For which event or purpose was the Apartheid Rally organized, and what was its significance? The Apartheid Rally was organized in support of divestiture, a movement aiming to end investments in companies doing business in South Africa, particularly in companies associated with apartheid. The rally was significant as it reflected the growing international pressure on South African companies to divest from the country's apartheid regime. The rally was attended by students and faculty, and it was a demonstration of the university's solidarity with the anti-apartheid movement.

What changes were made to the sorority rush process at Wake Forest University, and how were they received by the students? The sorority rush process at Wake Forest University underwent significant changes. The women’s rush was integrated into the overall sorority rush process, and34% more women were invited to join sororities and fraternities. This change was made in response to the results of a survey that indicated that 72% of sororitywomen wished to attend sorority rush in the future, and 80% of other women wanted to attend as well. These changes were well-received by the students, and it was reported that the effects of discrimination were being eliminated as a result of these changes.

Benson Center Construction Remains on Schedule

By Harriet Chapman
The construction of the Benson University Center is proceeding as scheduled, said Old Gold, Wake Forest’s full support of the project.

Benson Center Foundation, the $10 million complex, has been completed. The copper roof is due to be finished by February. The building will be joined, eventually, to an upper part of the building, said the architect.

The foundation of the Benson Center is still in progress, but the roof is expected to be completed by the end of the year.

Seven Students Petition for Sigma Tau Delta English Honor Society

By Joyce Whalen

Writing Center Director, Tutors Help Students Improve Skills

By Julie Rootwell

The writing center is one of a plan that could go all over campus. For instance, all students who wish to work at the center have to write a letter to the Contact Office. The center's director there is Dr. Chidnall, the director of the writing center.

Although there are at least six tutors who work at the center, the center is run by one person, a graduate student who is writing a dissertation on writing pedagogy and profit by writing about different aspects of the center. The center is a place where students can come to talk about writing. Some students who are not in graduate school will come and talk about writing.

Once a week a tutor will meet with a group of students to discuss their writing. The tutor will also meet with individual students to discuss their writing.

The center is open to all students who wish to work at the center. The center is open to the public and is free of charge.

The center is located in the lower level of the Center for Continuing Education.

Tuition

The annual tuition increase for the next academic year has been announced, affecting the students of Wake Forest University. The increase, totaling $5,000, is the largest in the university's history. Students are expressing concern about the rising cost of tuition. Some are also questioning whether the benefits of higher tuition outweigh the costs. The university's administration is working to address these concerns and to ensure that students have the resources they need to succeed.

To Twisto The Facts Is an Old Ad Game

Bill Horton

It seems that the applause rings hollow when assessing the impact of advertising on society. Despite the rise in consumer awareness, the truth behind advertising remains shrouded in mystery. This is a cause for concern, as advertising's influence is pervasive and deeply embedded in our daily lives.

Advertising is a complex, often hidden, but powerful force that shapes our perceptions and preferences. It is important to understand how advertising works and what its impact is on society.

Humans Are Poor at Superiority

Larissa Teigen

In a world where we are constantly striving to be better than others, it is important to understand the role of superiority in our society. Superiority can take many forms, from physical attractiveness to academic achievements. However, the pursuit of superiority can have negative consequences, such as increased stress and decreased well-being.

It is important to be mindful of our own superiorities and to recognize the impact of our actions on others. By practicing empathy and understanding, we can create a more just and equitable society.
WFU Abandonsex Educators

Wake Forest is in too small to lose so many teachers, with their vast experience, and even in educational standards even if we lose them...I am feeling rather toward long term, and just take an upbeat look at Duke, an institution of higher learning of far less repute than Wake Forest. If Wake Forest students have an influence—perhaps indirect—and they should speak for themselves in Wilmington.

In looking at this problem, let us first open our eyes to the immediate and visible aspects of our immediate specific issue. This is important because without an appreciation of the long-term, multiplicity, complexity, and quality comprehensiveness of the issue facing us, it may be impossible to see the larger picture and feel the magnitude of the challenge we face.

We can do better. We can do more, we can do it differently. And we can do it with our students.

This is the harder and the more difficult step, but it is the most important. We can do it with our students, and we must do it with our students.

Whether we make improvements in our undergraduate or graduate programs (both of which are essential aspects of our educational institution), the core of our community must rise. These changes will be most meaningful only to the degree that they are led by our students.

We see a future where Wake Forest is a better place with better students, and a better place for us to work.

If we truly care about Wake Forest, it is not too late to join this movement. Together, we can bring about change and make Wake Forest a better place for all.

Holiday is Justified

Who said Wake Forest University honors Mel T. King Jr. (Dr. King)? Well, in this case, "saudi" is not a "saudi," but a "saudi" woman an expression of existence. Such people will need this time to see other cultures and judge whether or not they are true. I am looking for a better future.

Open Odum Giving His Final

On Tuesday evening we were the first office when we use a sign "began" our Dinner's Democratic, a detailed, or, more specifically, in the head coach Dane Odum. The dinner was at Wake Forest in 90s, largely harder to make changes to coach's coaching style, but that's the point of "on-time." It is a sign in the beginning of this thing, the "before" and "after" in terms of the "next." Thank you for coming to an office based on principles set down for their own par- ents. The new president, Kyle Regan, is a "black hawk" by steps.

CLOSE ENCOUNTER OF THE FEMINIST KIND

This issue is one of the most interesting stories in the world today. On the left, there is a "women's" action that is in a sense, "women's," and the other is a "broad" action. The former is a quiet, gentle, peace-loving action. The latter is a more aggressive action. The former is a "women's" action. The latter is a "broad" action.

I have to say that I don't feel that my own experiences of being a woman have been so meaningful. I have felt that my own experiences have been more meaningful.

I am not saying that I am a woman, but that I have experienced the "women's" action. I have experienced the "broad" action. I have experienced both.

I believe that we should support both actions. We should support the "women's" action and the "broad" action.

I believe that we should support both actions because both actions are important. They are important because they represent different perspectives.

The "women's" action represents the perspective of women. The "broad" action represents the perspective of everyone. Both perspectives are important.

I believe that we should support both actions because both actions are important. They are important because they represent different perspectives. The "women's" action represents the perspective of women. The "broad" action represents the perspective of everyone. Both perspectives are important.

When East Germany opened its borders Nov. 9, 1989, East and West Germany joined together, knocking down parts of the Berlin Wall. Eight million travel visas were issued by the East German government the first week. Citizens of both countries flocked to the wall in a near-religious frenzy to scratch their names and the world continue to make phlegm gestures. The reason that once stood for oppression now represents the East Germans' new freedom.

The wall was harder to chisel away than I thought it would be. It had been poured into iron; the cement was thick and filled with rocks. I could not believe I was actually chipping away at the Berlin Wall.

Witnessing history in the making is not something everyone gets to do every day, or even every year. I did that during my stay with Kristi Rumpf, a Wake Forest sophomore, and her family in West Germany. We crossed through the one corridor open to American military personnel and their families between the countries, then travelled to Checkpoint Charlie and the Brandenburg Gate, the major crossing point for East Berliners.

We headed straight for the wall to chip away pieces for souvenirs. Children also attempted to remove their own pieces of the wall. Although they do not realize the symbolic freedom behind the act, they will someday learn that not all people have the same privileges that they have now.

West German guards smiled with their counterparts from East Germany through the holes in the wall. Although physical barriers are gone, their differences remain. When they speak the same language, they laugh together; when they speak different languages, they continue to make phlegm gestures.

Two East German guards also showed their sense of humor as they walked along the wall with snowballs in hand, but they resisted the temptation to join the chisellers below. After I had chipped away our own signatures, we added our names in front of the many other visitors to the Berlin Wall. Spray painting the wall was a popular pastime before the wall was toppled.

A row of white crosses along the wall, erected in memory of East Germans who died trying to escape, remain untouched. The markers span wall for miles. The most recent are freshly painted, dating as late as May, 1989. The journey gave me a deeper appreciation of the freedom I was born with, a freedom for which some people have been willing to risk their lives.

Wake Forest To Host Big Four Event; Intramural Office

By Patrick Austin

Wake Forest University will host the 44th annual Big Four Invitational Challenge, Wednesday, April 4.

The competition will feature intercollegiate athletes from Duke, North Carolina, North Carolina State and Wake Forest competing in 11 events: softball, basketball, cross-country, volleyball, track and field, tennis, swimming and two for second, one for third and none for last. Wake Forest will play again tomorrow, as the Demon Deacons' strategy during a timeout women's basketball.

“The Dean's Office will issue a list of participants to the Intramural Office, which awards four points for first, two for second, one for third and none for last. Wake Forest will play against the Blue Devils. Mary Powell, a senior, finished third in the women's mile, giving her her first indoor victory.

Among the men, freshmen turned in many strong performances.

Terry Scott, who finished third in the 800-meter run in the Penn Relays high school championships last year, scored in a strong 5:29.14. He in the 400-meter run as the Southern-Maryland Invitational.

Other promising performances were turned in by freshmen John Cozean in the 5,000-meter run, Derek Taylor in the 3,000-meter steeplechase, and Paul Gauthier in the 5,000-meter run.

Overall, Goodridge said he was "very pleased with the effort" shown by the men. The Van's next test is indoors, when they travel to East Tennessee State University to compete with the Blue Devils in the Ridout Invitational, the largest collegiate indoor meet in the region.

Sanchez Influenced Davis To Become a Deacon

By Jay Bolden

When Alice Neal graduated last spring, Wake Forest's women's basketball team lost a leader and a 2.4. Davis was one of the few seniors on last year's squad, so she took on the same mentor and position role that the departure of Wake Forest's departed third all-time leading scorer, Davis said. Davis began her basketball career to her best friend and teammate. When she entered her first equation, she was a competitive student. Davis has always been interested in basketball. She began her development in numerous "pick-and-roll" games in the summer and AAU.

Although she believes the college game is radically different from high school, Davis has proved herself on the court.

Tucker, also playing for his 1989 high school team, said, "When you're competing against the greatest basketball players in the country, you're learning a completely new way to play. Playing against the best players is the difference in being good and being great for a today." He added, "You learn how to play and you learn how to play against the best players."

There have also been other challenges that Tucker has had to face — mostly because of the NCAA's fast break that has lessened his scoring power. "We've struggled because we haven't started a small lineup and don't have the kind of guards that can get us going. The only thing that has troubled Wake Forest," Tucker said. "It's been a struggle because we haven't been able to get the kind of players that can get us going."

Tucker began his athletic exploits in his senior year at Westover School in Connecticut. "I wouldn't trade my high school experience for anything," he said. "We were in the thick of the country in basketball and played against the best players in the country."

In the last two games, Tucker has scored 30 points against Davidson and 29 against the University of Connecticut. "I wouldn't trade my high school experience for anything," he said. "We were in the thick of the country in basketball and played against the best players in the country."

the action. Need to see how it turns out.

To start with, the mindset shows how the team will respond. In a loss to Davidson, Tucker and his teammates played a low-scoring, 42-42 affair. Tucker didn't play all that well, giving away 32 points for the game. Two small-stinted pictures were picked up for him in the second half.

Tucker's high-scoring effort against the Carolinas was not enough to take the Deacons to the ACC tournament. In the ACC tournament, the Deacons had a 74-73 loss to the NC State Wolfpack. Tucker scored 29 points for the game. Tucker was on fire against the Wolfpack, scoring 29 points against the Wolfpack. Tucker scored 29 points against the Wolfpack.

The second part of the Deacons' season has come to an end, and they are looking at their fate.

SU Appoints Freshman Curator of Reynolda Art

By Brad Dean

SU's new curator, Emily McNally, says she’s excited about the opportunity to work with the art collection in the new museum.

Mary McNally, the director of the Art and Design Program at the school, says she’s looking forward to working with Emily McNally, who has been appointed the new curator of the museum.

Emily McNally will be responsible for the programming and management of the art collection. She will be working closely with the other curators to ensure that the collection is properly preserved and displayed.

Emily McNally says she’s eager to get started on the project and is looking forward to working with the students and faculty at SU.

Confining Atmosphere
Puts Damper On Concert

By Julie Highsmith

When the opening act, New Kid on the Block, was announced to play at the concert on Friday, the crowd was excited. However, when the concert began, the atmosphere took a turn for the worse.

The opening act started off with a lot of energy and excitement, but as the concert went on, the energy slowly diminished. There were several technical difficulties, which added to the overall disappointment of the crowd.

Girls Support Environmentalists, Homeless

By Mike Mullins

The Indigo Girls were one of the keynote speakers at the Greenpeace American Music Awards on Saturday, where they spoke about environmental issues and social justice.

Emily Pearlman, the organizer of the event, said, "The Indigo Girls are an amazing group of people who are dedicated to making a positive change in the world. They are always willing to lend their voice to the cause, and we are grateful to have them as part of this event."
