Clinton emphasizes unity at airport rally

About 100 Wake Forest students attend candidate's North Carolina debut

By Bette Bumgarner

GREENSBORO — Demo- cratic presidential candidate Bill Clinton told an audience of about 1,000 supporters that he is not the first candidate to make a campaign appearance in Greensboro. "I don't want to pull the wool over my fellow countrymen's eyes," Clinton said. "They don't want to push the button and vote for the facts, as I see them."

Clinton made his remarks from the balcony of the North Carolina A&T State University Administration Building in Greensboro, and he was introduced by the school's president, William S. Friday, who called the candidate an "outstanding" university graduate. Clinton is a graduate of Wake Forest University. He also attended North Carolina A&T from 1965 to 1967.

Clinton was quoted as saying that he is not the first candidate to make a campaign appearance in Greensboro, but he was not in Greensboro in 1992.

The crowd was estimated at around 1,000. About 200 young people were present at the rally, including students and supporters of Clinton, who made a campaign stop in the state. Women at Wake: Greece comes to an annual Fall Rush activities

By Tara Lowry

The new studio of the university's public radio station, WFDD, has won an award for its design from the North Carolina chapter of the American Institute of Architects. WFDD, in downtown Winston-Salem, is located on the Wake Forest campus to house the station.

EDITORS

The station was opened in 1985 at Wake Forest University on a small budget. The station still has only one studio, but is expanding its facilities and programming.

In each, the control room gives a view of the outside view, a state-of-the-art studios, one large enough for an audience. The new studio is located on the Wake Forest campus to house the station.

Volunteer coordinator brings experience to post

By Steve Moss

When Brandy D. Greer received a phone call last Wednesday from someone from Wake Forest who knew her well, little did she know that she was about to learn of her dream job.

According to the plan, 59 volunteers, including some of the finest in the area, will do their part to help people interested in non-profit work.

Greer, who is a good volunteer coordinator, is the daughter of John and Sue Greer, who have been working with Habitat for Humanity since their college years.

Greer believes that a group of friends who would be interested in non-profit work can be a valuable resource to the community.

In the two weeks the group spent digging ditches and healing the fences, the group was able to change the way people think about civic responsibility. Greer said, "It's really a good feeling to know that you're making a difference."
Student activism takes center stage during leadership conference

By John Wisnioski

The Student Union sponsored its annual Fall Leadership Conference this weekend at Lake Lure.

President Thomas H. Hearn Jr. and senior Zeke James Grace, the chief executive officer of the Student Union and the Black Student Alliance, opened the conference with an address on the situation.

Sixty-three students from across campus attended the event, which included a day-long series of briefings and workshops on topics such as Greek life, alcohol policy, academic concerns and cultural diversity.

Students also expressed concerns about alcohol use on campus.

"The alcohol policy is a huge problem," said one attendee. "It's a real issue and we need to address it."

Students also urged better attendance at lectures, and participation in student government, saying that it was important for students to be involved in order to make a difference.

"We're here to represent the students, and we need to be heard," said another attendee.

The conference also featured a keynote address by Dr. Holly Lackett, a professor of philosophy at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. Dr. Lackett discussed the importance of critical thinking and the role of students in creating a better world.

"We need students to be leaders," Dr. Lackett said. "We need them to stand up for what they believe in and to fight for what they want to see happen."

The conference concluded with a panel discussion on the future of the university and the role of students in shaping it.

"We need students to be involved in the decision-making process," said Dr. James Grace. "We need them to be part of the solution, not just the problem."

The conference was well-received by attendees, who said that it provided valuable information and a platform for students to express their concerns.

"I learned a lot," said one attendee. "I feel like I can make a difference."
Security reports decrease in crime as result of prevention in 1990-91

By Bruce Doerr
Managing Editor

In an attempt to continue prevention created in slight decrease in crime in some categories during the (1990) year. In 1990, a 25% break in on campus parking lot continued to be a problem, with 42 unreported entries, but that number declined from 58 in 1989-90. Lawrence attributed this decline to the efforts of several local high school students, sending a message to those potential that crime does not pay. However, she said the belief that campus community members are also taking more personal security measures.

"Students are beginning to realize that a case filled with cash and drugs is a prime target on a night a unmarked car, and. (they) are being more careful," she said.

Lawrence became the second campus crime on campus, with 167 reported cases. About $23,000 in cash and other valuables were taken, largely from unlocked rooms and offices, and from unattended purses, wallets and bookbags.

"We want to try to make people's lives more secure to look their car door and put valuables out of sight...If there is a market for crime on campus, it is more dangerous for everybody," Lawrence said.

In order to educate the campus about crime prevention, security members have invited a number of programs, including crime prevention talks during the summer, fliers, campus police pamphlets, and presentations on the impact of crime. All programs are part of the ongoing effort to educate the campus about crime prevention.

Lawrence new the uniform for security officers have changed significantly.

The Worrell Professional Center for Law and Management is scheduled for completion Dec. 1.

Ford said that he, Shannon and Creek "have all been working with the alcohol task force, the Democratic Party on the state and local level.

"They told us that they would like to see a turnover of 100 students from Wake Forest, so we are going to try, just as in the newspapers and called Americans for Democratic Action, College Democrats and other each group that works with the campus to get people to go to," he said.

Students gave various reasons for avoiding the speech, but many felt that the policies were a serious problem for them.

"I never had the chance to see any politician before," said senior Matt Duke. "I was preoccupied because I had to study for an exam, and I was working in a voice for Clinton"

Ford said student leaders expressed concern that the policy was too vague.

"There is a lot of confusion about the policy and the new chairman of a level.

To clarify the policy, Ford held an informational meeting last week, where student leaders were given a copy of the new policy and were able to ask questions.

In the fall of 1991, the alcohol policy at Wake Forest went into effect, and it has been in place ever since. The policy prohibits the use of alcohol at social functions and prohibits the sale of alcohol on campus.

After the Revolution, and before the Abyss:

Students describe their experiences in the new Commonwealth of Independent States

By RACHEL EARP

One winter day, I was walking in the street of Moscow, the capital of the world, planning to spend the winter and the holidays there. I was just beginning to gain serious knowledge in Russian, and I was spent the first year in Moscow, studying and working. Even though I had been in the country for several years, I had never been in Russia before. On August 1st, I was the first day in Moscow, and I was looking forward to spending the next few days there. I bought a map of Moscow and started exploring. I found that the city was crowded and noisy. Later, in talking to one of my friends from Moscow, he told me that the city was not as busy as he had expected.

As I was walking through the streets, I saw a row of abandoned cars. It looked as though they had been there for some time. The cars were old and rusted, and I wondered how old they were. I asked one of the local people, and they told me that the cars were from the old Soviet Union. They had been left there when the fall of the Soviet Union occurred. I was surprised to see how many old cars were still around.

The next day, I was walking past a row of abandoned cars again, and I decided to stop and take a closer look. I noticed that there were a few people standing around the cars, and I asked them if they knew anything about them. They told me that the cars had been there for a long time, and that they were not being used. They said that the cars were from the old Soviet Union, and that they had been left there when the country fell apart.

I was curious to learn more about the old Soviet Union, so I decided to find a library and do some research. I found a book about the history of the Soviet Union, and I read through it. I learned that the Soviet Union had been a powerful country, but it had collapsed in the 1990s. I was surprised to learn how much the country had changed since then.

I ended my day in Moscow by walking through the streets and exploring. I found that the city was full of history, and I was excited to learn more about it. I was looking forward to spending the next few days there, and I was happy to be in Moscow.

Official must respect women as equals

C ongress may forget about the Equal Rights Amendment, and states may adopt their own anti-discrimination laws, but right now the national spotlight is focused on equal rights for women. If they don’t have the right to vote, if they are not given equal pay or equal chances for advancement, if they are not allowed to serve in the military, they are not treated as equals.

But right now, women are not being given the rights they deserve. They are not being treated as equals. They are not being given the protection they deserve.

We must do something to change this. We must take action now.

S arah Knowles

For better or worse

Since the beginning of the semester, we have witnessed a cultural revolution around campus as to the nature and extent of changes in the alcohol policy. Concerning the topic of what will not be permitted of campus citizens will be immediately in the following year now that the Alcohol Policy Review will now be reviewed periodically by a new Alcohol Policy and Advisory Board.

As for this year, there have been notable changes in the alcohol policy that are not related to policies, most of which are for the better. One of the most significant contributions considerably more freedom to students of age by allowing them to drink alcohol beverages and bring their own half-and-half lounges.

This is a thankless boon for those who would prosper increasingly to the campus social environment. The fine marshalls says that it is not rare at all to see students of age in each lounge. Seeing more than twenty-four students in each lounge. Seeing more than twenty-four students in each lounge is not rare at all. Farm boys and other citizens do not experience any risk at all, whether they are in a potential position for any of their responsibilities and duties.

Said the Student Life Committee, "As long as the policy simply made it so that an alcohol student must be a registered student of the highest organization, it would eliminate the conflict.

Another notable addition to the policy is that a faculty or official officer or body only consists of students group on campus of history's violations.

After three years, the membership of a Greek organization has totally turned over. We feel it is impossible to hold groups accountable for the belief of our students. The Committee for Student Life needs to define their belief of responsibility. We add that the only way to preserve this policy is to allow people to hold groups accountable for the belief of their students.

Strengths sobriety

In the initial edition of the Student Handbook, sobriety is a requirement. However, the policy change instructs students to...

Brown must go

"In President Brown's case, there were none," a news article that appeared in the morning edition of the Winston-Salem Journal on September 30, 1993.

"But the truth is that Brown's behavior was nothing new. In his April resignation letter, the university's board of trustees wrote that Brown's misrepresentations had caused "an atmosphere of mistrust and confusion" among students, faculty, and staff.

"Even before Brown's resignation, students had been expressing their frustration with the university's administration. In April, a group of students staged a sit-in in the president's office to demand his resignation. The sit-in lasted for three days and ended when Brown agreed to step down.

"We are tired of living in an atmosphere of mistrust and confusion," one of the students who participated in the sit-in said. "We want a leader who will listen to our concerns and work with us to make the university a better place for everyone."

Young field hockey squad to begin ACC play under new coach

By JENNIFER MELANN

A new era will begin in Wake Forest field hockey this season. The team will enter the ACC, for the first time ever, under the guidance of new coach Jennifer Anstrutt.

Anstrutt is excited about competing in the ACC, which according to many the strongest field hockey conference. The move means the Deacons will be able to compete against some of the best teams in the nation.

"This year’s team will consist of eight freshmen, four sophomores, four juniors and four seniors," Anstrutt said. "The Deacons will be co-captained by senior goalkeeper Carey Borkowski and senior forward Pam Driscoll."

"Our field will be much more difficult to score on," Anstrutt said. "Our defense has been strong, but the offense has been hit and miss."}

Wake to dive into conference play with Carolina in opener

By MIKE FITZGERALD

There is one constant this year: No Wake Forest, Carolina, Duke, or Richmond. Wake Forest will not see its first conference game until Oct. 18 against Virginia, when the Deacons will head to Lynchburg, Va., to take on the High Point Panthers.

"The Deacons are looking forward to this year’s schedule," said new head coach Bill Dooley. "The team has a lot of young talent and we are ready to see how we stack up at the national level."}

"They are going to be a challenge for us," said senior forward Keith West. "But we have to be prepared to face them."}
Soccer team continues to gain recognition

By Jon Resmondo

The soccer team has quietly become one of the more successful squads to be found on campus. After a disappointing NCAA men's soccer tournament, the team hasidental to their success, the Demon Deacons are ready to put the past behind them and move on to bigger and better things.

"Historically, we've had a strong record of success," Chyzowych said. "When it comes to money issues, and we've been a team of success. We've been a team of success and we've been a team of success." The Demon Deacons have posted a 11-11-1 record and an ACC record of 2-2-2.

"We're going to give it our best shot," Chyzowych said.

The Demon Deacons are two of the most successful teams in the ACC conference and one of the nation's top-20 teams. The team's leading scorer; junior Bryan McGettigan, who allowed only 7 goals in 210 minutes last season, said the Demon Deacons are "very pleased with how the season has gone and we're prepared to move forward." Chyzowych said.

"Sometimes you can be too happy, but all of our returns have been done very well this fall," McGettigan said, in particular, his improvement with his preparation.

"We had a game plan we followed," he said.

experience under his belt has him ready to wear the crown.

Helping Will be a deep and talented receiving corps, returning two of the better passing quarterbacks in the conference.

The other returning starters on the defense are senior middle linebacker Mike McCrary and sophomore defensive end Maurice Lambert. McCrary, a senior with a broken arm.

Junior Mike Green will do the punting chores.

Back up the line, Mike McCrary and Maurice Lambert recorded 75 tackles last season. McCrary led the conference in that category.

The tackles will likely be senior Tim Hailstock and hard-hit­ter son of the defense's stronger cat­egory. Junior Scott Buchanan, who had 75 tackles, redshirt freshman Jacko Coghill and sophomore Wendell Wells will take over when they return from injury.

Defensive ends include two of the team's weakest links, though, as senior Ben Neubeiser and Diron Reynolds.

MY DEGREE GOT ME THE INTERVIEW.
ARMY ROTC GOT ME THE JOB.

Things got pretty competitive for this job. I'm sure my college degree and good grades kept me in the running. But in the end it was the leadership and management experience I got through Army ROTC that won them over.

You can begin to develop impressive leadership skills with an Army ROTC elective.

My Mom, she thinks all I ever do is go through 'phases.' "You changed your major again? Now it's Ethnic Dance Forms? When are you going to come to your senses and pick something sensible?" (Sigh) Well, I guess it's just another phase." So I told her, "Give me a break Ma. I mean I kept the same phone company all four years... She was impressed."
