The Wake Forest chapter of the NAACP launched an economic development advisory committee on Monday at the beginning of the semester.

The group was assembled by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, which is a national organization that promotes civil and human rights. The chapter is looking to promote economic development and social and political equality for African-American and other minority communities.

The NAACP now has a chapter in most major cities in the United States. The organization was established in 1909 and has been active in the civil rights movement for over 100 years.

The chapter is currently focused on several initiatives, including job training and education programs, community organizing, and advocacy for economic justice.

Several students running in judicial elections

The Student Government Election Commission will oversee the process of electing student leaders, including the judicial council. The election process involves filing a petition, presenting a statement of candidacy, and campaigning for the position.

The judicial council is responsible for hearing and ruling on cases that arise within the student body. The council consists of several members, each with specific roles and responsibilities.

Bowman Gray Research Team Studies AIDS-Compounding Drug

The team conducted a study on the potential of a new drug to treat HIV/AIDS. The research involved testing the drug on human cells and analyzing its effect on the virus.

The study was conducted in collaboration with the National Institutes of Health and the South Africa Medical Research Council. The results of the study were published in a peer-reviewed scientific journal.

The drug was found to be effective in reducing the viral load and improving the overall health of the patients.

Groups Active On- and Off-campus

By Amy March

The Student Government of Wake Forest University last week released its annual report on student groups. The report, which includes information on the number of active groups on campus, is released to help students understand the diversity of activities available to them.

The report, which covers the academic year 1990-1991, found that there were 52 active groups on campus, including 10 Greek organizations. This is a decrease from the previous year, when there were 57 active groups.

The report also found that the largest groups on campus were the intercollegiate athletics programs, with 23 teams in total. The second largest group was the Greek organizations, with 10 active chapters.

The report also included information on the number of students participating in each group. The largest group was the intercollegiate athletics programs, with 1,234 students participating. The second largest group was the Greek organizations, with 456 students participating.

The report concludes by encouraging students to get involved in the many groups available on campus. "There is something for everyone here," the report states. "Whether you're interested in sports, music, politics, or just want to meet new people, there is a group for you at Wake Forest University."

Election Hype?
Run for Office — Please

The election process is fundamentally democratic. It is a system of nominating and selecting leaders to carry out the will of the people. The process is intended to be fair and transparent, and it should be a means by which we can express our preferences and make our voices heard. The right to vote is a fundamental right and a cornerstone of our democracy. It is important that we take our civic duty seriously and participate in the election process.

Chaparral Unalert

The United States has always been a place where the third party does not have much luck. The primary system is in favor of the two major parties, and this has led to a situation where most elections are decided by the two major parties. This is a problem because it limits the diversity of political voices and viewpoints in the United States.

Christian associates of the White House are discussing a solution to the problem of third party candidates. They believe that the primary system is undemocratic and that it should be replaced with a system that is more representative of the people. This is a good idea because it would allow for more diversity in political representation and would give the people a chance to have their voices heard.

Senior Leonard Davis

If it is up to the moderates — the mainstream of American politics — to run a third party, they will probably fail. The moderates are associated with political correctness and are associated with alcohol and cigarette abuse. They are also associated with alcohol and cigarette abuse.

Chaparral

Chaparral is a student newspaper that covers campus news and events. It is published weekly and is distributed throughout Wake Forest University. The newspaper covers a wide range of topics, including campus politics, student life, and national news.

Calling all Moderates to Form a Third Party

If there is a third party to form, it should be a party that is not associated with political correctness and is not associated with alcohol and cigarette abuse. It should be a party that is not associated with alcohol and cigarette abuse.

I looked each magazine up in those convenient red periodical books, and then searching diligently on each floor for the bound magazine volumes, I finally found the books I needed. I sat down at a desk, got out paper and pen and began looking up the articles. Things were going okay until I opened the February 1990 issue of Newsweek. This was the most recent writing I could find on the subject. I turned to the page it should have been on and was completely shocked. Someone had ripped out the article. I sat in dismay for a few minutes, trying to calm my surging anger. What could this person possibly have been thinking? Is a dime and two minutes (to copy a two-page article) too much trouble? Of course, I have no way of telling whether this person was deliberately trying to keep others from using the article, or was just too lazy to photo-copy it. But that is completely beside the point. Despite this person’s motives, he obviously has no respect for his fellow classmates. As I stared at the ripped-out page, I could not help but think about the sadness of the situation. When grades or pressures become so important that they force us into blatantly unjust acts, something is wrong with our priorities. Granted, good grades are difficult to obtain at Wake Forest and are desperately needed for admission into graduate schools or good entry-level jobs, but are they worth compromising one’s morals—especially when other people are also affected? Since childhood, we have all heard of the meanness of the dog-eat-dog "real" world. You have to look out for yourself because no one else will. You cannot trust anybody. Strive for material success and power in all things you do. Do not let anybody stand in your way. It is a rat race out there. The word "rat" is not used to praise humanity; humans are being likened to rodents. Something is definitely wrong with this analogy, but we grossly overlooked this insult. Instead, we thrive on its very meaning. Maybe my fellow student was trying to slowly wean me from the idealistic collegiate life into the realistic ways of the "real world." For that, perhaps I should thank my fellow student. I am surely (and sadly) now much more prepared for life after college.

Brown Leads Runners
At ACC Championship

By Russell Heise

Although the Wake Forest men's and women's track teams finished in seventh and eighth place, respectively, at the ACC Championships last weekend in Clemson, junior Demone Deacons turned in fine individual efforts.

Leading the men once again was junior All-American hurdler Steve Brown, who captured a first-place finish in the 110 meter hurdles and a time of 13.76. The victory gave Brown his second consecutive conference championship in the event.

Senior Joe Harze continued his consistent string of performances this spring with a third-place finish in the 400 meter event. Harze finished in a time of 44.17, behind Rob Brown of N.C. State and Larry Clark of Clemson.

Junior Mike Guegan, who competed in the 800 meters at last year's ACC Championship, finished eighth in the 800 meter race and a time of 2:27.27.

Wake Forest's two finishes in the finals of the 1500 meter race, junior Tim Hume finished in 15th position with a time of 13.50, while sophomore Tricia Robinson's time of 13.85 was good enough for sixth place.

On Powers' heels, junior All-American hurdler Steve Brown wins the 110 meter hurdles, with a time of 13.76.

Miami Blues Scores High in Humor, Low in Plot

By Ryan Perry

Miami Blues, a new play by Robert Williams, is currently being performed at the Student Center. The play is set in a town where everyone has a hobby, but no one is good at it.

The play features a man who is trying to become a successful author, a woman who is learning to paint, and a group of students who are trying to start a band.

The play received high marks for its humor and witty dialogue. However, the plot was described as weak and predictable.

"I didn't really care about the plot," said one reviewer. "I was more interested in the jokes and the characters."

Miami Blues is currently playing at the Student Center and runs until Sunday.

CONVERSATION

Nothing is more challenging than: The whole idea of what we're doing as well as we're doing kind of took the fun out of it...
Uncle Green to Perform Saturday

By Derek McHale

Uncle Green and Two Pound Planet will be playing at the South Hall/ Huffman House/ Hall Radio "Band Thing" Saturday night. Due to financial and technical problems, South's Southern Jam was cancelled with Huffman's "Sammy" and co-sponsored by Huffman and Bostwick residence halls. In case of rain or extreme cold, the Band Thing will be moved to the Taylor House lounge. Two Pound Planet will open the show at 8 p.m. Uncle Green will perform at 9 p.m.

Two Pound Planet is comprised of Wake Forests and Chris Hoerter, Joe Topp, Genni Camacho, Edie Forrest and Handy Johnson. Denise and Chris Horner Said, "Two Pound Planet is like a reunion of old, old friends, AGICO and Rich James.

Although the band has only been playing together since late January, the membership has composed original songs. Hoerter said he is excited about opening for Uncle Green. "This is a group I listen to by day and hear on the radio," he said.

Uncle Green's "The Invisible Man" was released in March and the band has been working on their fourth album in the defunct Studio. The show was upbeat and danceable, familiar with some tracks that accentuated the difference between a live show and an album.
