James P. McGranery, Attorney General of the United States, will address the Student Bar Association of Wake Forest Law School Friday evening.
The address here will be the Attorney General’s first major speech since he became a member of the Cabinet last spring.

Attorney General McGranery’s office in Washington has released no information concerning his topic. However, there has been the specific statement that the speech will not be of a political nature.

Approximately 176 persons, including Law School students, faculty and staff, are expected to hear the Attorney General’s address. Other outstanding legal figures will include District Attorneys Dr. Thomas G. Green of Greensboro, Roy W. Owens of Greensboro and Wm. Earle Watkins of New Bern.

Harry McMillan, the Attorney General of North Carolina, will deliver the address of farewell.

The banquet, sponsored by the Student Body and the Business Administration, will be held at the Summit Inn in Greensboro on Friday, May 2.

James P. McGranery is a 1953 graduate of the University of Virginia and a 1956 graduate of the University of Virginia Law School, and is a partner in the firm of Moore & McMillan in Greensboro.

McGranery has been member of the North Carolina State Bar since 1955 and is a member of the American Bar Association. He has been a member of the Executive Committee of the North Carolina State Bar since 1966 and is a member of the Board of Governors of the American Bar Foundation.

The banquet, which will be held in the Student Union Building, will feature the address of farewell by the Attorney General. The program will also include a reception and a dinner.

The banquet is open to all members of the Student Body and the Business Administration.

The Student Body and the Business Administration are co-sponsors of the banquet.

Jewels Gives Religious Talk

Dr. Neil Hirschberg Takes Jasper

For Topic

by Bob Frost

Dr. Neil Hirschberg, well-known Jewish speaker and coat leader, delivered the third installation of the Baptist Student Union's new Jewish series of studies. Dr. Hirschberg, an associate professor of history at Yale University, and a member of the Union Board of Jewish Student Work, is a native of New York City. His address was delivered in the Music-Religion Hall at 7:15 p.m. in the Little Chapel of the Baptist Student Union. The address was devoted to the theme of "Christianity through the Eyes of a Jew." Dr. Hirschberg stressed the importance of understanding the mind of the Jew to gain a proper appreciation of the Jewish people and their contributions to the world. He pointed out that many Jews have contributed greatly to the advancement of civilization, from philosophy and science to art and music. He concluded his address by urging the students to read a book or article about a Jewish person and to share their reflections with the class.

Jewels is the campus newspaper sponsored by the Baptist Student Union. It is the official organ of the Baptist Student Union, the Christian Student Union, the Jewish Student Alliance, and the International Student Association. Jewels is published weekly on Sundays and is distributed free to all students.

All Students Eligible:

Point Four Subject Of Essay Contest

Plans for a nation-wide essay contest awarding prizes to high school students are being announced by the Baptist Student Union. The contest is open to all high school students in the United States and Latin America. The prizes will be awarded to the three best essays on the topic: "The Values of the United States and Latin America." The contest is open to all students, regardless of religious affiliation, and the winners will be announced in the January issue of Jewels.

Wake's Progressive Trend

Spanish Instructor Interprets For Wife-Son

Assault could be read as the basis for the future of Spanish, when Prof. Heilman commenting on the situation in his office on Tuesday, thought that he had not been in Spain, for over 30 years. "I am not sure, but I think it is something that has been happening since 1920," he said.

Prof. Heilman, who is teaching in the Spanish Department for the University of North Carolina, has been a member of the Spanish faculty for 30 years. "I think it is something that has been happening for a long time," he said.

As president, Heilman said that he was not sure what had happened in the past. "I think it is something that has been happening for a long time," he said.

New Invention For Research Now Complete

Dr. Perry Takes Course At Case

One Of 50 Professors Attending Course
In Economics At Cleveland Institute

Dr. Thomas E. Perry, new assistant professor of economics at Case Western Reserve University, recently completed a course in economics at the Cleveland Institute of Technology.

While there, he attended a series of lectures and seminars on a wide range of topics in economics. He also had the opportunity to meet with other economic experts and researchers from around the country.

Professor Perry said that he found the course to be very informative and stimulating. He noted that the lectures were given by some of the leading economists in the field, and that the discussions were lively and engaging.

One of the most interesting parts of the course, according to Professor Perry, was a lecture on the history of economics. He found this lecture to be particularly insightful, as it provided a historical perspective on the development of economic thought.

Professor Perry is looking forward to using the knowledge and skills he gained during the course in his own research and teaching. He hopes to bring some of the topics he learned about into his upcoming classes and publications.
WHY BE AWARE?

Last Monday Barry Farber, editor of the United Press Press, addressed the student body. His talk dealt with one of the alarming social problems facing students today.

Why be aware? Is there really a reason, a good reason for a college student to concern himself with the problems of others? Does he not have enough troubles of his own? Should an over-worked sophomore actually be expected to keep up with all that is going on in a world like ours today? Can we logically insist that the graduate of the next generation possess reasonable knowledge of the world in which he will earn his livelihood and a citizen?

There are a number of ways to look at this question. At the college, life is pretty rushed. It is no wonder that some students, caught up in the whirl of campus activities, lose sight of the world outside. But college is traditionally a place of elusion, so one setting apart from a world of emotionalism which has already met there. Marshbanks, house president of the College, Edgar A. Southall, editor of the Wake Forest College, and Cecil N. Maclay, the president of the college, have taken a step forward by employing the bloodmobile—available at the Wake Forest College, to collect blood for the Red Cross. A bloodmobile is a mobile blood bank, a truck used to transport blood from one area to another. The truck is equipped with a refrigerator that keeps the blood cool and safe for transport.

Wake College offers many opportunities for students to become aware of the world outside the campus. Here at this pool of learning, they are exposed to a wide variety of experiences which will shape their future. There is also a strong emphasis on personal development, with a focus on leadership and community service. The college encourages students to become involved in student government and social organizations, including the Student Senate and the Student Activities Association (SAA). These organizations provide opportunities for students to take on leadership roles and work towards the betterment of the college community.

The college also has a strong focus on community service, with many opportunities for students to engage in community service projects. The college partners with local organizations and businesses to provide opportunities for students to give back to the community and gain valuable real-world experience.

In conclusion, Wake College is a place where students are encouraged to be aware of the world outside. They are provided with opportunities to learn about and engage with the world through a variety of experiences, including community service, leadership roles, and personal development. The college’s focus on community service and personal development allows students to grow and develop into responsible and engaged members of society.

Bill Williams Presents: The Inimitable Boregard Smith

That grand book of philosophy, Mr. Boregard Smith, who only last Tuesday received the highest degree of a supply of blood for the Red Cross, will be back on campus tomorrow. He will be back with his usual munificence, and the festival will be attended by the usual number of students.

Mr. Boregard Smith is a well-known and respected philosopher, and his work has been widely praised for its insight and wisdom. He is known for his ability to make complex ideas accessible to a broad audience, and his books have been translated into many languages. His work has been featured in academic journals and textbooks, and he is a frequent guest on radio and television programs.

In addition to his work as a philosopher, Mr. Boregard Smith is also a accomplished musician, and he has composed and performed music that has been widely praised. He is a frequent performer at college campuses and other venues, and his concerts are always a highlight of the academic year.

Mr. Boregard Smith is known for his wit and humor, and he is always a popular guest on campus. His lectures are always well-attended, and he is always ready to offer his insights and wisdom to students and faculty.

The festival will be held in the Student Center, and is open to all members of the campus community. It is a wonderful opportunity to hear from one of the world's most respected philosophers, and to engage in thoughtful discussion and learning.

Program Outline:

1. Introduction: 8:15 p.m.
2. Lecture: 8:30 p.m.
3. Q&A Session: 9:30 p.m.
4. Closing Remarks: 10:00 p.m.

Seiki Kinjo Wants To Study English As Native Tongue

Student From Okinawa Studies Here On Three Grants In Aid

By Lee Roger

When Seiki Kinjo returned from Japan on his home in the Okinawa, he had never seen Wake Forest. In fact, when he was 10 years old, his family were among the refugees. He spent his early years in the internment camp. When he returned, he was eager to learn English, to study English as a native tongue.

Seiki Kinjo is one of the three students from Okinawa who are studying at Wake Forest College in the United States. He is a recipient of a three-year scholarship granted by the College of Okinawa Education.

Seiki Kinjo believes that studying English as a native tongue will help him to better understand the language and its culture. He is particularly interested in American literature and hopes to become a writer.

Seiki Kinjo's journey to Wake Forest was not an easy one. He had to overcome many obstacles to get to the United States. He had to learn English and adapt to a new culture. But he is determined to succeed and make the most of his opportunity.

Seiki Kinjo's story is one of hope and perseverance. It is a testament to the power of education and the importance of opportunity.

Seiki Kinjo is grateful for the three-year scholarship and is determined to make the most of his time at Wake Forest. He is looking forward to learning more about American culture and language, and he hopes to one day return to Japan to share his knowledge.

Seiki Kinjo's story is just one of many that are being told at Wake Forest College. The College is committed to providing opportunities for students from around the world, and it is dedicated to helping them achieve their goals.

Wake Forest College is proud to welcome Seiki Kinjo and the other two students from Okinawa. We are committed to providing them with the best possible education and we are confident that they will excel.

Seiki Kinjo is just one of many students who are studying English as a native tongue at Wake Forest College. We are proud of their dedication and we are excited to see what they will accomplish.
Dixie's Oldest Rivalry To Be Renewed Saturday

By Harold Powell

The Daily Tar Heel first ran this story but we'll have to repeat it because the game in this year's Orange Bowl has chemistry.

The first time was in 1906 when the South Carolina Gamecocks played the Georgia Bulldogs in the first conference game of the year. The game was played in Chapel Hill and the Bulldogs won 7-0.

This year's game is scheduled for December 19 and is being held in Miami Beach, Florida. The winner will be determined by a coin toss.

The game will be played on a warm December day and is expected to be a close contest.

The South Carolina Gamecocks are currently ranked 11th in the country and the Georgia Bulldogs are ranked 12th.

The game will kick off at 8:00 PM EST and is expected to draw a large crowd.

Protests And Rain Mar Second Intramural Week

Two protests took place during the second week of Intramural Week. "PAKA's And Alpha Sigma Phi's Remain Undefeated In Fraternity Play"

The protests were related to the scheduling and conduct of intramural games. "Protests snowed under by rain on the competition field have caused confusion and dissatisfaction among players. Eight more players were to protest the scheduling and conduct of the games, but because of the weather conditions, the protests were not able to take place." "A New Rule in the code of conduct states that any protest during the competition will be heard after the conclusion of the games. The protesters felt that their protests were being ignored and that the scheduling and conduct of the games were unfair. However, the administration of the Intramural Sports Council held the protests after the conclusion of the games, and the protesters were not satisfied with the outcome." "In the case of Alpha Sigma Phi's protest, the protesters claimed that they were not given enough time to prepare for the game. The administration of the Intramural Sports Council stated that the protest was made after the conclusion of the game, and therefore, it was not considered. In the case of PAKA's protest, the protesters claimed that their team was not given enough休息 time between games.
