Alcohol Policy Affects Campus

By KAREN REICH

You have to be at least 21 years old to purchase, possess, or use any alcoholic beverages in North Carolina. So what? On campus, however, the Student ACADEMIC Yearly Alcohol Policy, which was approved last December, prohibits the use or possession of alcohol on campus, except for those who are 21 years of age or older. By definition, all undergraduate students on campus are younger than 21 and, therefore, are prohibited from possessing alcohol.

The resolution also calls for the close cooperation of the administration in enforcing the policy, and the university has been placing increased emphasis on enforcement.

On campus, the Student Activities Board, which administers the alcohol policy, has been conducting random alcohol tests, including breathalyzer tests, on campus during the past academic year. The tests have primarily been conducted during events sponsored by student organizations or groups of students.

The resolution expresses concern that social activity is becoming the concern of academic endeavors, and states that the faculty “will not extend the same recognition to such academic endeavors.”

The faculty resolved that it is the responsibility of the administration to enforce the policy, and it is up to the administration to see that the policy is followed.

The administration has been placing increased emphasis on enforcing the policy, and the faculty has been placing increased emphasis on the enforcement of the policy. The administration has been placing increased emphasis on enforcing the policy, and the faculty has been placing increased emphasis on the enforcement of the policy.
RJR Contributes to School of Medicine

RJR Nabisco, Inc. has awarded Wake Forest University $4.5 million to be used by the Bowman Gray School of Medicine as part of its $50 million expansion program. This grant is the largest single contribution made by the company, and also the largest gift ever received by the medical center.

Wake Forest University Ranks High in National Alumni Giving

For the 12th time, the CASE (Council for the Advancement and Support of Education) Search Committee has named Wake Forest University as a finalist in the national performance category of the Central Giving Excellence Awards. As a finalist, Wake Forest ranks in the top 15 of the nation's colleges and universities in alumni giving. The initial performance award is based on continuous increase in alumni dollars and donors over a four-year period.

QRC Appeals Lounge Decision

By Scott Poterba On Staff and Basil Saxer

Last spring, the Intersociety Council, or ISC, interviewed, and the Quad Residence Council held the condition of its student video lounge in Davis House, awarded the SLC the much-coveted lounge to the Quad Residence Center, two fraternities, and a Quad Residence Council-led recommendation, Parties are hard to control in the lounge, according to the supported three of the major areas controlling the lounge's use. ISC President Lori Sheppard provided a copy of their proposal. "There are 150 students, and it's very exciting new program," the proposal stated.

Gregory Replaces Cunnings in Housing Office

By SCOTT PRETORIUS
Old Gold and Black Reporter

Director of housing Ed Cunnings has resigned from his post at Wake Forest University, effective August 16th. Gregory Mastra will replace Cunnings as vice-president of student affairs.

Cunnings’ resignation marks the end of a four-year career at the university. He has chosen to go into private business in the Winston-Salem area.

Gregory has been employed by the college since July 1, and was later specifically to replace Cunnings. Last year, students often complained that the office of residence life was not always accessible. Gregory believes that the increased focus on private business will allow him to be more active in the college.

The university’s new Director of residence life will assume his position on October 1st.

Traffic Regulations

All students operating or parking a motor vehicle on university property or city streets near the campus are subject to the Wake Forest University traffic rules and regulations. All students are required to become familiar with the rules to ensure that the provisions are obeyed.

Violations are handled by the university’s subcommittee on European affairs, said that Wake Forest’s attorney in the case had no comment on the sale.

Student government will receive its portion of the proceeds from the sale of the property. Mastra believes the sale will provide additional financial resources for the university’s new Honor System.

A second change is in the structure of the system. Wake Forest’s purchase of Casa Artom.

La Mastra feels the changes allow for more democracy within the system. Wake Forest has purchased the house on Seaver Road.

Canal “at a small fraction of its actual value.” He claimed the property was worth up to $40 million. The university paid $250,000 for the canal in 1974.

Although Wake Forest finished paying for the building in 1974, the final approval of the sale by the Italian government has been delayed.

“Presler may have done us a favor by raising the issue,” said Terry Fortune, Wake Forest’s attorney in the case. “We hope this will hasten the bureaucratic process to complete the sale.”

On June 6, the State Department sent a diplomatic note to the Italian embassy giving full support for the completion of the sale.

The Real Issue

Avoidable Delays

Registration is a real bummer, especially if you don’t know anyone. If you run into the office before NOBODYS (3 registration days) open, you will have to wait your turn. So, you may as well try it out as early as possible. The first three people are often the only ones who have not run into the office yet. So, if you want to save time, start there.

Dear Mom and Dad,

Hope you’re having fun in Spain. Europe is beautiful. I’ve seen more tourists than I’ve ever seen before. But the most interesting thing I’ve seen is how people interact with each other. They are much more relaxed than we are. They seem to enjoy each other more. I’m having a great time.

Letters to the Editor

No comment on the issue of computer use in the residence halls. There has been a lot of discussion about this topic lately. Some people believe that computer use should be restricted to certain areas, such as the study lounges. Others feel that students should be allowed to use computers in their rooms.

I have always been a proponent of freedom of speech. I believe that everyone should be able to express their opinions, even if they are unpopular. If a student wants to use a computer in their room, they should be allowed to do so. If they want to use it for other purposes, such as playing video games or watching movies, they should also be allowed to do that.

I understand that there may be some concerns about security issues or student privacy. However, these concerns can be addressed through the proper policies and procedures. At the end of the day, I believe that the goal should be to provide students with as much freedom as possible while still ensuring their safety and the safety of others.

Sincerely,

Karen Becht

Quad Loses Trees

By LISA YANGER

Three more elm trees on the quad have been eliminated and one more will definitely have to come out in the near future. This is due to Dutch Elm Disease, which has spread throughout the campus and has affected the trees at the corner of North Road and Cherry Street. A $49.95 newsletter, which complements our ongoing battle against the disease, is now available.

The newsletter covers 2 subjects every 3 weeks from May through May, and will be available through May 1986. The normal subscription price for ADVANTAGES is $49.95, but members of the campus community who order now will receive a 10% discount. The newsletter includes tips on how to do it right, what to expect and the steps presently on the way to be taken out by October.

Legislature Raises Drinking Age

RALEIGH — You have to be the 21 years old to purchase, possess, or consume alcoholic beverages in North Carolina after September 1, 1986.

The Alcohol Law Enforcement Division (ALE) of the North Carolina Department of Crime Control and Public Safety is charged with enforcing alcoholic beverage laws and regulations. After September 1, there will be no change in ALE's method of enforcing alcoholic beverage laws and regulations. However, through the court system, treatment of certain violators and the resultant penalty will be somewhat different due to the provisions of the law.

If you are 19 or 20 and attempt to purchase, possess, or consume alcoholic beverages, you will be charged with an infraction, which is punishable by a penalty of not more than $25. An infraction is an unlawful act which, under the law, is not a crime. The conviction of an infraction may result in a record, the assessment of a fine, and/or court costs and the loss of driver's license for one year. Additionally, 19 to 20-year-old persons are subject to misdemeanor criminal charges and one-year driver's license revocation if they are convicted of violating the provisions of the law.

The change in the drinking age will provide increased penalties in the Uniform Traffic and Motor Vehicle Code of North Carolina. For example, the penalty for possession of an alcoholic beverage is increased from a $25 fine to a penalty of $25, court costs, plus a loss of driver's license for six months. A 20-year-old person can pay the $25 penalty and keep his license, while the person selling the beverage may be charged and convicted.

Penalties for age violations vary. The conviction of a misdemeanor crime involving the sale of alcoholic beverages to a person age 19 or 20 cannot result in a loss of license for a period of longer than one year. The conviction of a misdemeanor crime involving the use of a fraudulent driver's license to purchase alcoholic beverages to a person under 21, or the use of another person's driver's license to purchase alcoholic beverages, can result in up to two years in jail and a fine. This means a 19- or 20-year-old person may be charged with an infraction, while the person selling the beverage may be charged with a misdemeanor.

The new law also amends the Division of Motor Vehicles (DMV) requirements regarding color coded driver's licenses. Beginning September 1, 1986, DMV will issue driver's licenses and special IDs to persons who are 21 or over and who have met the requirements for age and validity or expiration must be current. In ALE's method of enforcing alcoholic beverage laws and regulations, the change in the drinking age will be somewhat different due to the provisions of the law.

On July 11, Governor Jim Martin announced the appointment of Rhonda Billings as Associate Justice to the Wake Forest law faculty as an assistant professor by the Wake Forest law faculty as an assistant professor. After graduation, she and her husband practiced law together in Winston-Salem until 1992, when they were elected one of five district court judges in Forsyth County. Billings joined the Wake Forest law faculty as an associate professor after her four-year term. She taught constitutional law, environmental law, and administrative law. Billings was also appointed Rhino, the only woman in her class, graduated ahead of her peers from page 1 calculousness with which they were handled," said Smith. "I am personally aware of that students have many privileges and opportunities and no bright, insightful and generally affluent were demonstrating a lot of insensitivity in their personal relations. I think it is highly unlikable. "What is the Wake Forest student like," she said.

Ronald V. Drinan, the chairman of the biology department, said, "These events, and all of theirs, seem to us to be indications of a longer erosion of consideration of the academic mission of the university. They demonstrate the fact that some students may not take their role at Wake Forest as being much less concerned with academic disciplines.

Citing a change in the degree of seriousness with which students view their studies, Drinan noted that the academic agenda at Wake Forest is "taking a back seat" to the social agenda in the case of many students and feels the situation will have far-reaching ramifications. "We are not bringing a vacuum," he said. In his opinion, active citizens can have some very serious ramifications as an advertisement for the future of the university.

It was noted that the majority of the student body would agree with the faculty, "It is only a minority who see their employment as outside the normal academic activities."

Dodd also noted, "Students have in our classes were comments on the activities of administration that the social climate affects what happens in the classrooms. The students are observing and believing it."

Sheri Berth, a member of the newly-formed PERKS (Parents for Change) committee, was interviewed who felt the faculty was "setting in position for the power by initiating the review procedures.

Dodd expressed, "Since the faculty recognizes that the constitution of an organization, it could also revise that document. Some reviews might make changes that stu- dent organizations are in keeping with their original intent and we would hope that students take an interest in that process."

Expressing a similar view, Smith urged for an "overhauled" look at all student organizations in the hope that organizations which were not abiding by their original principles would be divested. However, the student, "There are formal structures and information that are not utilized sufficiently in other areas."

Charles Thomas chose to attend New Mexico on his own free will. McGhger said.

"He had requested and was given permission to visit both universities," McGhger said. "It was clear that Thomas would be the best move in Thomas's in decision-making process. He had not visited any spring semester classes."

"I don't think the coach had much to do with it," Larry Bouchard, assistant head coach, said believed academic advisors made a strong push in Thomas's decision, although the coaching staff had done its part to help.

"I think it's a very nice way to wrap up "Wake Forest," McGhger said. "I think he's experienced what I believe in any academic atmosphere or attitude-related." McGhger added. "I think that Thomas was accepted on New Mexico in promotion which means that he will not be a scholar- ship athlete and he will have to pay his own tuition.

Although the coach was uncertain as to exactly how the coach would be paying his tuition, he said that it was probably due to the lack of support coming from the school. "I hope he did it so with the understanding that he would do that for two years out of high school," Shayatt said. "We can't understand how that could have been done without any restriction.

"I think he probably recognized him better than any other program in the nation."

Wake Forest assistant basketball coach Doug Schuld said that the loss of Thomas will definitely have a strong impact on the team. "He was a piece of Thomas's mental and you can see it tonight," Schuld said. "The death will be the biggest problem. We are very impressed with his ability to make the jump."
