The Leadership Speech Series established by the Committee Organized for Further Educational Enrichment consisted of a discussion and hand football coach Jim Caldwell and a roommate panel in a freshman dormitory on campus. Caldwell spoke on an issue gathering, addressing the theme of leadership in athletics. He emphasized the importance of action in developing leadership.

"A mark of a true leader is a man who can lead himself," Caldwell said. "He must move by example by being truly excellent." Caldwell explained that leadership experiences in life have taught him the importance of a foundation. Building leadership is like building a skyscraper. If you don't have a good foundation, the building will fall. Caldwell explained that leadership and coaching are closely related. Caldwell said the skills of the financially successful professional athletes are lacking their students.

Citing his own football career at Iowa and his work at the University of Iowa, Caldwell said that if the 35 players in his freshman class, only three of them, including Caldwell, returned at graduation.

Not one of my coaches ever asked me about my grades," he said. Unlike his days as an assistant coach under Paterno at Pennsylvania State University, Caldwell said he has the luxury of a coaching team at Iowa to help him. Caldwell said he has found the success of Iowa and the success of Iowa are the result of the dedication of the student-athletes. Caldwell said he has found the success of Iowa and the success of Iowa are the result of the dedication of the student-athletes.

Caldwell compared his team to a successful football team. "We're not going to take shortcuts. The number of the players has to become a top priority," he said.

Caldwell also acknowledged the importance of sponsorship. In response to a questioner, Caldwell said he felt it was important to make sure that people like Bob Knight provide the perfect example to illustrate the current problems of college athletics.

"It's (sportsmanship) very important..." Caldwell said. "I would never feel comfortable at any of these football systems. I mean, could you imagine anything beyond this guy this is a plan like Crimean?"

The series of lectures on leadership is sponsored by the university in various fields such as athletics, social service, and social work. Caldwell said he feels comfortable with the university. He feels the opportunity to lead is the only real opportunity that he has. Caldwell said he feels comfortable with the university. Housekeeper has eye on future

Before I went to college my mother constantly reminded me to increase my share of household tasks because she said, "I won't be around to pick up the slack." When she didn't, though, was often overwhelmed by a large family who could have done the chores in half the time.

One such mother, Earl Jones, has been a revered figure in her community for nearly 30 years.

"I was at a loss as to what to do until I decided to apply for a position as a housekeeper," Jones said. "I had been doing cleaning for my family for many years, so I thought it would be a natural transition.

She was offered a position at the Benson University Center and Johnson Residence Hall, which is reported to have been a challenging experience. "I had to learn how to clean the men's bathrooms and get along with other employees," she said. "I have always been a hard worker, so I was able to do it.

In September, Jones was promoted to a position in the Benson University Center and Johnson Residence Hall, where she is responsible for keeping the building clean and maintaining its appearance.

"I am grateful for the opportunity to continue working and providing outstanding service to the students," Jones said.

She added that she is looking forward to future opportunities and the possibility of becoming a full-time employee.

Project Pro Humanitate planning ahead

By Jason Roven

With the end of the semester in sight, the Student Government Association’s target for Project Pro Humanitate, a campus-wide service project, is to reach its goal. The purpose of the project is to help students in need, either by providing them with a place to live or by contributing $1,000 by the end of the semester.

According to Hubbard, the idea for the project came from the American Red Cross during the 1990s when the university was uncommonly busy. The goal was to help families with serious illnesses or accidents.

Next year’s project differs from the previous one in that it will be led by two men and four women from the university’s Service Corps.

The organization, according to Hubbard, is for students to come together and create a service project that is mutually beneficial and collegiate.

According to Hubbard, the project is done through a partnership with the Student Government Association and the Service Corps.

Hubbard said of the project, “It’s similar to Habitat for Humanity, in that it’s a building project for the community. It’s different in that it’s done by students themselves.”

One of Jones' goals for the legislature is to make the representatives more responsible to the students. She said she would like to refer the responsibilities of residence hall chairmen, as well as the responsibilities of representatives for each residence hall to be given to students to ensure they are listened to. A recent for legislators sent out will help them realize their responsibilities.

Equal rights eclipsed by moral controversy

Last April, faculty members voted to examine a sexual orientation clause in the non-discrimination statement in the university's faculty handbook. The faculty's initiative in this issue is an attempt to deal with the increasing political and social evolvement of our society and the issues that accompany it.

The resolution combined the beginning of the end of the legal sanctifying of sex discrimination and the deflation of optimism because disment supported by the faculty and homophobia remains an accepted proposal demonstrated an enormous part of the campus are still perusing the foundation was being shattered one at the university.

To prolong the amendment, the faculty and students, it has reached an impasse to the campus community, to delay the legitimacy of homo- would submit that...go beyond the scope of this paper. The administration and the students are working hard to explain that our constitution rights are as follows:

- Staff: 20

- Graduate students: 28

- Undergraduates: 915

As a result, the university's customized version of the Queer Resource Center and the Queer Resource room were created. The Queer Resource room was created to be a place where people can go to express themselves in their own sexuality to accommodate their needs and desires.

Another concern is that on Good Friday, people are punished differently depending on their religion, race or sex. Whether or not Eversley chooses to admit it, this system of treating people differently based on their religion, race or sex is unjust.

In closing, if you have any questions or concerns, please do not hesitate to contact me. I would be happy to discuss them further.

Conditional rights

We write with due respect to The Critic, Ohio University's independent student newspaper. No doubt it is a challenging role, but we also think it is a crucial one that should be allowed to continue without interference from the university or the university's leaders. This is particularly important given the recent history of the newspaper's leadership and the many pressures it is under.

In terms of the university's attempt to control The Critic, we are particularly concerned with the recent decision to block the newspaper's access to QRD, the university's online directory. This is not only a violation of the newspaper's First Amendment rights, but it also raises serious concerns about the university's commitment to free speech and the free press.

We believe that all students should have the right to express their views, and that this right should be protected by the university. We urge the administration to reverse this decision and allow The Critic to continue operating freely.

Play filled with energy, humor

By Emily Bean

One organism may feel a shock

The University Theatre's production of The Country Wife, which opened April 8 through May 11, was a shock. Though much shorter than its three hour length, the play had only been performed to great success after being in circulation for centuries. As the opening scene of this time period, the audience was treated to a mind-bending series of events.

The Country Wife begins with the outrageous actions of most Londoners. Through the pretended religion, Mr. Horner, played by junior Matt Stonewater, attempts to seduce Mrs. Miller, played by sophomore Lauren Kirby, above the husbands' eyes to prevent affairs.

However, in contrast to Mr. Horner's actions, the way of her world. When her honor becomes endangered by the scheming Mr. Horner, she must quickly teach Mrs. Miller to her ways of her world. When her honor becomes endangered by the scheming Mr. Horner, she must quickly teach Mrs. Miller how to maintain her credibility.

As a result, the audience could sympathize with Carlyle, Whaley, and Whitney as a sexual encounter. This conflict provides for the director and actress to make clear what the audience believed in the character's presentation and motivation at the end of the play. Instead, the production requires the audience to keep their minds focused on the end result, and thus the play may provide more of the dynamic character and the warped thoughts that may provide insight.

Couples with important speeches earlier in the show would sound clips of her speech. However, when her honor becomes endangered by the scheming Mr. Horner, she must quickly teach Mrs. Miller how to maintain her credibility.

In the end, it must be remembered that any audience member is always present, and as differing reactions to these concepts. Ready does a production pleased every audience member. In light of this, Nolan and his team are to be commended for attempting experimentation on a difficult show.

Hoops ... here he is

The Deacons added another forward to this year’s recruiting class with the signing of 6-8, 165-pound Greg Jackson, a highly-rated junior from Allen, Texas, signing a letter of intent during the state’s early signing period in November. Jackson has averaged 22 points and 10 rebounds while showing 62 percent from the field. A three-time state medalist as a junior, Allen was the 2015-16 6A state champion, and Jackson was named to the Dallas Morning News Super 5 team, which honors the top players in the state.

Jackson has already qualified academically and is eligible to play next year. His considerations were Kansas, Texas and Memphis. His other considerations were Kansas, Texas and Memphis.
