University purchases new language houses

By CRISTINA VENIS

In a surprise move, Wake Forest announced this week that it has purchased a building to be remodeled for use as the French House. Lionel House, which now houses the French department, will be sold and used for other purposes in the coming years.

The new building, located at 1282 Polo Road, will undergo extensive renovations to accommodate the French department and other uses. The university plans to retain all faculty and staff members who are currently affiliated with the French department.

The new building will be used to house the university's French program, which currently has about 80 students. The facility will include classrooms, offices, and a language lab.

A meeting was held last week to discuss the possible uses for the new building. Those who attended represented the Romance Languages, the French faculty, and other interested parties.

The decision to move the French program to the new building was made after a thorough review of the current facilities. Among French students, indications are that they prefer improved facilities for the language program.

Angeloil highlights graduation activities

By ERIC HUNSLIK

Angeloil will be the subject of a debate Monday night at 7 p.m. What will be discussed is whether or not the university should provide for Angeloil. The debate will consist of a two-hour session, with a 30-minute break for refreshments.

The debate will be held in the college's auditorium. Angeloil, who is a leading advocate of Angeloil, will present her case for why the university should fund Angeloil. A representative from the Angeloil Society will respond to her arguments.

The audience is encouraged to attend the debate to discuss the issues and express their opinions. The event is open to the public.

Law students win competition

By SIISRAH REYNE

Each year, Wake Forest Law School holds a competition to select the best student lawyer. For the last three years, the Wake Forest Law School has sponsored the competition. This year, the competition was held on campus, with students from all over the country participating.

The competition, which is open to law students at accredited institutions, is designed to simulate legal trials and other legal proceedings. Students are divided into teams, and each team is assigned a case to prepare and present.

In the competition, students must demonstrate their ability to research, analyze, and present legal arguments. They are also evaluated on their ability to work as part of a team, to think critically, and to communicate effectively.

The competition is a great opportunity for law students to gain experience and to improve their skills. It is also a great way to network with other law students and professionals.

Computers update paper typesetting, printing abilities

By LOIS SHEPHERD

A new computerized typesetting system has been installed at the Wake Forest University Press. The system will replace the old typesetting machine that was used to print the university's publications.

The new system, which is based on a laser printer, allows for faster and more accurate typesetting. It also provides more flexibility in terms of design and layout.

The system is expected to increase the speed and efficiency of the typesetting process, and it will allow for greater control over the final product. The university is currently working to integrate the new system into its publishing operations.

The computerized typesetting system is a significant improvement over the old system. It will allow the university to produce higher-quality publications, and it will also save time and money.

The system is expected to be fully operational by the end of the year. The university is currently working to train its staff on the new system, and it is expected that the first publications will be produced using the new system in the fall.
Chemical company hosts business-related seminar

On April 26, the Babcock Graduate School of Management at Wake Forest University hosted a seminar for executives from the Agricultural and Textiles Divisions of CIBA-GEIGY, and the Dyestuffs Division of Rhone-Poulenc. The seminar was attended by over 30 students and faculty members. The seminar was led by Babcock faculty members and concluded with questions from the students and faculty in the afternoon.

CIBA-GEIGY Corporation is a chemically-related business, a company that is a major producer of agricultural chemicals and pesticides in the United States, including the Agricultural Division, which produces protective chemicals and hybrid seeds for U.S. agriculture, and the Dyestuffs Division, which is the world's largest producer of dyestuffs and dyes. The Dyestuffs and Chemical Division was one of the first dynamic manufacturers of textile dyes. The vast range of colors is in a major supplier of dyes and specialty chemicals in the leather, paper, and textile industries.

CIBA-GEIGY Day was developed as a way to bring Babcock business students into closer association with the company. Faculty and students have had many years of contact with Babcock graduates over the last several years. In addition, Paul Gelzer, Vice President of the Greensboro facility, serves as the Babcock School Robert Dowd Professor of Business. The seminar was held at the Babcock Graduate School of Management. The seminar was led by Babcock faculty members and concluded with questions from the students and faculty in the afternoon.

Because of good weather last fall, the examination of South Hall is ahead of schedule. The third floor, scheduled to be finished first, is the final stage. Only six men and two women classes will have the dorm as the summer housing, but the dormitory is a mixture of accommodations, with more comfortable furniture and a kitchen.

The basement of South Hall features a large lounge, one of which will be used for U.S. The only difference between this basis and that which transmits CIBA-GEIGY is its size. Although wiring has been put in for phone lines, Campus said the dorm may have only hall phones. The decision is to provide a line in each room, which will be made this summer, depending on whether the students will be able to accommodate the extra doors.

Future residents who want to see the dorm can go to the office on the construction site during 8 a.m. to 10 a.m.

Campus Crime Stoppers

Students are reminded to be careful about giving personal information, because the advent of final examinations is usually accompanied by an increase in the number of telephone scams. When unusual requests are made, no action need be taken.

Students with information should contact Campus Crime Stoppers through the public safety office.

Campus Crime Stoppers runs up to six monitors a day, which receive information being sent to area police. The general public is encouraged to give information that may be useful. Campus Crime Stoppers works primarily with presenting information to the police, and will determine when the information is useful.

Computer Center Notes

The Computer Center in accepting applications from those students who wish to work as assistants in the fall. We will need candidates for a limited number of hours during both sessions of summer school. Students wishing to work during summer school in the Center should come to the Center office on the construction site during 8 a.m. to 10 a.m. to fill out an application. The schedule for the time the Center will be open during the exam period is listed below. The center room on the construction site during 8 a.m. to 10 a.m. will be open the same time. The Center office on the construction site during 8 a.m. to 10 a.m. is accepting applications now from those students who wish to work during summer school.

We would like to remind you that student accounts on the construction site during 8 a.m. to 10 a.m. will be closed.

The recent recommendation by the Old Gold and Black to purchase three new computer terminals for the Old Gold and Black was the end result of much deliberation. The decision upon approval will undoubtedly improve the efficiency of the student newspaper and reduce printing costs for the university.

The article mentions many advantages of the new machines, but the most prevalent of which are the increased efficiency and speed of work. In addition, the speed of work is much faster than that of the present machines.

The term "students" is used in the first sentence as an alternative term for "students." The absence of a comma before "students" makes the sentence more concise and easier to read.

The sentence "The improvement could not be measured in increased sales or larger circulation" is a generalization, and the writer is not making a claim that any specific improvement would necessarily lead to increased sales or larger circulation.

The phrase "the recent controversial decisions made by the administration to close the Old Gold and Black to students" is ambiguous and needs clarification. The writer needs to specify what decisions are being referred to.

The phrase "national and international" is used in the last sentence to emphasize the importance of the decision. However, the decision itself is not specified, which makes the sentence unclear.

The period at the end of the sentence "As you can see from the following information..." is unnecessary, as the sentence is complete and the information that follows is not a continuation of the sentence.

The phrase "these tenuous plots on other members" is grammatically correct and makes sense in the context of the sentence. However, the writer may want to consider whether the phrase is necessary or whether it could be replaced with a simpler phrase.

The phrase "to be held in the daily" is grammatically correct, but it could be replaced with a simpler phrase if the writer wants to make the sentence more concise.

The phrase "the recent decisions of the students..." is ambiguous and needs clarification. The writer needs to specify what decisions are being referred to.

The sentence "I wish to convey my..." is a general statement, and the writer needs to specify what they wish to convey in the context of the sentence.

The word "inadequate" is used in the last sentence to express a negative opinion. However, the writer may want to consider whether the word "inadequate" is necessary or whether a simpler phrase could be used instead.

The phrase "this is a serious error" is ambiguous and needs clarification. The writer needs to specify what error is being referred to.

A rational basis for decision making

As a student, I'm often asked why I'm interested in government and politics. My answer is simple: I believe that the decisions we make as a society have a direct impact on our lives. When we choose to vote, we're making a decision that affects our future. When we decide whether to support a particular candidate, we're determining who will represent our interests. When we choose to protest, we're advocating for change.

But decision making isn't always easy. There are many factors to consider, and it can be difficult to know what to do. That's why it's important to have a rational basis for decision making. A rational basis is one that is logical, reasonable, and based on evidence.

One way to achieve a rational basis for decision making is to consider the costs and benefits of each option. For example, if you're deciding whether to buy a new car, you should consider the cost of the car, the cost of the insurance, and the cost of maintenance. You should also consider the benefits of owning a car, such as increased mobility and the ability to travel to places you couldn't otherwise go.

Another way to achieve a rational basis for decision making is to consider the opinions of others. For example, if you're deciding whether to accept a job offer, you should consider what your friends and family think. They may have a different perspective, and their opinions can help you make a decision that's right for you.

In conclusion, a rational basis for decision making is essential for making informed decisions. It allows us to consider all the factors that are important, and it helps us make decisions that are logical, reasonable, and based on evidence.

Perfect love drives out all fear and gives the strength necessary to challenge life

In thinking about this editorial, I'm reminded of a quote from St. Valentine's Day, which is written by one of the most famous figures in the history of Christianity. It states, "Perfect love drives out all fear and gives the strength necessary to challenge life with the power of love." This quote is a reminder that love is the most powerful force in the world, and that we should use it to overcome our fears and challenges.

In the context of this editorial, the quote is a reminder that we should use love to overcome our fears and challenges. When we choose to love, we are able to overcome our fears and challenges, and we are able to make the best choices for ourselves and for others.

In conclusion, the quote from St. Valentine's Day is a powerful reminder that love is the most powerful force in the world, and that we should use it to overcome our fears and challenges. It's a reminder that we should use love to make the best choices for ourselves and for others.

Amicus curiae: A friend of the court, a party to the action, or a person appearing as a friend to support the cause of another party to the action, or in the interests of justice. In this context, it means that we should use love to overcome our fears and challenges, and to support the cause of another party to the action.

In conclusion, the quote from St. Valentine's Day is a powerful reminder that love is the most powerful force in the world, and that we should use it to overcome our fears and challenges. It's a reminder that we should use love to make the best choices for ourselves and for others.
Recent alumni join administration

Symphonies combine for spring concert

BY FRANK RASSETT

On Thursday at 8:30 p.m., the Wake Forest Symphony Orchestra presented its annual spring concert at Brendle Recital Hall. The program, conducted by Wake Forest Professor of Instrumental Music George Tracy, featured a new work by the composer and a new work by the University's music faculty.

The works were "Piano Concerto" by Edward Balogh, Camillo Bozzolo, James Butterworth, Tom Hayes, and an "Antonio" by Richard Wagner. The University's music faculty was joined by members of the local community.

The work was dedicated to the memory of Dr. Robert W. Olds, who was a long-time supporter of the arts at Wake Forest. The symphony will continue its annual spring concert series with "The Best of the Best" on April 27 at 8:00 p.m.

Abortion debate

The Old Gold and Black received a first place award for a week ago from the American Scholar's Review and American Scholar's Award Committee for journalistic strengths.

The question of the week began by questioning that one follow the rulings of the Supreme Court. "A news should be considered above all else," said Meyer. After the eight speakers had completed their prepared speeches and rebuttals were presented, the audience was invited to ask questions of the debaters. Many of the questions dealt with the controversy of when life begins, its relation to the public school and the role of the state in each. Green declares eligibility

Kenny Green, Wake Forest's head coach, announcing the 1985-86 season, has announced that his team's 1984-85 seed is eligible and may make himself available for the National Basketball Association's draft. Green, a 3.7 point leader, will be the team's second top scorer and has had a major role in the school's outstanding cheerleader.

Although Georgia Tech ended North Carolina's three-year reign as Atlantic Coast Conference football champions, the Tar Heels, with four players on the first team, led the ACC All ACC football team. The Hilltoppers of Delaware also were named to the first team.

In the next game next season, Fordham University, which has had the longest winning streak in the nation, will be the honorees of the national championship game. The Hilltoppers and Delaware will be the honorees of the first game of the season.

Green also expressed his appreciation of the players.

"I appreciate that many people have expressed their appreciation of our basketball program," Green said. "We appreciate the effort of our basketball players and the support of our fans."
Rollie was the Rocky of 1985

Yes, I have got egg on my face, along with every other analyst in the United States. With the Duke upset, I was supposed to make the Duke-Illinois game a virtual lock, but Rollie Babcock pulled a shocker in the NCAA championship game.

Illinois is the team playing for the title. Rollie Babcock is the coach. He made "we" a believer. The title was out of the way, set the pace. The Fighting Illini were the Paul Garner, everything else fell into place, and we all had to sit down to ring the treasured trophy in skype, it is Becky. A number of things must be said.

Babcock himself is the man. He's also as big a game as anyone, but he's a big one. He doesn't play all the time, so we're just not sure. But he's the one who showed up. Rollie, and the whole team, was the greatest. Rollie, unlike the greatest of all time.

The Big Ten was a four team that seemed to be on the verge of anything, and he'll pick them there. In return, I would pick them there.

Another thing. This game was just positive that we could do in the college basketball. We're not going to win games. With the clock ticking down, the Illini were able to edge out the Wolverines, 64-61, to advance to the NCAA championship game.

The Natural Life History of A Text Book

The textbook is a unique entity in the world of books.

It is a thing of many parts.

It contains the precepts of the author, the wisdom and the teachings of the author, passed on to the editor by the author.

If was conceived of by the publisher and iterated and published in print.

To the reader, it's a work of art.

An infant, it's worth weight in diameters, but the day comes when the publisher won't have a dime for its offspring.

Sparking new, this infant turns out to be a book for the cause.

The new baby matures fast and the infant's future is brief.

However, its future is brief.

In the world of books.

It is dog-eared and mishandled.

It is dog-tired.

Its life is talked about, talked up, talked down.

It is the object of the professor's love, and the students' derision.

However, its value is determined by the demand of the student.

We have to be realistic about the price.

In the world of books, the price is offered for a dime, and misused.
