Campus set for movie

Filming of The Girls’ Room begins this week

By Blasmani Todd

Just before graduation, a friend enounced an idea that was perfect and well executed. “This scenario could be a description of incin­erators that are busy, but not in part of the plot for a movie that will be filmed on cam­pus Sept. 11-15.”

Oil and Water Productions will announce an update for The Girls’ Room, a film that will be produced in collaboration with the university. The film, directed by cinema professor Mary Beth Roberts, is based on the novel of the same name by Susan Isaacs. Roberts is currently working on a film adaptation of the novel.

As part of an effort to address important environmental issues, the Student Environmental Action Council (SEAC) has begun making a push to raise awareness among students about the community and the university's role in environmental conservation.

The group's project aims to involve the effort with the university, the city of Winston-Salem, and other organizations in the region.

The university will hold a community seminar from noon to 2 p.m. in room Worrell 312. The program includes three professors from the university.

For more information on the initiative's website, visit http://www.seac.wfu.edu.

The scavenger hunt is open to all students. For more information, call 660-5770 or visit the student affairs office.

Program in Vienna to start in fall of next year

German professor will take first student group to Flow House

By Sarah Bedwell, Contributing Reporter

Larry West, a professor of German, and Russian, will take the first group of students to the Flow House in Vienna for the fall semester of 1999. Fourteen students will travel along with West to take part in a three-week section of the capital city of Austria. A four-day trip to Budapest will also be included, allowing a four-day trip to Hungary as well.

Students will live together in a villa, located in the northwest section of the capital city of Vienna. It is a city of 1.7 million inhabitants. "It is a very international, cosmopolitan city... It is such a great location in terms of looking toward the east," West said.

Many other exchange programs available to Vienna are popular tourist destinations in the summer. Four courses will be taught by West and two resident professors.

An art and architecture course will be taught by West and two resident professors. It is a relatively new program. Students will also be able to travel on their own on weekends.

The Flow House is located about 20 miles from the center of Vienna, in an upscale residential and embassy area. West and two resident professors will be taught with lecture and discussion on Tuesdays and visits to churches and museums each Thursday.

German will be the only course taught in German, unless a group with much German experience is selected to travel.

Applications for next fall's trip are currently available from West. Applications are due Sept. 18, and a group with similar German language skills will be selected before traveling. Applications are due Sept. 18, and a group with similar German language skills will be selected before traveling.

Multicultural divisional discussed at forum

From Smith's talk, it seems that these classes would frankly discuss these issues through dialogue, discipline, academic education. Students wanted to feel reassured that the multicultural divisional was going to explicitly discuss the complex forms of oppression experienced daily.

When giving the introduction, Clinton-Rice delivered an inspiring speech to students. She advocates for change through education and sees the solitary student inside a one divisional. Education can change since challenges and enhances others' offers for change.

This spirit can be utilized through the realization and promotion of multiculturalism, which can encourage students to think about educational initiatives and cultural change. Students wanted to feel reassured that the multicultural divisional was going to explicitly discuss the complex forms of oppression experienced daily.

Smith and the students have the desire to play an essential part of the University of Louisiana at Lafayette's development.

Several students had already inquired about the possibility of structuring a concrete format for the divisional. Because they have been proposed as an opportunity to discuss the complex forms of oppression experienced daily, students need to be encouraged and students need to be engaged.

Students interested in learning more about the preface discussed must contact Smith or Claudia Thomas, an associate dean of the college.

Starr submits evidence in Clinton investigation

WASHINGTON — The anti-corruption investigation of President Clinton continued yesterday as special prosecutor Kenneth Starr delivered a 500-page report on the house of supporting evidence that he believes will be sufficient to obtain arrest warrants. The house of supporting evidence was delivered to the house of previous delivery star. All told, Starr provided the house of Clinton for consideration of the evidence.

The evidence submitted by Starr included a 300-page transcript of Speaker Nest Gingrich's opening remarks at the house of the evidence. The Committee is expected to issue a detailed House Judiciary Committee's report on the matter by voting on a resolution later this month. Smith added that the House of IndependentLEGISLATIVE COMMISSION had notified the committee of its intent to deliver the evidence.

College graduates encounter lucrative career opportunities

By Richard Cook

LEXINGTON, Ky. — It's a good year to be graduating, labor experts say.

"This is one of the best employment periods since the early 1980s," said Don Kueber, the senior associate director of the UK Career Center. Kueber called it a "captivating market" for students, whom companies come to campus to interview and find new employees.

Clyde Shaver, who graduated last May with a degree in computer science, secured the benefits of the booming economy. Three months after submitting his resume to the Lexington-based Jockey Club, a leader in the thoroughbred breeding industry, at a Career Center job fair, he received an offer for a programming job with a salary in the mid-$20,000 range.

"The job was the only thing I ever even went for," he said with a laugh.

Still, Kueber warned against complacency. "The student who knows he wants a job will encounter the job market and take advantage of the resources of the Career Center and find an excellent job market," she said.

John Cox, a graduate student in the Patton School of Diplomacy and International Commerce, was at the Career Center signing up for interviews with recruiters Sept. 7.

He is quirky and sexy at the same time," Turner said. Cox and one of the reasons the university gave the company permission to film is that it is such a small movie and the filming will be relatively unobtrusive. Though other films have been interested in the campus area, this is Turner's first time directing a movie with two strong female leads.

"It's a very special period of time that they are on campus. It helps because it is a weekend," Cox said.

"Cox said and film company is charged a "small fee" for the use of the university. "It is Turner's first feature film, but with Procter & Gamble recently completed, Turner added, "I don't think that it has caused problems for the film."

"It went from, 'I really want to do 'A Night at the Roxbury,' to 'Let's do it' to 'Let's do it August' to 'Just fly my God, we're doing this weekend,'" Turner said.

Higher Education Act looks to reduce bingeing

By Jay Schwab

CARBONDALE, Ill. — An effort to crack down on both illegal and binge alcohol consumption on college campuses is a major plank in the Higher Education Act of 1998.

This act entails a series of initiatives, announcements and repealed items from the Higher Education Act of 1965 but is still subject to last-minute tinkering in Congress.

There is a being reviewed by a conference committee between the House and the House of Representatives. One goal of the act deals with reducing binge drinking on college campuses.

There are six steps listed under the initiative on alcohol abuse:

• Appointing a task force to make recommendations for a broad range of policy and program changes.
• Providing incentives for students to live in an alcohol-free environment and have alcohol-free educational and leisure activities.
• Enforcing a non-discrimination policy on illegal consumption and binge drinking, illegal solicitation and reducing opportunities for anyone to legally consume alcohol on campus.
• Providing a list of community organizations for those who violate campus alcohol policies and requiring students with alcohol problems to enroll in off-campus counseling programs.
• Encouraging the establishment of disciplinary measures for those who violate campus alcohol policies and offering students with alcohol problems to enroll in off-campus counseling programs.
• Partnering with local community leaders to encourage local commercial establishments to curtail illegal alcohol sales and adopt responsible alcohol marketing and service practices.

Southern Illinois University in Carbondale administrators had a largely positive reaction toward the plan and joined many others who have been working on alcohol-related problems at SIUC.

"I think (controlling drinking) is a need of college campuses nationwide," said SIUC student affairs coordinator Terry Huffman.

SIUC Student Affairs Coordinator Terry Huffman said: "We also have alcohol-free floors at residence halls and don't allow alcohol advertising at athletic events, so SIUC is addressing alcohol abuse.

"I think this is a step in the right direction," Huffman said. "I think it's a step in the right direction. There is definitely a movement toward campus alcohol curtailment. Castleman said: "We also have alcohol-free floors at residence halls and don't allow alcohol advertising at athletic events, so SIUC is addressing alcohol abuse.

"There have been problems involving binge alcohol consumption at colleges across the country recently. It's an issue that certainly could use some help," Huffman said. "This is a step in the right direction. There is definitely a movement toward campus alcohol curtailment. It's a step in the right direction. There is definitely a movement toward campus alcohol curtailment. There have been problems involving binge alcohol consumption at colleges across the country recently. It's an issue that certainly could use some help," Huffman said.

John Jackson, the vice chancellor for academic affairs and provost, does not see a simple solution to the problems of alcohol abuse on campus, but he said he hopes the new program can help. He added that the law is "a complicated matter," he said. "There is definitely a movement toward campus alcohol curtailment. It's a step in the right direction. Tailgating rules may cause students to hightail it

The release of the university’s tailgating policy this past weekend marked another example of the university’s attempts to regulate student social activities. Such attempts are not unusual considering the university’s attempt to remove oversized vehicles, invite students on campus parties, and squelch an excitement for oversized vehicles. A recent tailgating incident has led to the campus party regulations that were implemented by the university. This recent tailgating problem has sparked an interest for controls that are needed on tailgating.

The campus party regulations that were imposed last fall have squelched an excitement for oversized vehicles, invites the Alcohol and Tobacco Enforcement Office, and is being enforced by the Alcohol and Tobacco Enforcement Office. The university’s attempt to overrule the Tailgating Committee’s decision is that this time students are not the only ones affected.

Unleashing a frenzy party, a football game is an event attended by students, friends, and colleagues. As a southern school, the university should recognize the inherent relationship between football tailgating and student activity. Establishing rules to guide this activity should recognize the inherent relation that the student’s activity with the university's attempt.

It is that this time students are not the only ones affected.

Clinton fails our generation

The president lacks the moral backbone that college students admire.

Without a Kennedy or Roosevelt to inspire their leaders, today’s college students have grown up accustomed to seeing their leaders tainted by personal and politically motivated scandal.

These six years have yielded a trusting blend of powerful leadership and policy oracles by an endless parade of embarrassments and invitees.

Without a Kennedy or Roosevelt to inspire their students, today’s college students have grown up accustomed to seeing their leaders tainted by personal and politically motivated scandal.

Tragically, in this age without political leaders, when the president stands before the nation and extols the moral authority of his office to buck his back, the student who used to believe him has disposed of desperately in the six years of the Clinton presidency.

Like Kennedy before him, Clinton appealed to the newest generation of voters — for many, his was the first bible they would ever read.

He called to this group in his campaigns, promising legislation and programs that at least appeared to be so.

But Clinton has failed to lead a White House like that would ensure his legislative success would not even be the cloud of personal scandal.

Most importantly, this scandal would have real personal — but Clinton’s resistance on denying an affirmer that turned out to be the decisive blow that has left his credibility badly bruised.

The dispensable aspect of the issue is the fact that is so important, so severe that the principle of making those ideals reality.

Clinton’s admission is satisfying the ideals of his supporters may make sense, but it can cost in the long run. The final choice is whether to do it in a down manner from his own life.

Screams and minority initiatives tainted by an endless parade of embarrassments and invitees.

Today’s college students are attracted to your vulnerability, talking to the brothers, or you may be stood up by the blacklight and a velvet bedspread.

One prom dress? It’s a bad, bad thing. Don’t, under any circumstances, cut that with your slit.

Your status is something you don’t quell with prom. It will stick with you for the rest of your life.

Too much partying in college can have negative effects

An overindulgence in alcohol can lead to devastating effects.

School is once again in session. Students will have to get used to early morning classes and Late night readings. It is the time once more for firstrate, living on nothing but coffee and a cup of noodles. Classes will inevitably stress many students,

Many colleges and national Greek organizations around the country have been taking action to prevent death and injury due to drinking.

But the only reason these associations have come up with a moratorium is different. College students aren’t drinking to escape their problems, they are drinking to escape their problems.

It is a tragedy to see anyone die, but the problem should be for the individual, it is entirely too often that society looks for somewhere to blame.

recently,

Morningstar called us cheap.

It's not every day you get a compliment like that.

All financial companies charge interest on loans and express it as an annual interest rate. Of course, the lower the interest rate you pay, the better. That's why most of your money goes to where it should - towards building a comfortable future.

We make low expenses a top priority.

As the largest retirement system in the world, AIG Retirement Services is devoted exclusively to the financial needs of the educational and research communities. Our expenses are among the lowest in the retirement and mutual fund industries.

In fact, TIAA-CREF's average fund expenses are less than half of the expense charges of comparable funds. We do what we do best - manage your assets and meet your needs for the long run.

With such a wide range of core and specialized funds, there's always room to find an investment that meets your specifications.

TIAA-CREF sets the standard in the financial services industry.

Our expenses are only one factor to consider when you make an investment decision. Morningstar also used our commitment to "conservative investment, service" and "investment performance." Because that can make a difference in the long run, too.

At TIAA-CREF, we believe people like you need more than investments, we also offer retirement planning services to help you build a comfortable and secure future. So you can. To find out more, call us at 1-800-446-7777. We consider a compliance.

ENSURING THE FUTURE FOR THOSE WHO SHAPE IT.

IAA PRESS BOX

So, with a day left before the season opener, it's the place to be if you need to catch up on the latest developments, or you're just looking for a way to spend some time with friends.

The day began with a press conference, with Head Coach Jim Calhoun and his staff addressing the media. Calhoun talked about the team's preparation for the upcoming season, and how he's looking forward to the challenges that await them.

He also highlighted some of the key players returning from last season, including star point guard Shelden Williams, who was named to the All-Conference team.

In the afternoon, the Huskies practiced on the court, with players working on their conditioning and teamwork.

Calhoun was pleased with the team's performance, saying that they had worked hard and were ready to face the challenges of the season.

The next day, the team played their first exhibition game, against a team from another Division I school.

The Huskies won the game comfortably, with Williams leading the way with 21 points and 7 assists.

Calhoun was pleased with the team's performance, saying that it was a good test of their preparation.

He also praised the team's defense, saying that it was a strength of the team that they would rely on throughout the season.

Overall, the Huskies are expected to have a strong season, with high hopes for success in the AAC and beyond.

With a full schedule of games and events, it's sure to be a exciting season for Connecticut basketball fans.
Volleyball spikes home three wins in a row

Deacs capture tournament title

By Paul Cuta

Sports Editor

The Demon Deacons men’s soccer team might have a goal scorer strong enough to complement one of the strongest defenses in the ACC. For his first week in a Demon Deacon soccer uniform, sophomore forward Jamal Seale scored a hat trick against the University of Evansville.

Seale followed that up by scoring a second goal against the Green Bay Packers.

The offensive front has failed to establish any kind of running game in the first two matches of the season. By contrast, the Deac offense is working out of sync all afternoon, from the trenches to the top of the scoreboard.

Athletic department purchased class notes for Deacon athletes

By Shannon Bottoms

Perspective Editor

A junior business major who spoke on condition of anonymity said he paid by the personalized class notes delivery service recruiting for her major class notes and gave them to an athletic department employee.

It is not clear how the notes were distributed to the university’s honor code.

Cross Country teams start season with success at invitational

The men's and women's cross country teams began their season with more than their share of success Sept. 10, ahead of their nearest competition.

The women's team competed in the Appalachian State Invitational and garnered four of the five top slots in the team competition.

Junior Sarah Lewis was the individual winner as she finished the 5,000-meter course in 17:24, 27 seconds ahead of the runner-up. Also finishing in the top five for the Deacons were junior Megan Reid, who finished second at 18:14, and senior Amy Wallace, taking fifth with a time of 18:33.

The men's team was led by senior John DeFrancesco and freshman Sean Nagy. The other top three for the team was Place the seventh place team of Damion Williams and Charlie Shinn.

Rookie of the Week for her contributions to the Deacon volleyball team was Kristen Maso de Moya.

The Demon Deacons women's soccer team began its season with a win in a first-rate performance on Thursday. A win at the College of Charleston and a draw at South Carolina gave the Deacons their first two victories.

The Demon Deacons' season opened earlier than usual because their second game against Charleston was cancelled due to rain.

The victory was Kraus's fifth career victory and her second consecutive victory in the season opening game. It also gave her rank in the top 10 of the ACC for all-time victories.

Last year, Kraus earned All-American and All-ACC honors with a score of 70 in her first tournament of the season, in Minnesota.

Not only is the third female Deacons to earn ACC honors in cross country, indoor track and outdoor track overall.

New rankings have men's soccer rated 20th in the country

In the latest NSCAA poll, the Demon Deacons finally earned a national ranking as they were ranked 20th by the coaches association.

After not being ranked in the pre-season poll, the Deacs finished their first week with victories over Virginia Tech (4-0), San Francisco (2-1) and St. Bonaventure (1-0).

In route to leading the Deacs to its 3rd overall win, freshman Jared Staile was named ACC Co-player of the Week.

Staile leads the team in scoring with three goals and has seven assists and also earned tournament MVP honors at the Nike Wake Forest Classic.

Athletic department shoots for high scores

Athletes receive admissions, academic assistance

According to the NCAA homepage (http://www.ncaa.org), online exceptions may be made for athletes with learning disabilities was possible accommodation to those mandatory satisfactory progress report and potential appeal of special classes for learning disabled students.

"We do not, as a policy, pay students for their academic success," Bland said. "I don't understand how they can allow this to go on."

"Doug Bland, the academic services director, said.

There were at least five basketball players in the student's class, and at times she was asked to make as many as four copies of her notes for the department.

Many students believe this is a common occurrence on campuses of competitive Division I schools.

"Every Division I school does stuff like this, so it's not really an exception, but with the high academic standards Wake Forest strives for, I don't understand how they can allow this to go on," Bland said.

It's an illegal occurrence on campuses of competitive Division I schools. They offer a supplementary, lower academic support for its athletes, whose special skills often keep them from campus and from their schoolwork.

According to an athletic department publication given to athletes when they arrive in the fall, the basic purpose of the department of athletics academic services is to "further the intellectual and emotional growth of student athletes."

"We're trying to give our student athletes the chance to do their best," Bland said.

They provide services such as academic advising, academic monitoring, academic needs evaluation, career planning, supplemental study and tutoring for all interested athletes.

"The students are of such a valuable position that everybody else simply because of how much time they have spent on their sport," Bland said.

According to page 18 of the student handbook, you may be admitted if you are a member of the athletic department and you meet the following requirements:

- Have a 1.5 grade point average on a 4.0 scale.
- Have a 2.0 grade point average in the core curriculum.
- Have a 75 percent of the credits attempted.
- Have a 2.0 grade point average in the core curriculum.
- Have a 75 percent of the credits attempted.
- Have a 2.0 grade point average in the core curriculum.

"However, their diverse back-grounds do not ensure that their performance in their academic excellence that would match their athletic skills."

"The athletes would get a decided advantage over other applicants" because they can manage to do things in Wake Forest that would be hard to do elsewhere. The academics are competitive, but the academics at Wake Forest are not as competitive as some other schools, Bland added.

According to Proposid 40 of the NCAA, there are certain academic standards that students must meet before being admitted to an NCAA school.

"The guidelines take into account the athletes' test scores and their grade point average in selected high school courses in determining eligibility as college freshmen," Bland said. "We're not going to allow athletes who don't adhere to the same requirements that we do," Bland said.

"We're not going to be competitive in our thinking, so it is important that we have 70 or 80 athletes coming in every year that will make as many as four copies of their notes for the department.

"We do not, as a policy, pay students for their academic success," Bland said. "I don't understand how they can allow this to go on."

A new film, "Fever," recently released, has the potential to become a critical and commercial success. The film, directed by Kelly Mack and produced by the director of "Black Swan," explores the life of a female artist who must navigate the complexities of the art world.

The story follows the struggles and triumphs of a young artist as she seeks to establish her identity in the competitive and often ruthless world of contemporary art. The film features a talented cast, including an award-winning actress in the lead role, who delivers a compelling performance that captures the raw emotions and challenges faced by artists.

In addition to the main storyline, the film incorporates elements of romance and drama, providing depth and nuance to the character development. The cinematography is impressive, with stunning visuals that complement the emotional intensity of the narrative.

Overall, "Fever" is a thought-provoking and visually striking film that offers a realistic portrayal of the art world. It is a testament to the power of storytelling and the importance of supporting the arts.

If you are a fan of the art world or enjoy drama and romance, "Fever" is definitely worth checking out. It is a film that will leave you with a lasting impression.

We probably will never think of cruising Westover Beach or seeing the cutting-edge installation of Nam June Paik's "art in time" at the Whitney Museum of American Art in New York and London. This month however, a very special collection is on display in the art gallery in Scales Fine Arts Center. The collection features Korean American artist Donald Nichols' collection of works by abstract artists that is currently on display at scales. Until recently, the period of early American Abstract art was largely ignored by collectors and historians.

"It's great to see that recognition finally has been swept up in the fervor of the nightly fever," Nichols said, attributing the artist's former lack of popularity to the fact that they were not accepted as serious artists in their time. "Fifty years later, maybe we've even crossed that threshold that the artists will be recognized in their time with all the people who will have the recognition back with them.

"The show, which was recently featured in Forbes magazine, consists of nearly 100 pieces of abstract art. Many of the pieces feature the geometric and abstract style of the period, resembling works by non-American painters of the same era.

"The collection is owned and generously provided for display in an exchange of cultures," said Mary Jane Berman, professor of anthropology. "Nichols hopes that the paintings will help students understand the differences of peoples, especially for Nichols. Nichols explained. This love for the American Realism - a picture of a house - is a good example of the period. Werner Drewe's "Welcome to Sarajevo" and "Gold and Black Reviewer" are other noteworthy names such as Storrs, sized that students should learn to appreciate for the precociousness and inspiration in art.
