performed in the faculty talent show sponsored by the Baptist Student Union, Saturday at Brenola Recital Hall.

The show, organized by senior Jeff Bailey, included comedy acts by David Smiley, professor of music and John Boudreaux, assistant professor of classical languages, Chesapeake Christmas presented a dramatic monologue, LeClair Harris, instructor of music, played some piano selections, and Pat Den, guitar instructor, gave his final performance of her spring guitar recital.

William Hamilton, the resident dean of the college, was the master of ceremonies for the show. Hamilton also played the banjo during the evening.

Handler, the music chapel and Baptist campus union, said that money raised from the talent show will go toward the funding of the summer missions program. BSU is committed to raise $3,000 for the program so that Wake Forest students will be able to participate, Frasher said.

The summer missions program includes, among other things, chaplaincy positions and internships at specific places in the Habitat for Humanity in America, Georgia, children's homes, and even a position in India. Frasher said these internship positions are located all over the country as well as in the Philippines and Canada.

The student legislature passed the Greek/Student Athlete Involvement Resolution at their March 3 meeting.

The bill recommended to encourage social interaction between student athletes and Greek organizations.

Legislators approved a resolution supporting participation for students to have microphones under residence hall rooms. The bill noted that this privilege would help improve the quality of student life on campus.

Legislators also supported a bill recommending that caffeine-free soft drinks and teas be placed in the snack pit.

The answer to all these questions, I think, is education, plain and simple. To make all students (except for those few who drop out of the system) see the need for greater success. It needs for greater success. The language houses combine concentration on group activities in an academically-oriented environment.

"Six More Weeks of Winter: The Groundhog Strikes Back"

North Carolina seems to be very concerned with just about everything. The General Assembly has passed laws requiring us to wear safety belts, which feels good is acceptable, and that people have the right to risk their lives and fortunes to unsafe ideas.

Critique Negligent

Mr. Kleinman’s “review” of The Queen and The Rebel, is not only the best of the past week, but it also the best of the past year. It was a fine piece of writing, and it is a pity that the paper had to print it two weeks ago, although it is a pity that the paper had to print it at all.

When you hear the words “Public Safety” or “Police,” you think of the police officers who run the wheels of society, and who are the first to answer the door of the home that is being robbed, who are the first to answer the door of the home that is being broken into. The police officers who are the first to answer the door of the home that is being robbed, who are the first to answer the door of the home that is being broken into.

But, whatever it is called, totalitarianism is an urgent issue for all of us. It is the possession of weapons. Thousands of innocent people have been killed by the police, and we must be concerned about every aspect of this issue.

Another reasonable idea that needs to be eliminated is the practice of having thousands of students vote for their own councils. This practice is a violation of democracy and all its ideals.

In North Carolina (or any other state) it is really about safety. If we really want to save lives, we must be concerned with every aspect of the lives of its residents.

Villella Directs Miami City Ballet Performance of Modern Works

By ED BONAHUE
Villella's leadership, the young company performed some splendid works of modern ballet choreographed by George Balanchine; Walid Rosemblat (music by Michael Toth) and Bolsen (music by Louis Moreau Gottschalk). The company also performed Fantasies (music by Ralph Vaughan Williams), a recent work by John Clifford, who has choreographed for the Los Angeles Ballet and the New York City Ballet. This final work was a work of great beauty and substance, with Terri Treadway and Cincinnati Ballet dancer Michelle Villella as the principal dancers. Although each work performed by the company contained some degree of feeling, each work revealed some problems or problems in execution that detracted from the inherent value of the performance. Faulty technique largely obscured Villella's interpretations. Balanchine's Rite of Passion (1967) passed the concert. The work contains some of the most exciting passages of the night's performances. William Mitchell, an international ballet, contained some sort of an idea that lacked a viable company. The work depicts the forms, and the music sounded incoherent. The night's performance was not without some redeeming value. The second and third works performed evoked an emotional force that seemed to carry the audience all the way through the piece. Despite the problems that were evidenced. The lighting and costuming of each piece were well-done, and several performers turned in highly effective performances.

When trying to describe the performance as a whole, the adjective which comes to mind is "passion," and enough energy was expended to make the concert on Saturday night a success. Several other works were well-done, and several performers turned in highly effective performances.
Troy Bogues and point guard Del Negro at midcourt. Guarded by Chucky Brown and Bo Kimble, in the game's opening minutes Bogues обошет свободным броском в 20-2050, he scored a pregame warmup. Charles Shackleford, the senior forward, was named to the All ACC team. Wake Forest appeared to have the game in hand when Bogues made good on both ends of a one-on-one opportunity with three seconds left, putting the Demon Deacons up 83-82.

The Demon Deacons, stung by the loss, turned to the bench for some relief. Vann Earl, who had scored 16 points, came off the bench to make two consecutive 3-pointers, and the Deacons pulled within 85-83 with 2:25 left in the game. But the Tigers' run was short-lived as the Demon Deacons responded with a 6-0 run to take the lead back.

Wake Forest's win was its third consecutive victory, and it improved its overall record to 17-9. The Deacons, who fell to 15-11, will look to regroup for their next game against Duke on Saturday.

Notes and Highlights

- Troy Bogues, who had 18 points and 10 rebounds, was named the ACC Player of the Week.
- The Deacons' win snapped a two-game losing streak for the Tigers.
- The game was marred by a controversial call in the final seconds, when a shot by Wake Forest's Allen Crabbe was ruled to be off target, despite evidence to the contrary.
- With the win, Wake Forest moved to 11-6 in the ACC and 17-9 overall.
- The Tigers, who fell to 15-11, will look to regroup for their next game against Duke on Saturday.
ACC Teams Gun for Title In Tourney This Weekend

The ACC men's basketball tournament, one of the most exciting and popular sporting events, begins today at the Capital Center in Landover, Md. While North Carolina is the favorite, it will not be an easy task. It is in the top seed, the tournament is sure to be tough.

The Tar Heels are ranked No. 6 in the nation, but they must watch out for Ohio State, which is ranked No. 12. The Buckeyes are tough and are expected to give the Tar Heels a good game.

Virginia is also a threat. They are ranked No. 23 in the nation and are looking to make a statement.

Maryland is another team that cannot be overlooked. They are ranked No. 9 in the nation and have a history of success in the tournament.

Other teams to watch include Duke, Georgia Tech, and Wake Forest. Each of these teams has the talent and experience to make a deep run.

The ACC Tournament will be a tough test for all the teams involved. It is sure to be a exciting few days of basketball.

$500,000,000 OF RESEARCH HELPED CLIFF SHAW PLAY BASEBALL AT AGE 85.

In November 1973, Cliff Shaw was stricken with cancer. Fortunately, it was detected early enough. And with surgery, Cliff was able to continue living a healthy, active life. There was a time when such a diagnosis was virtually hopeless. But today, cancer is being beaten. Over the years, we've spent $300,000,000 on research. And we've made great strides against many forms of cancer. With early detection and treatment, the survival rate for colon and rectal cancer can be as high as 75% for localized disease, as high as 40% for breast cancer, and as high as 90% for cervical cancer. Today, over 200,000 people who get cancer can get well. It's a whole new ball game.
