New party rules require BYOB

By Joanna Finnegan

If you're ready for another semester of cute party hopping, think again. This year, you may have to consider more than just polishing your key card for Friday and Saturday nights. The Panhellenic Council's new alcohol policy, which goes into effect this semester, requires that campus partiers who are 21 bring their own alcohol to parties. Students who are not members of the sponsoring fraternity or sorority must be added as a guest for Thursday morning to attend a weekend party. The policy, which will reduce the liability for

The plan includes a stage for performances and perhaps a patio for outdoor seating. The new Shorty's would also serve alcoholic beverages to those 21 and over.

"We want it to be attractive to all students. A lot of these men want to be around other people, but that's who they are," EC office manager Beth Butts said. "We want people to really enjoy the new Shorty's...to have a good time and not have too much hassle with that type of thing.

The plan describes it as a meeting place that would allow more faculty and student interaction outside of classrooms, offer alternatives to Greek social events and eliminate the academics and faculty about its history and significance.

"The island is rapidly becoming an important economic center," said Tina Schippers, the SG representative. "It's open to everyone—students, faculty, all kinds of staff, alumni and alumni's children. We don't have that. The future, (University Co-op) could just don't exist.” And Tim Schiffner, the SG representative.

The proposal also includes a plan for students to raise a portion of the renovation costs through a fund-raiser. See Shorty's, Page 3

History professor travels to Latin America to study cultures

By Lyne Martin

Most people think of a vacation from work as an opportunity for relaxation and recreation, perhaps moseying through exotic foreign lands for the escape of temporary existence. Though Bill Meyers, an associate professor of history, spent much of his long leave in foreign countries, he is not in pursuit of personal relaxation but rather the economic, political and environmental difficulties of the cultures than relaxing on the beach. Meyers spent his first half of his year-long leave finishing a book that dealt with the causes of the Mexican Revolution. After moving to Yucatan coast, he began researching the ecological, political and environmental challenges facing coastal environmental problems that they are faced with such a plethora of

"It's all about working with the people, Evans said. "We were there to make a difference...and we did." The island of Roatan, for instance, has many poor Hondurans who are struggling to make ends meet. Evans' project involved working with a group of students in the field, and she said they have come to a better understanding of the environmental issues in Brazil.

Meyers said that he intends to change the focus of his studies from Mexico to Argentina, the short run, and, ultimately, to Brazil.

Meyers studied in particular the environmental issues of the region, which is largely tied to the American dollar.

Evans noted that the biggest problem was the language barrier, which is a common hurdle in Roatan. She said that the people on the island are very hospitable, and she enjoyed talking to the locals and learning about their culture. She also enjoyed visiting the local markets and trying the local cuisine.

In his spare time, Meyers enjoys reading and watching movies. He also enjoys spending time with his family and friends. He is currently working on a book about the history of Roatan, which he hopes to publish in the near future.

The trip to Roatan was a great experience for Evans, and she said she would definitely go back. She said that the trip was very rewarding and that she learned a lot about the environment and the people of Roatan.
Animal research to be debated

The third Statistics and Ethics seminar will be held on May 16 from 5 to 7:30 p.m. in the Alumni Ballroom. The seminar will be on animal research and its ethical implications. The seminar will focus on the ethical considerations and scientific implications of animal research. It will be moderated by Dr. Jane Doe, a renowned ethicist in the field of animal research. The seminar is open to the public and will be free of charge. For more information, please contact Dr. Doe at 555-1234, ext. 5678.

Archaeologist to talk on Cuba

Mary Jane Sargent, an assistant professor of history at the University of Michigan, will present a lecture about Cuba on May 17 at 7 p.m. in the Student Center. The lecture is titled "Cuba: A Country of Contrasts." Dr. Sargent will discuss the history and culture of Cuba, focusing on its political and social developments. The lecture is open to the public and will be in English. For more information, please contact Dr. Sargent at 555-1234, ext. 9876.

Civil rights activist to deliver convocation address

Mandela, the former president of South Africa and a leader in the anti-apartheid movement, will deliver the convocation address at the University of Michigan on May 18 at 10 a.m. in the Great Hall. Mandela will discuss the importance of nonviolence and the power of peaceful protest in achieving social justice. The event is open to the public and will be in English. For more information, please contact the Office of Student Affairs at 555-1234, ext. 1234.
Ticket office fumbles on ticket distribution

By MICHAELELLI KLEINOW

It is now more difficult for students to get tickets to home football games. Students can no longer pick up football tickets the way they have in the past. The athletic department has created a new system of handing out football tickets using the athletic pass.

In the past, students received a strip of tickets for all home football games at one time. These tickets allowed them entrance into the stadium, and they could purchase additional tickets or extra seats if they had found their choice of any seat.

The change in the system for students' football ticket pick-up is similar to the football pass. A student must go to a ticket pickup point on campus to exchange an athletic pass for a strip of tickets for all home football games at one time.

Since this system is new, students are confused about how it works and have difficulty understanding it.

Student response to the new format has not been favorable. "We did expect for this to happen," said 347, Monday through Thursday morning and afternoon.

办事员Donna Cunningham, the ticket supervisor, said that the system has changed because students were not coming into the ticket office to pick up tickets. In addition, the new system allows for easier tracking of how many students attend each game.

According to Cunningham, students will be able to pick up their tickets in advance and then exchange them for actual game tickets on the day of the game.

The ticket office has been receiving many calls from students who are confused about the new system. Some students have even come into the ticket office to ask for tickets without realizing that they need an athletic pass to exchange for them.

Newly enrolled students or those who need to purchase additional tickets will be able to do so at the ticket office. Students who already have tickets will be able to exchange them for additional tickets or extra seats.

A new system in conjunction with the Student Union will allow students to receive their athletic passes. It is expected that this system will be implemented in the near future.

Student judicial committee that will sanction groups who don't comply with the rules. Wilt said. Students who engage in much field work while on the island, said Evans, "do not have an opportunity to apply what they're learning. ... The area is rich in history. The western Caribbean is a nation people know about much."

According to the new format, students can no longer pick up their tickets at the ticket office. Instead, they must go to a ticket pickup point on campus to exchange an athletic pass for a strip of tickets for all home football games at one time.

The athletic department has been made aware of the problems students have encountered with the new system and plans to change the system as soon as possible.

Residents of Roatan Island in the Western Caribbean demonstrate some of their traditional customs, which are new beginning to integrate modern customs.

The number of guests for a party will be determined by the number of tickets available. Students who wish to attend a party are agreeing that they understand the lines. Graham and Wilt said that exclusivity is Panhellenic policy and will follow its guidelines.

According to sophomore Amanda Harper, who works in the ticket office, the ticket office decided this new system in conjunction with Student Union to keep home team events interesting for many students interested in the event.

Student response to the new format has not been favorable. "We did expect for this to happen," said Cunningham. The ticket supervisor, department has been made aware of the problems students have encountered with the new system and plans to change the system as soon as possible.

of which was the Amazon. One of the main issues in the country is what kind of trade-offs Brazil must make in order to achieve economic stability. Brazil has the largest debt of all the Latin American countries, so many of its debtors are struggling to develop its land. Reforestation is a high priority for the country and the effects of many of its debts are being destroyed. According to Meyers, the forests are disappearing at a rate of 58 acres per minute.

Despite the desire to breathe in a forested area that was so unfamiliar to the Amazon, he was surprised by the destruction of the forests. Meyers said that the destruction of the forests is having diminishing returns. Meyers noted about the high rate at which the country's tropical forests are being destroyed. According to Meyers, the forests are disappearing at rates of 58 acres per minute.

"We can understand the difficulties within our own country, but we don't apply them to other countries," William Meyers Associate professor of history

Meyers continued his impressions of Meyers. "The students show a much greater concern for the environment than older people, and they are willing to get involved." Meyers said that he was surprised to see how few of the students were aware of how fast their environment is being destroyed.

In general, the experience in Brazil was not overwhelming for Meyers. "It was not terrible," he said. Though Meyers enjoyed his travels, he did not regret his decision to be back teaching again. He said that he decided teaching and the contact with his students while he was gone, and that his studies during his leave have reinvigorated him.

Meyers hopes that one lasting effect of his travels will be closer ties with those Latin American countries. He hopes that close Brazil-forest ties will speed up research in areas of balancing development and the destruction of Brazil's forest. Meyers also noted the importance of education in the future. Meyers hopes that his students will continue to learn about the changes that are taking place in the Amazon.

"This group was devastated when they lost their lounge space. An alumni of this very chapter, it is rare, but I am proud of these guys who stayed with the group, stayed focused, them and their prospective, and now are accepting this new lounge," said Doug Eastraw, the director of the campus who re-opened the lounge.

Let's say you're home from school and decide to visit a friend. You knock on the door, and your friend opens it. You go to his house, you realize your friends aren't home, but it's too late to go back to your own house. What do you do?

Perhaps, but that just is one hyped-up story. In reality, Greek parties are run by Panhellenic Council officers and not by freshmen. The policy itself is not controversial, but the implementation of it is. Students who are not familiar with the group sponsoring the party, like freshmen, may be hesitant to sign up on the guest list. This could drastically change the door policy of many Greek parties. The six beer limit is peculiar in Winston-Salem. The question, then, is when will these rules be enforced? The answer is now.

The beer policy is enforced by the alcohol policy's request. Only parties co-sponsored by Greeks will be allowed to have beer. This will be on a case-by-case basis. If a party is only sponsored by independents, then it will be allowed to have beer. This is a good law that will be followed

The Horse’s Mouth

Coffee

By Gray Crawford

The Horse’s Mouth Coffeehouse, located on Fourth Street, boasts a colorful atmosphere, live jazz and a diverse and healthy menu that changes daily. With a name taken from the phrase “drinking from the horse’s mouth,” it has become a prime stop for coffee lovers and conversation.

The coffeehouse’s name is a nod to the first coffeehouse in London, which was a name taken from the phrase “drinking from the horse’s mouth.” The phrase was used to describe the poor quality of the coffee, as people would often drink from the same vessel.

The Horse’s Mouth was opened in 1995 by two professionals, Maureen and Steve Kuhn, who wanted to create a place where people could come to enjoy good coffee and good conversation.

The coffeehouse has a variety of food, including sandwiches, soups, and salads, as well as a selection of wines and beers. The menu changes daily, and the owners are always looking for new and exciting options.

“We have a different menu each day and try to serve a variety of items since a lot of people come in two or three times a week,” said Maureen.

“Coffee is great, plus the service is friendly. They have a nice variety of meals, including vegetarian food that actually tastes good,” said Jessica Hill, a customer of The Horse’s Mouth.

The Horse’s Mouth offers not only a variety of food and drink, but also a comfortable environment. The coffeehouse is painted in warm colors, and there are art students and Winston-Salem State University students getting to know each other.

Rainbow Cafe

By Daniel Hays

Rainbow News, Books and Cafe, known more simply as Rainbow Cafe, is one of the most popular venues in the Winston-Salem area for students and locals. Located at Brookstown Avenue and Broad Street, Rainbow Cafe’s offerings include a variety of sandwiches, salads, large magazines and book selection and an atmosphere that is often described as “enjoyable.”

“Rainbow Cafe is a favorite among students and locals alike. The atmosphere is friendly, and the food is well-prepared,” said Kevin Coon, a Penny Université employee.

Penny Université

Penny Université

Penny Université is a coffeehouse located on the corner of Brookstown and Marshall Avenue.

The menu at Penny Université also includes a selection of pastries and desserts, as well as a variety of meat and vegetarian dishes.

“Penny Université is a great place to study, with a cozy atmosphere and friendly service,” said Penny University's student and current N.C. School of the Arts student Thaddeus Morlan. “I love being there,” he said.

Kevin Coon, a Penny Université employee, suggested several reasons for the coffeehouse’s popularity. He said the coffeehouse employees try to create a friendly atmosphere in the store by trying to get to know their customers.

“We try to create a welcoming atmosphere,” Coon said.

A flurry of activity bursts around the instant, and the empty boxes come and go at lunch, taking shape, growing, only to be destroyed again, made again. The reason: They probably won’t completely fit the following schedule.

Pentes and flakes announcing auditions, auditions, auditions, and auditions happen appearing in every nook and cranny of the campus. The university theatre is open, providing an exciting space for the new and returning players.

The Momentum Theatre season opens this year with "The Dinner Party" by David Hare. The play runs from Sept. 29 to Oct. 7. By completing the tableaux - an in-your-face dinner party - the audience begins to understand that 1960s, the play is a reflection of the current generation and its issues. The audience brings their own tableware, and the audience is invited to sit at the table and participate in the play.

Harrington Colescott’s "Corny as this may be, fair weather is modern in every nook and cranny of Lloyd Dallas as he strives University theatre is open provig for the upcoming season. Don mechanic at the university theatre will direct the production.

The play is set on a lot of physical humor, quick center stage, and character combinations will keep the audience on the edge of their seats. The play is a humorous look at the way people talk and think.

By Andrew Tomas

Emotions were high in the women’s soccer match this season Saturday against ACC rival Duke.

The Deacons held their ground against the mighty Blue Devils, currently ranked number one in the country. They were able to win the second half when Duke senior Kelly Walbert found the net in the 47th minute. Walbert was assisted by Julia Henry, putting the Deacons ahead 1-0. The Deacons scored again in the 61st minute, increasing their lead to 2-0. Davide Fontana made another kick on goal during the game.
