The seminars, run last week, were taught by counselor Caroly Jordon, from the center for psychological and professional services, and members of the Wake Forest Student Union.

In the first session of her seminar, Jordon emphasized the need for an accurate self-assessment in the job search, the skill that any business woman or job seeker needs.

When Army Col. Eddie B. Ladd relinquished his command of Air Mobility Command, he rode off command at ceremonies at Fort Hood, Texas, Friday, March 1, 2013.

Ladd's job is to make the role of airlift support more efficient. "I'm really excited," he said. "I want to make sure that all the contingency forces have what they need to do their jobs, and I want to do it with a sense of fiscal responsibility." Ladd was the MAJCOM's chief of staff for Air Mobility Command headquarters in Scott AFB, Ill., for the past seven years. "Eddie is an exceptional leader," said Col. Scott E. Reynolda House offers variety of ways for student involvement

By Corinna Champion

Reynolda House sponsors a variety of activities for students. In order to become involved, a student must attend one of the receptions held during the school year. The Monday evening receptions are open to all students and provide a variety of information about the house. The Tuesday evening receptions are held to celebrate special events such as the American Foundations symposium. The American Foundations symposium is an opportunity for students to learn about the house and its role in the community. It is also an opportunity for students to meet other students who are interested in the house.

The two receptions are held in different locations. The Monday evening receptions are held in the student lounge, which is located in the student center. The Tuesday evening receptions are held in the Reynolda House itself. The student lounge is located in the student center and is available for student use during the day. The Reynolda House is located in the heart of the town and is available for student use during the day.

In addition to the receptions, the house sponsors a variety of events for students. These events include a weekly study trip to New York where students can learn about different aspects of the American Foundations symposium. The study trip is available to all students and is sponsored by the house.

Subjectivity

The sloppy copy by the good student higher grade because if they didn’t make out exactly what was written, they gave the student the benefit of the doubt based on his record. The next ten teachers graded the good student lower on the neat copy because it was easier to see the flaws. Chase believes teachers gave their students higher grades by a freshman.

Tenure

For the first time in a number of years, tenured professors at Wake Forest have questioned the concept of a tenure policy. The Faculty Senate, which consists of the entire teaching faculty, has raised issues about the need for tenure. The Senate has been critical of the university's policy, which grants tenure to professors who have been teaching at the university for ten years.

Letters

On October 23, 1982, a memorandum was sent to the school's administrators outlining the findings of the study. The report, which is based on a survey of 184 full-time faculty members, found that tenure has a negative impact on the quality of teaching and research. The report also stated that tenure leads to a lack of accountability and a decline in productivity. The study concluded that tenure should be eliminated or modified in order to improve the university's academic environment.

The editor replies

There are several points raised in the student's presentation which are important to consider. However, the student's argument that tenure is necessary to protect the freedom of speech is not supported by the evidence presented.

KAG flag flies again

In compliance with the agreement between Wake Forest University and the Kappa Alpha Order, the Kappa Alpha colors of the flag are to be flown on campus.

On the way to this interview I noticed three schools of thought. One was that I didn’t need a job; the other was that all work is under the poor student. The third was that all work is under the good student. The first idea was rejected because it was not a job, and the third because it was not under the poor student. The second was accepted because it was both.
Scapino's sizzles

by M.D. Jones

Scapino, the first production of the University Theater's 1975-76 season, is a delight in every aspect. It is a very funny play.

The plot is straightforward. It involves a character on which to hang the funny. The basic story line is that two young, Oliver and Lawrence, have married against the wishes of their fathers. Scapino, who holds to the belief that marriage is not a requirement for happiness, is brought in to help them. There are various complications, but the end result is a successful marriage.

The play is well-written. It moves briskly, and the dialogue is fast-paced and humorous. The characters are well-drawn, and the acting is excellent. The production is directed by Raul Miranda, and he has done a fine job of bringing the play to life.

March Scott's album reflects experience, lacks variety

by Sonny Goode

Bruce Springsteen's latest release, "The River," is a mixed bag. While it does contain some excellent songs, it also contains some weak ones.

The album is divided into two parts: the first part contains songs about love and relationships, while the second part contains songs about politics and social issues.

Some of the best songs on the album are "The River," "Born to Run," and "Jungleland." These songs are well-written and well-produced, and they are certainly worth listening to.

However, there are also some songs on the album that are not as good. "Streets of Philadelphia" is a good example. While the song itself is not bad, it does not fit in with the rest of the album.

Overall, "The River" is a good album, but it is not without its flaws. It is a bit uneven, and it lacks the variety that one would expect from a Bruce Springsteen album.

Department gains popularity

By Jeannette Berek

When asked if the sociology department is the most popular of all the academic departments, Associate Professor Philip Perricone answered, "I believe it is. We have a very significant number of students.

"The department is one of the most popular because it's a very important subject. Students can see the relevance of sociology in their lives. They can see the importance of it in understanding society.

"We teach them about how society works, how people interact with each other, and how they can make a difference in the world. It's a very important subject to study.

"I think it's important to understand the society we all live in."

Graduates face tough job market

By Susan Delbecq

Recent sociology graduates have been finding it tough to find work in sociology, medical school, law school, or graduate schools. However, there are still some opportunities available.

"The job market is really tough right now," said Professor Philip Perricone. "There are not many jobs available for sociologists, especially in academia.

"Students should be prepared for this and be open to other possibilities.

"But it's important to understand the society we all live in."

Majors find courses relevant

Sociology majors like Anita Izzi, Johnna Hewitt and Marla Ayers share an enthusiasm for their department that stems from the and everyday problems in society.

"The professors are great, they're competent and accessible," said Izzi, a senior from Winston-Salem.

"It's important that students come from the professors. Hewitt plans to work with an educational planning office.

"On a different academic level, we're working on a two-semester course dealing with major theories and research methods.

"Of course we have to go along with the university plans for growth, but we could certainly use another faculty member," said Hewitt.

"As a weekly feature in the Wake Forest News, the department page focuses on local politics, community service, and department activities.

"We're trying to interact with students, the faculty, and the community at large."

"It's important to understand the society we all live in."

The Demon Deacons football team traveled to Blacksburg, Virginia last Saturday for a heavy battle in Virginia Tech'sfield. Wake Forest, with only 52 points in the game, returned toWinston-Salem as a 26-7 victor over theGobblers and swapped its place in the two toand three spot.

The match was certainly a field goal battle. Wake Forestfootball coach at Grub said, "This is the first timein our history we have ever had a field goal battle.But Wake Forest won this round.

Deeace Bobble, Gobblers’ quarterback, was said to bevery disappointed in his performance. Dooleysaid, "Deebro was really out there for a long time and hejust couldn’t do it.”

The game was won on a 12-yard pass from GaryGreggs to Mike Groves, with time running off theclock. Greggs had six receptions for 81 yards as theGobblers faced a fourth and 26 yardconversion and had only two plays left in the game.

The defense of the Gobblers made the victory possibleby keeping the Wake Forest offense to only 52 points. Thegame ended up 12-9 for the Gobblers.

Terry Coates

Terry was their former coach, and one of the bestoffensive players in the nation, but Terry Coates brokethrough his team to the kick as time ran out.

The absence of Lawrencedidn’t mean too much to theGobblers because theyhad another great playeravailable. A lot of WakeForest players did not even know who Lawrence wasthat he had not played the overall game, Dooley said.

Terry Coates

Terry was a very disappointment tomany of the Gobblers because he wasforced to leave the gamein the fourth quarter whenthe offense was not going toscore a touchdown in thefinal minutes of the game.Despite the offense’s inabilityto put points on the board,Dooley was disappointedthat the Gobblers werenever seen so many points onthe scoreboard.

We talk a lot about making the big plays decisively and that is whatseasoned players will do. Now of course, Groh had six receptions for81 yards as theGobblers faced a fourth and 26 yardconversion and had only two plays left in the game.

Rogers Worsell

Virginia Tech’s famous studentlounge of Lawrence, Groh said, "It is to afford the students tothe- Wake Forest traditiondeters and grants andto it that the drive got nothe only a field goal inthe fourth quarter, Dooley said. "We may have to considermaking some substitutions or tryingto get our first team.”

The game went as Groh said it. "We beat the team earlier in theweek that the game wouldbe very close. We hadbeen for anydistracted.”

A soccer team seeks patience

By Jim Baxter

Patience may be a virtue to win, but to this year's soccer team it's been a major reason for several recent losses.

"Patience is a good quality for a soccer man to have, but at times this year we've been about as patient as a spider. We need a little more," Coach Dennis Kennedy said.

"We got into some situations this year where we've been waiting a long time for things to happen and the team has been a little impatient."

The loss of leading scorer Bob Scherer to an injury has been a major factor in the team's 2-6-2 record. Scherer, who scored 12 goals this season, was out for most of the team's losses.

"Bob's a great player," Kennedy said. "We need him on the field."
Golfers finish 11th at Forest Hills

The men's golf team finished seventh out of 11 teams competing in the Forest Hills Tournament last weekend. The tournament was held at the Forest Hills Country Club in Hot Springs, Va.

Coach James Ruble was disappointed with his team's play.

"We were not prepared to go to the tournament," said Ruble. "I thought we were, but we weren't." The team did not perform well enough to place within the top three teams for the tournament. Their biggest disappointment was the strong offense they produced in the second round.

"Our offense was good," Ruble said. "We all played well, but we didn't have a good finish."

The team's performance was not what they expected going into the tournament.

In the second round, the team finished with a score of 290, which was five strokes behind the leaders. The team's performance during the tournament was not what they expected, and they were disappointed with their finish.

"The team is still without last year's MVP, Larry Biddle," Ruble said. "Larry is a fierce competitor, and his absence will be felt on the course."

The team is now preparing for their next tournament in the spring.

NCAA wins 1st round

The battle is heating up on the NCAA front. The two major organizations — the NCAA and the Big East Conference — are each taking different stances on the issue of college football.

The NCAA, led by its president, has taken a strong stance against the Big East's plan to implement a new, revenue-sharing model. The NCAA believes this model would give the Big East an unfair advantage and could lead to a lack of parity in college football.

The Big East, on the other hand, is pushing for a model that would allow its member schools to share in the revenue generated by college football games. The Big East believes this would help to ensure that its schools have a fair share of the revenue generated by college football.

Despite these differences, both sides are committed to finding a solution that works for everyone. The NCAA and the Big East are currently in negotiations to try to reach an agreement that is acceptable to both organizations.

Tickets go fast

By Kerry King

Presbyterian's Homecoming football game against Carolina will be one of the most anticipated games in ACC history. Coach Lincoln, supervision of the ticket office, said, "Demand for tickets to the games is exceeding expectations, but we will continue to make tickets available to students who need them."

Lincoln said that the ticket office has made arrangements with the local police to control the crowds and ensure that the game proceeds smoothly. He also urged fans to be patient and to purchase their tickets in advance to avoid long lines on the day of the game.

Deacs look to UNC

By Michael Tucker

Many Deacs fans were meteoric over the victory in the Homecoming game last Saturday. Deacs, who were tipped as second place by Wake Forest’s opponent, were victorious in their second game of the season. The victory was attributed to the Deacs team’s strong defense, which held Wake Forest to just 17 points.

The game started well for the Deacs, who scored a touchdown in the first quarter. However, the game didn’t stay on track. After a 60-yard kickoff return by Wake Forest, the Deacs couldn’t keep up with the pace and the game ended with a 21-17 victory for the Deacs.

A good week for Deacs was decided over time, and the Deacs team was able to win with a good defense. Coach Lincoln said, "It was a good game for us. We played well and we came out on top."

The game was decided by a long touchdown in the fourth quarter, which gave Deacs a 14-point lead. The Deacs team was strong on defense and was able to hold off Wake Forest’s offense.
