Editor Faces Hearings

By Joyce Wurzmann

The wake Forest university judicial system has suspended indefinitely its entire judicial board, according to university president and the meeting had ended.

Angela Meroney, who applied for junior Honor Council, and the running, but they all won a position.

The meeting was called to discuss their concerns over recent racial incidents. Meroney allegedly received an e-mail from an individual who claimed to be a member of the BSA. The individual demanded that Meroney write a letter withdrawing her support for the Black Student Alliance and Meroney that occurred during an emergency meeting of the BSA, April 5, failure to withdraw the letter would result in disciplinary action.

The meeting was held in response to the recent racial incidents and was called by the executive board members to discuss their concerns. Meroney was suspended for three years.

According to Meroney's statement, which was recorded during the hearing, she was suspended for three years. Meroney's attorney, Paul Laing, said that she would appeal the decision.

Students Seek, Work

BY RACHEL EARP

WILL THEY BE LOST IN FOREIGN LANDS OR WORKING CLOSE TO HOME? WILL SOME STUDENTS SEEK OUT UNIQUE OPPORTUNITIES ON A BUDGET, WHILE OTHERS SEEK A DALE JR.

In addition to language study, Howell will be writing a paper on Chinese class dancing with different aspects of Chinese culture. Howell said she will take classes in the working of bionics, the presentation of the tea ceremony and other things unique to the Japanese.

Sophomore Todd House will also be spending time in Japan. House is in his second year of study at Chuo Christian University in Tokyo. He plans to participate in an intensive Japanese language study in preparation for the AFS studies at the Tokkai University with a group of students from Italy and Turkey.

The study of culture and language will also be one of the objects of junior Jennifer Inglis, who will be spending several months of the summer in Budapest, Hungary. Inglis will also spend time in Budapest, Hungary, Inglis will also be participating in a program sponsored by Inter-Varsity Christian Fellowship that is designed to promote mutual understanding between Soviet and U.S. students. Inglis will be paired with a Soviet counterpart who will see her environment and live in her language study and also participate in classes in the evening and participate in culture education activities, such as seminars and field trips, at night.

"I found about this program through a conference I went to over Christmas break," said Inglis. "I know a lot of people are looking for a different culture, even though it doesn't directly relate to my accounting major.

Internships Found Close to Home

Although many students seek the excitement of study abroad, many look for practical experience in their field and will participate in programs on a volunteer basis if they do not have paid, internship opportunities. Junior David Roosa said she is a biology major, but her field of study this summer is sponsored by the National Science Foundation to do research and field trips.

"This program gives an opportunity to work with women who have made advances in chemistry," Roosa said. "They want to work in the health care field, but they are not able to go because of the high cost of living. The opportunity to work with women who have made advances in chemistry is very exciting for me.

Mary C. Campbell, the editor of a key report on a school in Chicago, said that the findings of the report were based on the "natural" variability of people's responses to stressful situations.

Many of the school's students, according to Campbell, were experiencing stress due to the ongoing conflict in the city and the school's inability to provide adequate resources.

Campbell emphasized the need for schools to provide a supportive environment for their students, acknowledging that this was not always possible in the context of the broader social and political challenges facing the city.

She also highlighted the importance of collaboration between schools and community organizations to address these issues and ensure the well-being of all students.

Campbell concluded by urging policymakers and community leaders to prioritize investments in education and support for communities in areas experiencing stress and instability.

"It is crucial that we work together to create safe and inclusive environments for all students," Campbell stated. "We must continue to advocate for resources and policies that prioritize the well-being of young people, especially those in underserved communities."

The Trumpeter Marsalis Slated for Secret Service's 1991-92 Season

By Peter Blass

Actor and trumpetist Wynton Marsalis is one of 16 students from Wake Forest University who will participate in the 1991-92 Secret Service Season, the junior year abroad program sponsored by the university. Marsalis will be a member of the Blues Brothers, a musical group that performs at the university's homecoming and other special events.

The Secret Service Season is a chance for students to experience the culture and music of a foreign country. This year, the program is being held in London, where the students will study British history, culture, and music.

The students are chosen based on their academic performance and their interest in music and culture. Marsalis, who is a senior at Wake Forest, was selected for the program because of his musical talent and his desire to learn more about the culture of the United Kingdom.

Marsalis said he is looking forward to the opportunity to learn more about British culture and to perform with other students and faculty members. He said he hopes to make new friends and to gain a deeper understanding of the world through his experiences abroad.

The Secret Service Season is a unique opportunity for students to learn about music and culture from a foreign perspective. It is a way to gain a deeper understanding of the world and to develop a more global perspective.

The program is sponsored by the university's Office of International Programs and is open to students from all majors and backgrounds. It is a chance for students to learn more about music and culture from a foreign perspective, and to gain a deeper understanding of the world.
Ethnic Music Broadens Horizons

There is something "fadi" about the name Willie. It seems that every month with "Willie" in the name certainly catches the favor of the local crowds.

I grew up on the eastern coast of Florida and have always given great appreciation for the showcase of fresh seafood. On my way to Wilmar and Witness, I thought I was paying billions to the fats of the world, piling them on the plates and letting them take over my eating habits. Luckily, the place serves a variety of seafood cooking techniques.

The offerings at Willie's consist of the traditional seafood restaurant fare. Unlike Wilmar's famous restaurant, however, Willie's is more about fresh seafood and vegetable preparations. The menu includes fresh seafood, bread and soup, and despite its simplicity, the meals are delicious.

The menu is summed up on a wooden floor-covered with a variety of seafood dishes. From the simple supply of produce on each table and bar, the visitors are encouraged to experience the variety of seafood available.

The menu is available in both printed and online versions. Visitors can choose from the menu and make their own selections. During our visit at Willie's, we sampled dishes from the menu and the table, and we were impressed.

Saltmarsh Willie's is a good seafood restaurant by all means. Students from the coastal regions who may "taste" seafood as well as native harvests in the coastal regions will enjoy the meals served.

The fresh vegetables at Willie's were cooked to perfection. On the other hand, the seafood was fresh and delicious. Unlike many other seafood restaurants, the meals served are fresh and made with care.

The atmosphere of Willie's was a cozy and warm place. It is definitely a good place to have a meal and enjoy yourself.

If you are looking for a good seafood restaurant in the area, Willie's is definitely worth a visit!
