Vandals damage section of Polo Rush

By Suzanna Dullone

Between the hours of 11:00 p.m. and 12:30 a.m. Jan. 25 newly a dorm ceiling tile, a suspended exit sign, a smoke alarm and ceiling support beams were torn down from the north end of the third floor hallway.

"We were sitting in our dorm and we heard this huge crash. We couldn't tell if they went up or down, but we could hear them laughing," said junior Chris Watson.

Another freshman also gave a similar account, saying, "They by the time we looked outside we just heard them laughing."

Both Paul Flickinger and roommate Chris Watson called the student advisor, officer Thomas Fouer.

"The damage is estimated, the exit sign is up a total of 10 feet, plus some broken decorry, and just a few inches away is a sprinkler head which could easily cause an even greater amount of damage," Detective James Rae, an investigaor with the University Police, said.

According to Jan Davis, the Residence Life and Housing Coordinator, the damage is believed to have been caused by students.

"That's hard for me to understand out of Wake Forest student," said Carrie Carson, the director of Residence Life and Housing.

Rae speculated that the overall cost of the damage was "in excess of $1,000, at least, if not more."

I have to believe they are in that first floor door closest to North because it had paper stuffed in the locking mechanism to keep it open," Rae said.

All of the residents of the third floor north wing had to attend a mandatory hall meeting at 10 p.m. Jan. 26 to discuss the event. The students were informed that if the guilty party was not found the entire group would be held responsible under their signed Residence Life and Housing Contract to pay the cost of the damage.

According to the Gold and Black Reporter, "Residence groups are not held responsible for the damage done to their hall, but they will be held responsible for the cost of the damage if the guilty party was not found."

Single candidates runs for SG treasurer

To replace this year's student Government treasurer, junior Sean Leary, who resigned last semester, six election candidates have filed. The candidates running for this office are sophomore Geoff Greene, who has had two years of experience serving as the Student Budget Advisory Committee's treasurer. The interim treasurer, senior James Faucher, who has served since Leary's resignation, decided not to run for the office in this election because, though he was interested in holding the position of treasurer for a short time, he did not want to continue it for any longer.

Greene

"It wasn't something I wanted to do in the last semester at Wake," he said. Faucher intends to continue the work he began this spring.

Though the main duty of the SG treasurer is to receive, disburse and record all money to the SG, Greene is also responsible for contacting the Special Events Fund, which consists of money allocated to individual organizations by the SBAC.

Greene plans to publicize the Special Events Fund, ensuring that students will know of the hearings and the purpose of the fund. He also plans to advertise the fund to the general student body.

"Students will know of the hearings and the purpose of the fund," Greene said. Greene plans to continue an SG tradition by handing out SG cards to incoming freshmen.

Snow causes euphoria for students, problems for others

Old Gold and Black Reporter

For the past week, the campus has been covered with layer of snow and ice. The students enjoyed when the administration canceled classes, but the weather has caused several inconveniences for all.

The administration does not take its responsibility lightly when it comes to making decisions about during the campus. Paul Escott, the dean of the college, plays a primary part in the decision-making process.

When bad weather conditions are expected, the administration follows weather reports and gets reports from the road and sidewalk condition from various sources on and off campus. All of the information is then relayed to Escott who makes a decision whether or not to stay open.

His decision is then communicated to Kevin Cox, the director of media relations, who contacts the dean from the other schools on campus.

"At times, the other schools will choose to do something different than the undergraduate level, but, the university has made a big effort to communicate between the schools and be organized and unified as possible," Cox said.

The university class very importantly, "It takes a significant event where it would be very difficult for people to be here to teach and work," Cox said.

Escott emphasized that safety is the priority.

The Rush process, by which men can determine the fraternity best suited to their interests, has occupied the time of several hundred men on campus over the last several weeks.

Kevin Dillon (the IFC Rush Chair), has done an excellent job organizing this year's Rush process.

Spring Rush began with Rush registration Jan. 13. All prospective rushees gathered in Pugh Auditorium to hear about the various fraternities, including formal seniors and fraternity activities, along with regulations concerning dry Rush. All rushees had to be at least a second semester sophomore, have a minimum of 14 credits, have a minimum GPA of 1.5 and be in standing with the Office of the Dean of Student Services.

All fraternities agreed to abide by Dry Rush, meaning that they refrain from having alcoholic beverages at fraternity functions, whether in a formal setting or private dorm rooms. Each of the thirteen fraternities has done an excellent job organizing this open Rush. All rushees had to be at least a second semester sophomore, have a minimum of 14 credits, have a minimum GPA of 1.5 and be in standing with the Office of the Dean of Student Services.

This past week consisted of each fraternity hosting various activities, all optional for the rushees. This open Rush finished Jan. 25. At one point from 6 p.m. Jan. 23 and 26 the fraternities hand-delivered invitations extending the invitation for them to be in their group.

Rush gave me a chance to meet a lot of nice guys and get acquainted with different groups of people who share common interests. The opportunity to meet people that I would not normally be able to, I have felt very welcome," said freshman Corey Billingsley.

Secrets day, Jan. 27, fords contact between the several branches of fraternity and rushees.

The purpose of secrets day is to allow the rushee the opportunity to reflect and decide. This allows it to accept the bid or to decide whether to accept the bid or to decide between groups.

The treasurer will also have an active duty in working with the other executive board members in the process of setting goals for the student group organization and dealing with the day-to-day process of handling monetary issues. Concerning the election, Greene said that while he does not know Greene personally, what he has heard of him and his work on the SBAC leads him to the conclusion that he "seems like a really good guy."

"Dane Jones, 5th president, said that while he does not know Greene personally, what he has heard of him and his work on the SBAC leads him to the conclusion that he "seems like a really good guy."

Jones also said that Greene's experience should help him in the election and the position, he should be seen. Also, Greene wishes to improve the current system.
Quark soup was just the beginning

An astrophysicist visits campus to discuss the Big Bang theory and the age of the universe.

By Raye Vinet

Using a traditional prop and good old-fashioned acrobatics, astrophysicist Michael Turner took students through the history of the universe. Turner is the chairman of the astronomy and astrophysics department at the University of Chicago.

He gave his lecture called "Big Bang Cosmology: From the Expanding Universe" on Jan. 26 in the Carlin Lecture Hall. A total of 80 people were in attendance.

"I want to take you on a grand adventure," Turner said, opening the lecture that explained the Big Bang theory and its supporting evidence.

"When the bell goes down, the Big Bang theory describes the birth of the universe 14 billion years ago. But for the sake of the lesson, they began expanding rapidly. The theory was inspired by the observation that it appears to galaxies — what is known as the redshift — that the universe is expanding away from us. The galaxies farther away from us are moving faster.

Two scientists, Arno Penzias and Robert Wilson, won a Nobel Prize for their work in 1978 for discovering Pratt and Whitney in 1978 for discovering that the universe expanded and expanded very quickly in the first moments after the Big Bang. The expanded universe is the birth of the universe and the age of the universe. These microvolumes are characteristic of observations at 5 degrees Kelvin only, a temperature that the average temperature of the universe is 2.7 Kelvin below zero Fahrenheit. For comparison, Turner said the average universe is 300 Kelvin, or 180 degrees Fahrenheit.

As the expansion continued, the universe expanded to form the stars and galaxies. At this stage, the universe is 3 trillion degrees Kelvin. The entire universe is 1 million degrees Kelvin.

At this temperature, the quarks and quarks made up the universe. The quarks and quarks made up the universe.

"One second after the Big Bang, the universe was only 1 billion degrees Kelvin. Now, the light elements, from hydrogen to helium, could be formed.

The other "heavy" elements were formed much later in the universe's history. Turner called the element formation "Big Bang nucleosynthesis." Matter didn't really form until three thousand years after the Big Bang, when the universe was only 500,000 years old. This is known as the Big Bang's recombination. Turner pointed out that the universe cooled and expanded very quickly in the first minutes after the Big Bang.

In fact, it expanded more in the first three minutes than it has in the 14 billion years since then. Turner said.

"As the scientists figured out this out, they realized that we would be able to observe the other evidence of the universe's age, as they figured it to be, had to be greater than the age of the universe."

A galaxy of a star can be older than the universe. This is determined by the age of the universe to be 10.1 billion years to 15 billion years old, or as old as the universe.

"This means that we are younger than the universe. We still have a lot of questions to answer," Turner said.

Campus organizations may have their announcements listed by sending email to news@ogb.wfu.edu, listing to Ext. 4591 or writing to P.O. Box 7246. The deadline for inclusion in each week's paper is 5 p.m. Monday.

administration's biggest concern. "We don't want anyone to risk his or her safety. Faculty, staff and students cannot get to class on a day we've had snow or it will cause a disruption on what's safest for them," Escott said. Once the decision is final, Cox carries out the necessary procedure to inform students, staff and faculty.

"My primary role is providing information to students and faculty and carrying out the communication," Cox said. Offering students who do not have access to the university voicemail or e-mail services can find out about the canceled snow or ice should make a decision based on what's safest for them," Escott said.

Students have mixed emotions about all the snow. "The first snow we had brought back a lot of memories, but I don't like it when it starts to melt," Joshua Bolt Brown said.

The recent blizzard has caused problems across the state, prompting the states in the region to be in a similar situation. Yesterday, senior Jennifer Rapp of the College Democrats faced a frustrating cancellation because of the weather. For two weeks, the College Democrats have been working to schedule a conference with Ronnie Ansley, a Democratic candidate for lieutenant governor in the state. Because of the snow, he has had to cancel almost all of his 45 scheduled events today with the Committee on Academic Affairs.

Bill proposes new rules for students

TUCSON, Ariz. — Under a bill proposed this week by Rep. Jean Smith, freshmen living in University of Arizona residence halls would not be allowed to have guests of the opposite sex in their rooms after 10 p.m. or during formal events.

Because she will be taking the office of treasurer in the middle of a year and intends to study abroad next year, he plans to spend his time getting used to the middle of a year and intends to study abroad next year, he plans to spend his time getting used to

SG Academic

Work is being completed on The Source, a Web-based forum for students to evaluate classes and faculty. Plans are being made to evaluate First Year Seminars before they are taught. In conjunction with Information Systems, the committee is planning an online student journal where exceptional papers and experiments will be posted. The Undergraduate Plan will be reviewed to determine how the educational experience has changed with the implementation of technology. Faculty will be involved in committee meetings to discuss their feelings on working for the university.

SG Judiciary

The committee wrapped up continuing issues from last semester and is beginning to examine the SG handbook to make sure that all areas are in accordance with any updates.

SG Physical Planning

Basketball courts on North campus will be fixed. Fathers cards of discounted cab services will be distributed in campus post offices. The committee is investigating shuttle running off campus.

Appropriations and Charter

Nomination bills will be under consideration at the next legislative meeting. Nominations will be taken for the Pro Humanitate award, which is given at the end of every year to a group that has exemplified those ideals. Organizations can now begin the process to accept donations from student cards.

Rush

Finally, at 6 p.m. Jan. 28, the rushers will line up in the Student Development office and tell Mike Ford, the Intersorority Council Advisor, and Wednesday which group they want to accept a bid from. After they declare their intentions, rushers will join their pledge classes and have their pledge ceremony, getting pledge pins and other mementos. After rushers declare their intentions and go through their pledge ceremony, pledge night begins. This evening is full of celebrations for new fraternity brothers and current members with parties opening up to campus at 10 p.m. After pledge night, freshmen begin participating in pledge education. During this six-week process, pledges attend pledge retreats, begin to understand the goals and objectives of their organization and participate within it.

New members of fraternities, along with sororities, are also required to complete the Alpha Series, a two-part educational program for all pledges which includes sessions on hazing, sexual assault, alcohol use and eating disorders, and dating violence. The value of the Alpha Series is that it deals with high-risk issues where students are challenged to assume responsibility and good judgment," said Ford.

CHILDISH STUDENTS

Have you noticed? The light scents of wood smoke are more abundant than usual. Maybe it's the cold weather that is to blame. Or it may be that some kids are just in the mood to make the air smell nice. Whatever the reason, there is a distinct smell of wood smoke in the air these days, and it's not all from the university's own wood-burning systems.

The smell of wood smoke is a common sight on campus these days, as students continue to light their fires in the cold weather. Some students argue that it is a necessary evil, while others are appalled by the sight and smell of the fires. But regardless of how one feels about the fires, it is important to remember that they are a part of the campus culture and should be respected as such.

The fires are a symbol of the university's commitment to traditional values, and they are an important part of the student experience. They provide an opportunity for students to come together and share a common interest, and they also serve as a reminder of the university's history and traditions.

In conclusion, the fires are a valuable part of the campus culture, and they should be respected as such. While some may find them offensive, others see them as a symbol of the university's commitment to traditional values. Regardless of how one feels about the fires, it is important to remember that they are a part of the student experience and should be respected as such.
Federal gridlock was intentional

American complaints about a slow government, it prevents hasty lawmaking.

If the last 25 years as a politician has been fast in America. Apathy, ignorance and fear have stunted progress on the issues that many Americans, youth, and some adults believe in their hearts are their top choices for the next U.S. Congress. I believe that the policy of the government is influenced by a faction that prioritizes immediate actions over the long-term interests of the country.

Perhaps it is the structure of government is the root cause of gridlock. The structure of the U.S. system of government based on its electoral decision-making may not be as efficient as it is by which the system exerts power that is encoded. That which, in the American political system, we subject to such a high level of in a far and fundamental strength of its rationally. Possibly the most advanced as to possible political parties, the press, lobbyists and interest groups, whose power also could be considered as a source of influence. I'm not sure exactly what is the reason. Some would argue that a majority of that is a political gridlock. It is in that sense that I am unable to determine the root cause of the gridlock, the government's failure to make changes.

I hope for a change in the ways that we make decisions in the government and that our leaders are able to work together to solve the problems that we face. I believe that it is important to have a system that allows for compromise and cooperation, and that our leaders are able to work together to find solutions to the challenges that we face.

Duke's seniors in the ACC.

Two teams moving in opposite directions met Jan. 22, and after a nightmarish loss at the hands of the Demon Deacons, both had already run into their respective walls.

The fifth-ranked Blue Devils and the Demon Deacons met at Cameron Indoor Stadium, home of the Duke Blue Devils, in what was expected to be a close game. However, the Demon Deacons easily won the game, scoring 11-7 overall and 2-1 in the ACC.

In the ACC, the Demon Deacons have struggled to achieve their goals. After starting the season 7-0, they have lost their last two games, including this one against Duke. The Deacons are currently 4-4 in the ACC.

The game was held at Cameron Indoor Stadium, the home of the Duke Blue Devils.

The Deacons depend on depth and defense as they begin the season.

Three-peat is defined as the act of winning a championship in three consecutive seasons. The term has been applied to Michael Jordan's Chicago Bulls on two separate occasions. "It's a magical number," said Bill Williamson, former coach of the Demon Deacon basketball team. "It's something we rarely see in the college basketball world, and that's what we're working towards."

Although the Hurricanes have excelled in the ACC over the past few years, they have not been able to win a three-peat. The Hurricanes have been able to win a championship season, but have not been able to achieve a three-peat.

But after two lackluster performances at N.C. State and Maryland, the Demon Deacons finally looked like themselves as they would be in the game against the Blue Devils. For Friday, that's the way it was.

Maryland, the Demon Deacons that's the way it was. Many thought they would be in the game against the Blue Devils, playing better, but..." said Head Coach Dave Odom.

The Deacs burst out of the gate and took a 9-2 lead. On the other hand, Duke, coming off of an 82-69 win over N.C. State Jan. 18, struggled to a lopsided start, missing on three of first five free-throw attempts.

The Deacons lead, however, was short-lived. A large part of the disappointment for the Blue Devil program came immediately, when sophomore forward Darius Songaila went out of the game, hitting four of their first five shots en route to a double-double.

Darius Songaila was hit in the eye in the first five minutes of the game and that left him barely able to see.

"We've got one post player who's hurt and we've got another with a crack in the eye, so we're having a tough uphill battle," said Whiteside.

With one of the Deacons nursing an injured knee and with foul trouble, the Blue Devils then shot the other end.

For us to play with Songaila for only 18 minutes of the game and that left us to play with Songaila for only 18 minutes of the game and that left us to play with Songaila for only 18 minutes of the game. But after two lackluster performances at N.C. State Jan. 19, the Deacons took the Blue Devils by two points at the half.

However, Duke pulled ahead to a 79-61 victory.

The Cavaliers will enter the Coliseum with a second-place conference standing and a 5-1 ACC record. With just over six minutes remaining, but Duke scored 22 of their last 33 possession to clear out their record-breaking win.

For us to play with Songaila for only 18 minutes, it's almost more than I can think. It's just not necessary to me, as well as some other things. But that's the way it is.

Faculty gallery opens in Scales

By Kelly Marklin-Kin

The university's art gallery in Scales Fine Arts Center welcomed yet another diverse collection of artwork. On Jan. 25, a program of graphic art by the University of New Hampshire's Mary Ann Faustino was on display for the first time. Faustino's work, which includes a number of different mediums and styles, is known for its playful and creative nature. The gallery, which is located on the second floor of Scales, is open to the public and features works from both faculty and staff members. The collection of works is in celebration of the university and faculty staff and their contributions to the university.

The collection features a variety of works from different artists, including paintings, sculptures, and photographs. Some of the pieces are abstract, while others are more representational. The variety of mediums and styles on display highlights the wide range of artistic expression that exists within the university.

The opening reception was held on Jan. 25, and it was a great opportunity for students and faculty to come together and enjoy the art on display. The gallery is open from Monday to Friday from 10 am to 5 pm, and it is free to the public. Visitors are encouraged to explore the different works and to engage in conversation with the artists and other members of the university community.

In addition to the exhibition, the art gallery also offers a variety of educational programs and events throughout the year. These include lectures, workshops, and tours that are open to the public and provide opportunities for learning and engagement with the arts. Overall, the art gallery is a valuable resource for the university community and serves as a space for the expression of creativity and the exploration of the diverse perspectives that exist within the university.

Girl, Interrupted

Hollywood has a grand tradition, from 1920s Over the Cuckoo's Nest, to 1960s One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest, to 1999 Girl, Interrupted, of capturing mental illness. Girl, Interrupted is based on the autobiographical account of author Susanna Kaysen's 1980s stint in a mental institution. The film stars Angelina Jolie as post-graduate Kaysen, an aspiring writer fresh from an unsuccessful suicide attempt. Her slow recovery check her into Claymoore, a fictional Boston psychiatric hospital, where the movie depicts her staying there. She predictably encounters a terrifying assortment of fellow patients and befriends them with poignant and involuntary foibles to follow. The movie is complex and it's a testament to the film's creators and the actors. This is an excellent, courageous, and inspiring film.
"Bond" soundtrack mixes new, old styles

By Tammy Davis

In the tradition of James Bond movies, there are new villains, new Bond girls and a striking theme song. For The World Is Not Enough, composer David Arnold and the band Garbage compile the visual experience of an action movie with integrating music.

British composer Arnold serves up ten tracks and one score for the film and, like Bond, is his second Bond score.

While being known for his music for science fiction movies such as Independence Day and Goodwill, Arnold received acclaim for his work on James Bond: GoldenEye.

Then, he was experimenting with the movie's familiar sounds and taking them to another dimension. This made way for the inclusion of Shirley's James Bond theme and the coming with Alex Gifford of the Possessions.

The band, Arnold represents the classic Bond theme by blinding it with technic music in "Show Me the Money" and "Come, 007, Your Time Is Up!" The strings and horn play in full force while hip-hop drum-laced beats bang in the background.

Not only does Arnold recognize the importance of the old with the new, he also emphasizes the need for the music to provide a sense of action, not just the movie.

Another piece that does not stray away from the film's excitement is "Ice Bandits." From slow tempos with weak strings and their blandness results another piece that does not fray away from the film's excitement is "Ice Bandits." From slow tempos with weak strings and their strength results, David Arnold rejuvenates the importance of the old with the new.

The second big benefit of The World Is Not Enough is the score that is the most prominent in the list of scores. Luckily, the score is saved by the tide track of "M's Confession" by Shirley's. With this suggestion of more unions of classic and techno, the world must prepare the action movie to reflect the action music.

Arnold is his second Bond score and collaborating on this score, and his presence mix the rest of the electrifying ones that seem more complete mutually.

With this suggestion of more unions of classic and techno, the world must prepare the action movie to reflect the action music.

Arnold is his second Bond score and collaborating on this score, and his presence mix the rest of the electrifying ones that seem more complete mutually.

This is the future of Bond, then there are more unions of classic and techno, the world must prepare the action movie to reflect the action music.

The story deals with a woman's struggle to find faith and one was written by a student.

The ecology of the style he was writing makes you think of Indian or perhaps African cultures. A blend of such instruments will also be featured.

The first of the two plays is called "As the Gently Falls," which was written by senior Matt Urbant. It is being directed by senior Bill Diggle. The story deals with a woman's struggle to find faith as her mother is on her deathbed.

It's a unique opportunity to put on a play like this," Diggle said. "It's so rare that student-directed productions are performed on campus.

The performance will be portrayed by senior Cammie Wilson. Diggle said that the action of the play is somewhat unrealistic, because the players have to move between three settings - all in the enclosed space of the ring theater. However, Diggle went on to say that this unrealistic staging helps add to the "mythic" feel of the play.

The second production to run next week is called "The Lesson." While the play is being directed by senior Matt Mundy, it was written by professional playwright Eugene Ionesco.

This work is classified as an absurdist piece, and it centers around a professor who is trying to impart a lesson upon his unwilling student. The professor, played by senior Wade Murphy, ultimately deals with his pupil, freshman Kate Henderson, in a manner that is sure to surprise audiences.

Diggie said that the director's choice of the play placed it in a "golden" category, whereby the thrust is to get students to think about the world that surrounds us.

The plays will start at 7:30 on Jan. 31 and 4:30 on Feb. 1.

Two student-directed plays to be staged in Ring Theater

Old Gold and Black Staff Report

Two one-act plays are scheduled for back-to-back performances Jan. 31 and Feb. 1 in the Ring Theater. Both productions are student-directed, and one was written by a student.

THE PERFORMANCES will be free and open to the public. The plays are titled: "As the Gently Falls," directed by senior Bill Diggle, and "The Lesson," directed by senior Matt Mundy.
