Artistry blossoms
by Neil Sanders

Few Wake Forest students are aware that there is a dedicated fine arts program that is among the nation's finest. Although it is a relatively small institution, Winston-Salem State University offers a wide range of courses in the visual and performing arts, with a particular emphasis on painting, sculpture, and photography. The program is designed to provide students with the skills and knowledge necessary to pursue careers in the arts or to pursue further study in art institutions. The program also provides opportunities for students to exhibit their work in a variety of venues, including the university's own art gallery and local art centers. The program is supported by a dedicated faculty of experienced artists and educators, who bring a wealth of knowledge and expertise to their teaching. Overall, the fine arts program at Winston-Salem State University is a vibrant and dynamic community that is dedicated to the pursuit of excellence in the arts.
The World Forest Student Government is vitally interested in establishing and maintaining a healthy and productive relationship with the student body. In pursuit of that goal, we will present a bi-monthly informational column pertaining to our current services and activities. This column will highlight the services offered by the Student Government; it will also contain information which we believe is of current interest to the student body.

The Student Government organization is composed of committee officers and a legislative body consisting of standing committees. Each of these committees will have the opportunity to present items pertaining to their areas of concern. These areas will be selected by the Student Government and will enable us to better serve the needs of the Wake Forest student body.

The legislative body will present a bimonthly informational column titled "Page Free". This column will present issues such as student concerns, proposed legislation and any other matters related to the Student Government. This column will be submitted to the legislature on Nov. 1 and Dec. 15. The committee is also working closely with the Administration Committee to coordinate efforts in these areas.

Campus housing

The committee chairman is John Van der Linden. This committee comprises the student housing, financial aid, scholarship, and other matters related to physical facilities and student life on campus.

Campus parking

The committee chairman has been Dr. Robert L.接待. This committee has been meeting regularly throughout the Fall semester and will continue to meet on a regular basis to evaluate student parking situations and to make recommendations to the administration. The committee will also be holding open meetings in the Spring semester to discuss possible alternatives for parking.

Food

The committee chairman is David Shipp. This committee will consider matters such as course credits and social regularity of the student body. The committee will hold open meetings in the Spring semester to discuss possible alternatives for parking.

Student activities

The committee chairman is Daniel H. McGowen. The committee meets regularly to discuss student activities on campus and to make recommendations to the administration. The committee will also hold open meetings in the Spring semester to discuss possible alternatives for parking.

Professors fulfill several roles

Second, professors within the same departments often give up teaching time to their colleagues when they are facing an unusually demanding course, and many individual professors are not given the time to develop new courses for possible candidates. Third, professors must be able to devote time to their administrative duties as well as to their research. Finally, it is essential that the professors be able to develop new courses and to update old ones in order to maintain the quality of the Wake Forest curriculum.

When you get taught by a number of professors, you get a wide range of teaching styles. This is not necessarily a bad thing. A professor may present the material in a particular way that helps some students understand the concepts. Others may present the material in a different way that helps other students understand the concepts. This range of teaching styles can help students learn the material in a variety of ways.

In conclusion, professors fulfill several important roles within the Wake Forest community. While the role of professor is a demanding one, it is also a rewarding one. The ability to teach, to research, and to serve in an administrative capacity is an important part of the professor's role.

Knopfler takes over
by Dan Coates

Dire Straits fourth album, "Love Over Gold," is considered by many as the band's finest work.
Dire Straits, led by British guitarist/lead vocalist
Mark Knopfler, has expanded upon the 1978 debut, "Broadsword and White Horse," with songs that are more than just easy listening. "Love Over Gold" includes a wide range of styles and tempos that reflects her personality. She should not be afraid to make mistakes, because that's all part of life.

Hudson's performance reflects her personality
by Joseph Caputo

Staple singer handguns made Helen Hudson come to Wake Forest Oct. 31 and at the words of her song sang, "in the fashioned way," the audience heard and doing just that. Whether she was opening one of her pop tunes or singing one of her favorite ballads, Hudson and her husband David McElroy were met with cheers and applause.

Helen Hudson, age 22, of Wake Forest, left the audience Oct. 22 with coffee or tea. Normally, songs as long as these tend towards banality and normally quickly- lived rhyme turns may take the album out of these all-too-human confines. Athletics

Today’s college athletes have assumed the role of a business. The idea of losing the spirit of competition, and how much money has been added to the school’s coffers.

Several questions have arisen with this new role. Can intramural sports be ended? Can? Can alumni be allowed to participate in the athletic department? Can an athletic director be an alumnus?

The athletic director will do what he has to do in order to establish a high quality program. This helps him within the realm of the administration, but how much money has been added to the school’s coffers.

The key to maintaining the academic standards and the framework of the NCAA rules is the cooperation of the administrative body. The athletic director should control the school and are responsible for its operations. This applies just as much to extracurricular activities, including athletics.

Bearden explains symbolism

by Janet Hendrick

Artisan Roscoe Bearden is well-known for making postcards and other figurines that reflect the social and cultural aspects of southern life. His work is characterized by its symbolic nature, and the artist describes how the sculpture and prints reflect the people of the South.

The sculptures are a synthesis of the regions he grew up in, which include colorful blues, primitive guitar, the Benin and Dan train, rooster, serpent, and the confluence of African and the African-American cultures. Bearden says that his work is a celebration of the Southern culture and its rich traditions.

Bearden's work is not only about preserving universal ideas and qualities, but it also adapts them to the needs of the community. His art is about the people and their culture, and it is a reflection of the struggle and beauty of the South.

German suits liberal arts

by R.B. Jones

All too often students who are interested in language seek out the German department as an example of a liberal arts program which provides a broad education and involves research and scholarship. Professors of German, James C. O’Flaherty and Ralph Heininger, are examples of this trend. Heininger, who specializes in 19th-century German literature, stresses the importance of publishing for an undergraduate professor. He believes that many bring together people offering up-to-date, comprehensive courses. Heininger has also published numerous articles which draw attention to his studies of the Romantic movement. O’Flaherty, who writes on Judaeo-Christian thought and its relationship to modern German culture, concentrates on the relationship between literature and politics. O’Flaherty also publishes widely on the philosophy of language and perception.

Dan Heininger, last year’s Professor of German, was a noted stamp collector. He is also known for his broad cultural interests, which include architecture, literature, and music. Heininger also has a strong interest in publishing and has written extensively on the Romantic movement. He has received several awards for his work in German studies.

O’Flaherty, on the other hand, is interested in the history of ideas and their relationship to modern political thought. He has written extensively on the philosophy of language and perception, and has received several awards for his work in this field.

The book is titled "Studie in Nietzsche and the Judaeo-Christian Tradition" and is set at Wake Forest since 1838.

Heininger exchanges perceptions

by Jeannette Belloni

Attending a school with so many international students is an interesting experience for students who are interested in learning about the world. The German department at Wake Forest University, in fact, is one of the most popular departments among international students. The department is led by James C. O’Flaherty, a professor of German who has been at the school for over 20 years. He is known for his commitment to teaching and research, and his dedication to fostering a diverse and inclusive learning environment.

O’Flaherty is also known for his ability to communicate with students from different backgrounds and cultures. He has a unique approach to teaching that emphasizes the importance of understanding and appreciating cultural differences. His classes are known for being engaging and thought-provoking, and his students often find themselves thinking about the world in new and different ways.

O’Flaherty is also committed to fostering a community of scholars. He encourages his students to engage with each other and to work together to achieve their goals. He is known for his dedication to helping students succeed, and his classes are often filled with discussions and debates that encourage critical thinking and creativity.

O’Flaherty is a true leader in the field of German studies, and his work has been recognized with numerous awards and honors. He is a respected scholar and a beloved teacher, and his contributions to the field of German studies are truly remarkable.

His approach to teaching and his dedication to his students have made him a beloved member of the Wake Forest community. His classes are always full of energy and enthusiasm, and his students are inspired by his passion for the subject. He is truly a master teacher, and his dedication to teaching and research is an inspiration to all who know him.

Reputation draws talented golfers

by Kimberly Hall

Many of the men's golf team players came to Wake Forest because of its reputation as a golf power. "Haddock built up the golf program," said former player Mark Thaxton. "He is a great coach and I think he could continue to do it." But in spring of 1985, Haddock retired and his assistant Mark Thaxton was named interim coach for the remainder of the year. The former players touring as much as he used to.

"Haddock is playing many different golfers around the country, "Thaxton said. "He's the reason why so many good players are great on the tour. It's a great tradition." His reputation has stimulated in both the school and the golf program. Much of the interest in the golf program has been heightened because of the national regulations. "It is a highly regarded golf school plus its great tradition," Thaxton said.

"I played golf because I grew up in a golfing family. "Haddock is a small child and you get to know a lot of people," Thaxton said. "I'm learning in my first time on tour and getting a lot of experience."

"At the Fieldhouse, I ran cross country and track and school," Thaxton said. "I have been learning in my first year in the school and the golf program."

Lady Golfers strive for excellence at WF

by Joel Hall

Women golfers at Wake Forest are committed to excellence on the greens and in the classroom. "This year we felt Wake Forest because of the top ranking of the school and the golf athletic program," explains Monica Heldt.

Junior Cristal Walden was alloted to Wake Forest for the same reason. "I came because Wake Forest has a good golf program, a good school academically, and I also liked the campus," Walden said.

Dawn Anderson's academic advisor recommended Wake Forest as an excellent school. "I came here for the academic and golf aspect," Anderson said.

"I came here because I knew I would be able to play each long shot in Baltimore," said Anderson. "I was very young, but I am one of the most talented in the conference. We have a lot of skilled teams, so we will not have any players available.

"I took up golf when I was a child at Wake Forest. I have been very much support, but we have been very successful," Anderson said.

Breeze slipped by the Chi's was a battle right up to halftime. The first half concluded with a combination of good defense and poor execution by both teams, leaving the scoreless with each team having exactly one possession each.

The second half began with a quick sideline pass in the end zone, followed by a quick pass and lateral play. A favor of quickness was all it took for a wide open midfield pass to Jay Yoeman to have much time to celebrate.
