University allocates $2.2 million for men's dormitory renovations

President Thomas E. Hearn Jr. announced today a $2.2 million allocation of the four men's dormitories to be completed this summer and fall of the 1982-83 academic year. He said the renovation of the existing two six-story dormitories is necessary to meet the changing needs of the Wake Forest student body.

"The university has made tremendous strides in recent years to provide the men's dormitories with modern facilities and living accommodations," Hearn said. "This allocation will provide the necessary funds to complete the renovation of the existing four dormitories on time and within budget." The Men's Housing Advisory Committee, which advises the university on men's housing, recommended the allocation.

The four main residence halls for men are arranged in two dorms, each with two wings. The back dorms will be renovated later this year.

Scuba Club sponsors marathon

By Marjorie Milne

Parks of the Wake Forest Scuba Club will participate in the fourth annual Tunnel Run this fall. The event is sponsored by the American Red Cross Carolinas Division.

The race was held at Wake Forest on March 29, 1981, a freshman dormitory will become a freshman dorm in order to accommodate this renovation. The back dorms will be renovated later this year. A major renovation began in the summer of 1981 and is expected to be completed by the fall of 1982. The renovation will include the addition of new rooms and the installation of air conditioning in the existing dorms. The renovation will also include the construction of a new dormitory for women.

The tunnel runs for both males and females will be completed by early spring of 1982 and will be open to the public. The club members are working with local schools and government officials to ensure that the race is safe and enjoyable for all participants.

Scuba Club members will receive a discount on race entry fees and will be able to participate in the event as part of their club activities. The club also plans to raise money for local charities through the event.

Women hesitate to report rape

By Marjorie Milne

Rape victims in Wake Forest are often hesitant to report their assault, according to a recent study by the Department of Public Safety. The report, "Women's Hesitation to Report Rape," was released in March and is based on interviews with 100 rape victims.

The study found that only 30% of rape victims reported their assault to the police. Of those who did report, only 14% were satisfied with the police investigation. The study also found that women are more likely to report their assault if they have been previous victims of rape.

The study recommends that the university provide more resources and support for rape victims, including a 24-hour hotline and a support group for survivors.

In honor of excellence

At the University Commencement held on May 1, President Thomas E. Hearn, Jr., was presented with the John J. Hartsell Award for Excellence in Education. The award is presented annually to an individual who has made outstanding contributions to the field of education.

President Hearn is the first university president to receive the award. The award is presented by the Wake Forest University Alumni Association.

President Hearn has served as president of the university since 1978 and is the first president to be appointed by the university's board of trustees. He is also the first president to be elected by the university's faculty.

The John J. Hartsell Award is named after the former university president who served from 1938 to 1968. The award is presented annually to an individual who has made outstanding contributions to the field of education.
Seated at the head of the table was a student representative from Wake Forest.

When asked to determine who should address the Essex, students wanted to know what the headmaster thought of the student government. "I don't think that," said the headmaster, "but we'll probably get there soon.

The planning or the administration. John M. Proctor, head of the student building, initiated a task force to conduct by Mills. Office at local level.

Several other students, including some from the university, expressed their thoughts on the issue.

It should be noted that this is the first of a series of events held by Mills. For the next few weeks, we will be holding similar meetings to discuss these issues.

The meeting concluded with a final call for everyone to participate in the upcoming events.
Phobia elimination
A new approach to curing phobias by a Florida university psychologist is gaining nationwide attention.

Or 2 people try to direct, all that one at the University of Miami's Phobia and Anxiety Research Laboratory. They call the approach "behavioral exposure therapy" by participatory Harvard Research Laboratory.

Author Goldmann and his colleagues, said the new approach teaches patients to paint upon feared situations with their phobias. Some experience real-life after only one exposure.

Traditionally, phobias must contract their fear by decreasing their phobic behavior, a treatment which sometimes takes years.

U.S. ships fire on Beirut
The strike gun of the U.S. New Jersey fired on France anddrive position of west Beirut while some U.S. Marines propped cigarettes to hurry to a target.

President Reagan announced Sunday that the Marines will be withdrawn from their perilous position in the coming weeks.

The firing of the New Jersey was a strong show of force and support for Lebanon's president Christian Amin Gemayel, whose government is rapidly deteriorating.

Gemayel's prime minister and Calivet resigned last weekend, and a army's fighters has said in defecting to join the Syrians-supported Hizbollah and Muslim militias.

Marine Major Dennis Brown, a U.S. military spokesman, said the New Jersey "firing is directed by the President's statement of last night."

Regarding his policy for U.S. actions in Lebanon, Reagan said Tuesday night that the U.S. Navy would provide "firepower and support against any threat from Fright or regret from acts of terrorism, as well."

Walt Disney, the Disney studios leader, said from Rome that if U.S. intervention does not stop, U.S. interests in Lebanon and the Middle East "will be exposed to forces that are friendly to guerrillas."

U.S. leaders react to shelling of Beirut
Congressional leaders reacted Monday and support for President Reagan's announcement that he will withdraw the New Jersey from Beirut. The decision to shell of Syrian-supplied missiles, however, caused some worry.

Rep. Democrat Hans Kaptur (D., Ohio), a member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said Lebanon's president Gemayel's government will not stand in his way. She added, "we just can't keep him at peace with others."

Sen. Pam Harris (R., Indiana), added, "What's interest have been made of interest in Beirut?."

Rep. Marvin Smith (R., Ohio), said it was "distressing" with the demonstrated shelling. "It's now seems to be lacking more and more.

Top U.S. military analysts say the U.S. withdrawal is legitimate, but necessary. After tentative plans earlier last Sunday, and "there's need to rugged situation and losses, since the U.S. forces are anything to the Sri Lanka union, we, the joint forces, her."

Edward Latoski, a leading Middle East expert in Washington, said that U.S. withdrawal of the U.S. Marines is "a step in the right direction."

Latoski also said, "Everyone in the Middle East knows that the U.S. is not behaving like a great power. it can't save the best in the Middle Eastern kitchen."

Sensationalism

To many students, reading the lead story in last Sunday's Winston-Salem Journal was like a shock. A cold and cut, it was an embarrassment to the entire community.

What should be clearly recognized, however, is that the article was the result of an extreme case of sensationalism.

As the story is now told, Journal reporters came to campus last week looking for items about the problem of alcoholism with the events surrounding Todd Jones. However, what was presented was another story—more like, "What's the university doing about Jones?"

Well, the Journal got its story all right—and much to the chagrin of students, faculty, staff, or alumni.

Two major points need to be voiced regarding the article and the impact it has. First of all, the Journal has not, in the first place, been interested in the problem of alcoholism, but instead in the personalities involved. The story, the manner in which the results were released and the comments made of the persons involved are all to be questioned.

The Journal has treated the community and its students rather as victims.

What we need now is a different approach to the problem. No longer should we be held up as a statistic to be worked on by the Journal, but instead in a media extravaganza.

There are three reasons why this election will affect the future of our university and its students.

First, election officials have been in Washington for the past few months, searching for a solution to the problem of alcoholism. Now is a unique time when a much-needed solution is about to happen.

Second, and perhaps the most pressing reason, is that the election will give the Democratic Party another chance to come to grips with the problems of our community.

As the people move for the New Right, Republicans are beginning to see the consequences of their policies.

While the President of the United States has not yet spoken, what he says is sure to have an impact on the outcome of the election.

In this endeavor we urge the university and community leadership to do all they can to make students aware of the severity of the problem.

Alcoholism is a problem. We admit that much. Now it's time to do something about it. We won't let it get by us.

The statistics from this study were admittedly alarming. But, we need to know what in context they were drawn. How was the sampling done? What do the percentages mean?

Yes, the figures express a need for serious concern for discussion of the problem. But let's have the facts straightened out first.

During the next few weeks, the Old Gold and Black will do all we can to present the problem in a proper context. We hope the administration reacts to the problem in the same manner.

Another question addressed is, "Will the election affect the New Right?"

Among this term's candidates is John B. Anderson, who is running as a member of the New Right.

In his question, the President of the United States can be seen to have a definite purpose. The election is as important as the New Right's purpose.

Among Teller's candidates, Anderson is the one who can best be seen to have a definite purpose. The election is as important as the New Right's purpose.

You can be sure that the New Right will make the most of it and the election is as important as the New Right's purpose.

The New Right's policies are not new policies. It has given the people of this country a better chance to elect a new President than any other candidate.

There is a possibility of a solution to America's most serious problems, if the people of this country will only look to the future and understand the facts.

We ask for help

After reading Keith Lawrence's article "Women's Lib notwithstanding," I was struck by the irony of the numerous "firsts" and "records" he described. Yes, Ted Bilich, I too have already broken a few myself. Perhaps you would care to dig a little deeper into the newspapers of the past few days.

But my apologies were not asked for by Ted Bilich. Lawrence's article was one of the most masterpieces of the week. He has given us a fine piece of writing. But, if you mean to write, I do believe you should try to at least write an interesting story.

Ted Bilich's conclusion is not surprising. He has simply suggested that, in his opinion, women are more capable of breaking a record than men. It is not surprising, it is expected.

There is no way to know a person by only the facts of his life. It is true that a person's life is often a book, but a book is only a book. There are pages in it that no one has ever read. There are pages in it that only one person has ever read. And no one knows what they mean.

The article in the Winston-Salem Journal was an interesting one, but I would like to know more about his source. This probably was the first time, however, we would have been asked to think.

A retaliatory strike

From experience

I write with a certain feeling of apprehension and with full knowledge that the only way to bring about these changes is through the election of Mr. Reagan.

I am not communicating to urge Mr. Reagan's support; however, I do believe Mr. Reagan's support is necessary. I believe the issue of the election is so important that it must be taken seriously.

I think it is important that we all work together to bring about these changes. Mr. Reagan is the only one who can bring about these changes. I believe that Mr. Reagan is the only one who can bring about these changes.

There are three main things that Mr. Reagan will do if he is elected President. First, he will bring about a change in the government. Second, he will bring about a change in the economy. Third, he will bring about a change in the military.

In conclusion, I believe that Mr. Reagan is the only one who can bring about these changes. I believe that Mr. Reagan is the only one who can bring about these changes. I believe that Mr. Reagan is the only one who can bring about these changes.
On the necessity of recognizing our plight...

When the eminent physicist Enrico Fermi completed his last task, his mechanism calculated and computed the ultimate response of a thousand nuclear reactors. This response is the only legacy left behind after its destructor function. It is a function of the nuclear reactor's core, a function that it can execute with minimal operation, a function that it can execute with a minimum of time, a function that it can execute with a minimal investment of effort.

The Fermi response is the question of how to deal with a recent increase in defense spending under the Reagan Administration. With their number of neutrons, the thermonuclear scientists believe that the number of neutrons is inversely proportional to the number of neutrons in the universe. The fewer the neutrons, the better the results.

The question of the response is to decide if the current state of defense is acceptable to us. In the end, a few random facts will suffice to understand the situation:

- The total number of neutrons in the universe is roughly equal to the total number of neutrons in the human body.
- The number of neutrons in the universe is inversely proportional to the number of neutrons in the world.
- The number of neutrons in the universe is inversely proportional to the number of neutrons in the earth.
- The number of neutrons in the universe is inversely proportional to the number of neutrons in the human body.

As Enrico Fermi said, "It is a very simple problem. But it is not a very simple problem."

So let us not waste any more time on the Fermi response. Let us work on the problem and find a solution that will work for all of us.

A curtain call for alumni

by Donald M. Davis

The theater is the backdrop of two white clapboard houses at 3:30 p.m. Sunday afternoon in the theater arts building. The stage is packed with students for the final dress rehearsal of 'Morning's at Seven.'

The audience is different today. Not because the seats are more ornate or the stage better lit. But because it is a familiar crowd. The cast of the play is seated in the theater, preparing for the curtain call. The audience is made up of alumni, faculty members, and students who have been involved with the production.

The afternoon is a celebration of the theater arts department's contributions to the Sesquicentennial celebration. It is a moment to reflect on the past and look forward to the future.

Finalists visit for interviews

As for directing, Steven Berwind ('74), who directed "Morning's at Seven," said, "I think it's a lot the same, but he directed the actresses that Tedford admired in her coed days."

Since most of the cast put in full days of work and then return to their studies, the play is paid for the opportunity to appear under the lights in the acting center. Only by the grace of God and my family have I been able to do a job less telling of myself than the role of God in "Seven."

The most recent graduate in the cast, this student company will produce the theater's contribution to the Sesquicentennial celebration. "Morning's at Seven," which was directed by Donald M. Davi,

The play's director, Steven Berwind ('74), is not sure what will happen. He said, "I am sure that the library to its new home, in the University's move from the eighth floor..."
Wake Forest drops Terps in two OT thriller

Deacons are finally winning close ones

by Bobby Styles

During the game sequence with Danny Young and Lenard Teachey, Wake Forest faced the old and rough, the Wake Forest basketball program has emerged back as ACC also-ran to national prominence.

In the two seasons since the team has been at this level, the Deacons have won more games than have lost but are generally winning in the final days. Their 8-1 record is not enough.

The Deacons played nearly the kind of basketball that they have been playing for years when they were in the ACC. The Deacons were physically rated against the Terps and the Terps answered with a determined defense.

Young and Teachey were the only two players who scored any points for Wake Forest. Teachey was the game's leading scorer with 13 points. Henderson, Collins and Green are reportedly in this area, but they had no points to show for their efforts.

The Deacons defense, however, played up to the Terps' best threats. The Terps' leading scorer, Danny Young, played with both intensity and enthusiasm. The Terps even had a few three pointers during the game, especially in the first half.

There will be other close games this season, according to the Terps' coach. They will be happy, however, that they can handle them on the court. They are confident that they can handle the pressure of playing well.

If the Maryland victory is a sign of things to come, the Terps will be happy. They have been playing with confidence.

We're prepared early in the game," Teachey said. "but not that we're playing our home court.

Using the press in the game, Wake Forest controlled the Terps' offense. Wake Forest developed his confidence and he has been able to run up the score on the Terps in recent games.

Lynne Hinton got involved early and Kelly Marshall replaced Hinton in the fourth overtime. "We kept rotating around and getting people in, it was a good game effort.

In other action last night, Lady Deacons head coach Lefty Dreisell must have thought the Deacons era over with the Terps being the two most painful teams in the ACC.

The Wake Forest basketball program was honored by the coaches and fans last week. David Jarvis was named ACC coach of the year for the second time in four years. Jarvis is one of the coaches of the ACC who have been hired out of the ACC.

Three named to Hall of Fame

Maryland coach Larry Doyal must have been feeling a bit jubilant Wednesday when not a basketball team in the ACC could knock off the Terps. In fact, Wake Forest coach of the year, Lefty Dreisell, could not have been more pleased.

In the first overtime, Maryland led by 15 points. The Terps' coach, Larry Doyal, knew that the Terps were the better team and that the Terps would be able to come back.

Danny Young, however, played with both intensity and enthusiasm. The Terps even had a few three pointers during the game, especially in the first half.

The Terps are confident that they can handle the pressure of playing well. They have been playing with confidence.

"I didn't want to be the one who had to make the winning shot," Teachey said. "I'm going to make that." Teachey is the Terps' leading scorer, and he also tallied seven assists. Greenbrier West and Maryland's Brooks were the two most painful teams in the ACC.

The victory was the Terps' first win since March 7. The Terps are now 5-1 in ACC games and 11-7 for the season. They are looking good for their second consecutive year in the ACC.

RALEIGH—NC State’s Lorenzo Charles, the Atlantic Coast Conference scoring leader with a 19.7 average, does not make any predictions. "It’s the best part is that it opens up a lot of other things for us," he said.
