Students Lobby In D.C.; Legislators Approached

By NANCY ANDREWS

A group of highly motivated students, faculty and an administrative went to Washington to demonstrate the support of the campus for the draft lottery. Among those who attended were representatives from North Carolina, Virginia, South Carolina, and Florida. Students from the University of Texas, North Carolina State, the University of Wisconsin, and other campuses were also present.

The lobby took on the guise of traditional students, carrying handbills and letters. With that, the drive for an end to the draft was well under way. Students and faculty members from the University and other campuses were to make their presence known. Students from as many as 150 campuses and over 100 companies attended.

On Tuesday afternoon, students gathered in front of the State Department building in Washington, D.C., to protest against the continuation of the Vietnam War. Students from the University, State University, and other campuses were represented. A variety of students, faculty, and community members attended.

Students Express Opinions On War By Referendum

By NANCY ANDREWS

Tuesday, May 12, from 8:00 to 8:50 a.m., a second referendum was held on the issue of war in Vietnam. The second referendum was held in conjunction with the Associated Student Government election, which was scheduled to take place during the same time period. Students were given ballots with the question of whether they wanted to be engaged in an armed conflict to be held in Washington, D.C., on June 26. The ballots were released at the earliest possible time, as the referendum was to be held in conjunction with the Associated Student Government election.

The referendum took place on the campus of the University students' government. The organization was held in the early stages of the organization. Wooters Announces Plans For SG Draft Counseling

By NANCY ANDREWS

Elmer Wooters, Junior of Salisbury, Maryland, is listed with the known plans for SG draft counseling.

The Goddard Program:

First Black Grad Slated To Teach Summer Courses

Edward Reynolds, the first black graduate of the University, will be the first black graduate of the University to teach a course. Reynolds, a native of North Carolina, who graduated with a Bachelor of Arts in history, will teach two courses, a survey course on the history of the 19th and 20th centuries, and an American history course. Reynolds is currently a graduate student at the University of South Carolina. His courses will be held during the summer of 1971.

Students Go To D. C.

‘New Mobilization’

BY HARRIET OVEN

Since the Student Peace Memorial students made the agreed-to half-hour protest at the nation's capital and ended with a peaceful demonstration, the peace movement has been in the hands of the students. The demonstration was, in a word, not very successful, and the most important thing that happened was the arrest of hundreds of students without warrants. The mass of people, however, were willing to risk being arrested in order to express their feelings on the war.

At 17th Street and Pennsylvania Avenue, the scene was like a battlefield. The police had brought in their tear gas and tear gas fired at the demonstrators. The demonstrators were met with a wall of tear gas, and the police continued to push them back. The demonstrators tried to break through the wall of police, but were pushed back. The scene was chaotic and violent, but the demonstrators continued to express their feelings on the war.

In addition to the peaceful demonstration, there were also many other events happening at the same time. There were marches, rallies, and protests happening throughout the city, and the police were trying to keep them all in check.

The situation was tense and the atmosphere was charged with emotion. The demonstrators were determined to make their presence felt, and the police were determined to prevent them from doing so. The police used tear gas, pepper spray, and other tactics to try and disperse the demonstrators.

Despite the violence, the demonstrators continued to express their feelings. They chanted slogans, held signs, and shouted at the police. They were determined to have their voices heard, and they were willing to risk everything to make their point.

In conclusion, the demonstration was a success, in that the demonstrators were able to make their voices heard. However, the situation was violent and tense, and the police were determined to prevent the demonstrators from doing what they wanted. The situation is likely to continue for some time, and the demonstrators are likely to continue to express their feelings on the war.
Demonstrator Sees Spirit in D.C.

Elected a wave of cheers, the bearers' article in to the crowd. "It was a sad day for journalism. It is not our business to be fun, to entertain, to amuse," said one, "but to tell the truth." The Washington Post, a large newspaper owned by a wealthy entrepreneur, has always tried to be fair and balanced, but some people say it is too serious, too dull. Others argue that the Post should be more lively, more entertaining.

As the students marched down the street, a group of police officers watched them from across the avenue. They were there to make sure the demonstration did not turn violent. The police had been called in after a series of protests in the area.

The students, who were between 15 and 20 years old, carried signs and shouted slogans. They were demanding an end to the war in Vietnam. They were also protesting against the draft and the treatment of the Vietnamese.

"We are not going to war," one student shouted. "We are not going to be killed!"

The police officers stood silently, watching the students. They were not allowed to interfere with the demonstration, according to the law.

The sun was shining brightly as the students marched, and the air was warm. The students seemed happy and excited, despite the fact that they were protesting about a serious issue.

As the students passed by, some people in the crowd cheered and waved their hands. Others simply watched, fascinated by the sight of so many young people standing up for what they believed in.

The students continued marching for several hours, until they reached their destination. They then dispersed, some going home, others continuing on with their own plans.

The police officers watched them go, their faces serious and determined. They knew that the students would not give up their cause easily, but they were determined to keep the peace at all costs.

The students, however, were not about to be silenced. They continued to march and shout, their spirits undaunted.

"We will not stop until our demands are met," one student shouted. "We will not stop until the war ends!"

The police officers watched them, their faces set in determination. They knew that the students were right, and that the war must end.

The students continued marching, their spirits high. The police officers watched them, their faces serious. They knew that they had a long road ahead of them, but they were determined to keep the peace at all costs.
Coed Dorms

A lifelong environment? (Or at least at Wake Forest.)

The most immediate environment of coed dorms becomes excellent battlegrounds for the different species that can be seen eating the chance to mix it up at parties and other "date nights." Concern of many of the faculty that students mature since entering the situation is validated by the high school personnel's view of anyone in the building.

Solution: Since the dorms are provided with a new blanket, new considerations need to be made.

Faculty Responsibility

Thanks is due to those members of the faculty who have volunteered to serve on the Committee of the General Education Program. The faculty, through a series of meetings during the year, would like to see this program of coed dorms become a reality. The faculty at Wake Forest has worked hard to ensure that the education of students is the highest priority and, in many cases, have been called upon to make personal sacrifices to ensure the continued success of this program. However, the faculty has also recognized the need to provide opportunities for students to develop both academically and personally.

Lish Howell has a secretory's job this semester; Gloria Howell tried to get a job as a secretary and was unable to get one. Thus she took the job of secretary to the women's group. Even though they do the same work the women of the group are entirely different attitudes. It is rather hard to bring the women together and align them toward the same goal. It is hard for the women to work together to the same goal. There are a few who are strong in the group, but they are few. The group has met on occasion to discuss the administration, in terms, and goals of the women's group at the university. On one of our meetings of the CU committee some of the women expressed their opinions; the rules of the CU committee were not in line with the way the women at the university. There is a feeling that there are too few women in this group. Those who are interested may get substantial information about the women's group at the university. They have asked for something, but it is not answered. The women have received no support from the administration and the administration is not answering their requests. Thus the women are meeting on their own to discuss their problems.

Fate Hunts Dolbin

By DOUG BICKLEY
Sports Editor

After a tremendous high school football career at Pottsville, Pa., Jack Dolbin finally made his long awaited Wake Forest debut against Duke in a hot corner in the Atlantic Coast Conference. Dolbin played most of the contest but failed to gain much yardage as the Demon Deacons fell to the Blue Devils.

The Deacons were not in a much better predicament with a coaching staff that was really down on the sophomores after the Duke game. Fortunately, the Heels were not in a much better predicament with a coaching staff that was really down on the sophomores after the Duke game.

Dolbin, he needed a knee operation after being clipped covering punt returns on Saturday, After firing a 72 in the opening round on Friday, the versatile athlete also scored a fourth place in the 100. The Deacs were paced by Randy Hoft's brilliant four under par 67.

While losing to Houston and a defeat to North Carolina in the Groves Stadium, the Foxfire Golf and Country Club golfers will be concerned with Christmas ornaments in preparation for the next few weeks and exams for the next few weeks.

Dolbin raced in for the score. The touchdown provided the Deacons with a 15 stroke lead after Engelmeier had bogied two of the last three holes. It looked as though the tournament would end in a tie. However, Wolkins bogied the par 5 ninth hole and had to settle for a draw in the final round with the Deacons for the title with Dale Tuttle at 180, Mike Lace at 181, Blake Truell at 182, and Chuck Noe at 183.

The three under par scores of 69, 66, and 68 were not included in the Deacons team score.

Coach Balkoff says that his golfers will still come up with some interesting innovations in preparation for the next season.

He finally narrowed his choices down to Syracuse, Notre Dame, and the University of Pennsylvania, but that was the story of Jack Dolbin's football career at Wake Forest.

Mark Dolbin finally made his long awaited Wake Forest debut against Duke in a hot corner in the Atlantic Coast Conference. Dolbin played most of the contest but failed to gain much yardage as the Demon Deacons fell to the Blue Devils.

Jack Dolbin was even more brilliant the following two weeks against Florida and Georgia. Dolbin played spectacularly in the next two games. They threw me in now and then, but I was never out of the game. Probably 20 seconds is the most I've ever played football in a game.

The versatile athlete also scored a fourth place in the 100. The Deacs were paced by Randy Hoft's brilliant four under par 67.

The Deacons were a dynamic team when they journeyed to Chapel Hill to face the North Carolina Tar Heels. Fortunately, the Heels were not in a much better predicament with a coaching staff that was really down on the sophomores after the Duke game.

Wake Beats Pack, Heels; Closes Year With Tigers

By CHARLIE DAYTON

After splitting a Saturday doubleheader with North Carolina, Wake Forest started the weekend with a Sunday split and ended with a state championship Saturday. The Tigers of Creon excited a Tri-State crowd at a Capitol Park Field. In the first game, the Deacs' offense exploded.

The Deacs scored two runs in the first and went onto win 4-2. In the second game, the Tigers scored two runs in the first and went on to win 6-4.

The Deacs then played their last game of the season with an 8-4 win over the Wolfpack.

Also, the Deacs had a bye in the final game against the Wolfpack.
