Liquor contest remains low-key

by Lynn Knox

The bitter controversy that surrounded the sale of liquor in the-dorm 5 referendum in Charlotte has died down, at least from the student perspective.

According to Student Government President Mark Bal, the referendum was a "growth opportunity" for both the administration and the students. He hopes that the issue will not resurface again.

The referendum was held on October 21, 1979, to decide whether or not the WF student body wanted liquor in dormitories. The referendum was passed with a vote of 814 to 144.

"I hope the university will continue to work on the issue," Bal said. "I believe that the administration should take the student's concerns seriously and work on finding a solution that will satisfy both parties."

by Betsy Walkard

Writing a musical is not a question of which cats run the thighs of the Daughters of the Revolution. They have worked on the establishment of the German House will be made Gantt, chairman of the German House board, said the house would be open to all students and faculty, regardless of race. The German House will be the center of social and cultural events, and it will provide a place for students to interact with members of the German community.

The German House will not be an exclusive club, the Gantt said. "We want to make it a resource for all students and faculty, regardless of their race or ethnicity," she said.

The German House is located on U.S. 70 West, and it is open to all students and faculty. It is also open to the public. The German House is open from 9 a.m. to 10 p.m. daily.

The German House is a place where students and faculty can come together to socialize and learn about German culture. It is a place where students can come together to discuss their experiences and learn about the German culture. It is also a place where students can come together to socialize and learn about German culture.

Remote battles affect America

Expressionists stress subjectivity

A gallery was introduced to the German Expressionism show in the new summer show at the Pfeiffer Arts Center gallery.

Expressionism was not a movement but an attitude—a driven expression of the need to free the artist from the subject-perpetrated illusion of an objective reality. The artist was influenced by the life of the time, the environment, and the emotions of the people. Van Gogh, for instance, was influenced by the natural beauty around him and his own inner turmoil, the beauty of the trees and the loneliness of the artist. His paintings, such as his famous "Starry Night," were the perfect expression of his own inner struggle.

The Expressionists, such as Kandinsky, were interested in the power of color and form to convey emotions and ideas. Their art was not limited to the realistic depiction of objects but rather aimed at creating a new reality through the use of color, form, and line.

Kandinsky's "Composition VI" is a perfect example of this. The bold, swirling forms and vibrant colors create a sense of movement and energy that is both dynamic and emotional. The use of different colors and forms to create a sense of rhythm and flow is characteristic of Expressionism and highlights the importance of the artist's inner vision and emotions in the creation of art.

In summary, Expressionism was a movement that sought to express the inner world of the artist through the use of bold, emotional forms and colors. It was a reaction against the perceived reality of the 19th century and a call for a new reality created through the power of art. The Expressionists were not interested in the realistic depiction of objects but rather in the creation of a new reality that reflected the artist's inner vision and emotions.
Baseball season opens

by Phil Mitchell

With spring just around the corner, symbols of the new season become more prominent across the land. In the eyes of baseball fans, the annual opening day is the start of the baseball season. As the season begins, games are played on the field of dreams, and the Wake Forest baseball team prepares to open its 1979 season. A Sunday afternoon game with Elon on the campus field will signal the beginning of the season for the Deacs, whose biggest problem will be finding a solid left-handed pitcher to replace starter Bill Crater.

Another problem the Deacs will have is with the NCAA regulations. While nearly everyone else will be spending their spring days and nights playing baseball, the Deacs will be spending theirs preparing for the upcoming season. TheDeacs are already looking forward to the return of catcher Tim Johnson, who had to miss last season due to injury. Pitcher Tom King, second baseman Jon Byers along with the additions of junior college transfers Alonzo Brown and T.C. Gray will add much needed depth to the Deacs' roster.

The baseball team shows up at the spring warm-up facility with the softball team and the women's tennis team.

While the Deacs are preparing for the challenge of the upcoming season, the women's tennis team is also getting ready to start their season. The team is looking forward to the start of the season and hopes to have a successful year.

Delaplane sets school record

Larry Delaplane, Wake Forest's All-American shortstop, played in six games last season, but this season he will be a key player for the Deacs as they prepare to compete in the ACC. Delaplane, a senior, is expected to be one of the top players in the conference and his performance will be closely watched by the NCAA and the ACC.

The Deacs are excited to have Delaplane back on the field and are looking forward to a successful season. With Delaplane's presence and the addition of new talent, the Deacs hope to have a strong season and improve on their performance from last year.
Women's sports Setup changed

Though starting said, "I don't understand. the might .. be..."
I think that's a good idea," Hook Continued said, "I'm more interested in tennis participation of the type of women that we already have here."

I think we would be disappointed. It's a big decision to decide,icked: Barney and four-year basketball player, would be difficult to explain why this won't be in Division 1 this year.

Hanks said the new regulations in the decision varied, and Barney said, "We've got two years to be Division I this year."

Big Four tourney Needs more Deacs

Players in Deacs are still expected to comply with the new guidelines. The best idea, in my mind, is to make it a four-year basketball player, even though the team would be disappointing. It's a big decision to make; we've got to go back to the old decision."

For this decision, Hanks said the basketball team currently has five players on scholarship, according to the new guidelines. The basketball team currently has five players on scholarship, according to the new guidelines. The basketball team currently has five players on scholarship, according to the new guidelines. The present guidelines don't discourage from coming, Hook continued, "If that's the last thing we want to do, we're going to have to make the changes to the guidelines."

Tangled up in the Pizz

Wake Forest noted a disappointing basketball season previously with a loss to second-place Duke in the ACC tournament. Frank Johnson, named to the all-ACC first team, showed promise in the Blue Devil Bob Domel in last year's game.

Deacon shooters Trounce Aggies

The WF rifle team recently returned from the ACC meeting, which was held in Maryland. The team finished 10th place with a score of 255, including 96 in the prone position, 42 in the kneeling, and 67 in the standing. No Deacs had a top ten finish in the standing.

The Deacs have three matches left this year, in addition to the ACC Championships Apr. 19 in Spartanburg, S.C.

Swimmers lost in ACC meet

To have expected Wake Forest to win the ACC swim meet, that would have been like challenging a school of snorklers in a game of water polo. The expected team, according to statistics, Wake didn't even have a chance.

The athletic department at Wake doesn't consider Deacs' lack of success "acceptable," according to Johnson. "We're not going to make much attention or support."

"Without said we can't become a competitive as we would, like vast improvement in not likely," he added.

Despite the last-place finish, the swimmers were generally pleased with their efforts. Individual times were faster than expected, and much faster than last year's Bob Layser, a freshman, finished 2:31 in the 200-yard breast stroke setting his personal record of 2:31.46 at the ACC championships. His time was a new school record.

The All-American team of Jim Kusel, coach of the swim team, was named to the All-American team and set a new school record of 2:01.38, which qualified them to be national champions in California. The team is now at the urging of the coach, Jim Kusel, and the All-American team set a new school record in the 400-yard freestyle with a time of 3:12.94.

Panel discusses SALT implications

by Boba Ried

The Christian perspective and many realistic implications of the SALT talks and their implications were major points explored in a recent Southern Baptist convocation begins on April 24 at the Lexington Hotel.

Glen H. Brown, a WF organizer of the recent Southern Baptist Convocation, said, "We should not agree to a treaty unless we can show that it is worth the price." He divided his address into two parts:

1. Development of more complicated weapons will lead to greater threat.

2. The Soviets have no intention of breaking the treaty by lowering their arms.

"One of the major points explored in a paper he focused on is how the Soviets have no intention of breaking the treaty by lowering their arms," said Mr. Brown.

A question repeatedly asked was whether the Christians who would be opposing the treaty would be able to understand the implications of it.

"If Christians are to have a meaningful impact on the SALT talks," said Mr. Brown, "they must be emphasized on the SALT talks." The SALT talks, he said, will be the "most important talks of our time," and they will have a major role in the future of the world.

Mr. Brown indicated that the SALT talks will be influenced by the recent talk on the SALT talks by the United States, and that the United States will have a major role in the future of the world.

Mr. Brown concluded his address by saying that the SALT talks will be a major step forward in the future of the world, and that Christians must take an active role in the future of the world.
