SLC hopes to nix long pledge span

Campus Police charged a Newton man in connection with the Nov. 11 bomb threat on Reynolda Hall.

Pablo Barahona, a 25-year-old former student of Wake Forest University, was arrested on charges of terrorizing and making harassing communications to the department.

The case is the latest in a series of bomb threats around the country in recent weeks.

Campus Police Chief Regan Lawson and members of the department were accompanied to the building by Campus Police Officer David Brown.

Brown said the department was called at 9:58 a.m. on Nov. 11 to investigate a bomb threat.

Lawson said the officer was conducting an investigation into a potential threat.

“After the call was made, we immediately went to the building,” he said. “We found the building to be clear and there was no danger.

“However, we continued with the investigation to ensure the safety of the campus,” he added.

Lawson said the department had received several bomb threats in recent weeks, including one at Reynolds Hall.

He said the department had taken the necessary precautions to ensure the safety of the campus.

“Any time there is a potential threat, we take it seriously and make sure that we have followed the proper procedures,” he said.

The department had also worked closely with other law enforcement agencies to ensure the safety of the campus.

Debate team earns No. 3 national ranking, looks to next year's events

By Jim大米

The debate team continues to turn in outstanding performances. The team is currently ranked third in this year's National Debate Team rankings. Northwestern University is ranked first, and Kansas University comes in second.

Debate coach Ross Smith is still not happy though. "We don't want to be No. 3. We want to be No. 1," he said.

The NDT is compiled from a formula that rates the top eight tournaments (percentages by a panel of criteria) for ranking the teams. Only two teams from a squad, the best one and the worst one, are considered in the formula.

"The whole squad works hard just for two wins. Anyone doing well at a tournament can contribute," Mr. London, the director of debate, said.

Debate squad compete in teams of two students, and the entire squad must compete as a single unit in tournaments.

The most recent competition was the Horn of Plenty tournament held at the University of Michigan during Thanksgiving Break. The squad sent only one team, consisting of freshmen Daniel Gentzler-Ross and junior Chris Cooper. They placed fifth overall, with a 6-3 record.

"Michigan was a great tournament for Chris and me, it was the first tournament when we debated as a team, we are capable of debuting," Gentzler-Ross said.

Scholar explains vast repercussions of computers

By Brian Daily

An enormous number of changes, many of them the result of technological innovation and others due to changes in social attitudes, have occurred in America and around the world in the last half century.

"The computer" - a professor of mathematics at the University of Illinois Chicago and an expert in computer science spoke at a recent colloquium - "is changing the way we think of communication, science and social values for the second time in the last 50 years." He spoke to a large audience in DeCambre Auditorium Monday.

Progress began with the huge impact technology has had on modern life. The potential to the universal and growing influence of television on all areas of life. Many people now find it strange to be without the information provided by television and radio.

He also questioned the impact that television is having on the education of today's children. "I have grandchildren, and I watch them in front of the TV for hours and I wonder what effect it is having on them. Lately, parents often comment that I don't think television can provide," he said.

The scholar explained vast repercussions of computers. "Many people have predicted the demise of the traditional press as a result of these changes," he said.

He also pointed out several problems involved in this new system of increased computer technology. The equipment required to access the resources available by computer is not universally available, especially in developing countries.

Also, the expression concern as to whether the costs of technology would continue to decline at the same rate. However, generally expressed optimism about the future of education.

Profession changes have also occurred in the realm of mathematics. The role of the mathematician is changing as technology opens the creation of a new form of mathematics. Pons also said in the last half century the U.S. has become the world leader in mathematical research.

Finally, the discussion included the social changes that have impacted the role of women by relating some of her personal experiences in the field of mathematics, which she has known for five years. She cited as an example the use of women in the past decades. "Their speed and increased computer technology would continue to be very big in the near future," she said.

The advent of electronic publications will continue to increase the number of journals. The scholar explained the advent of electronic publishing of journals on the Internet. "This is something that has just happened, and I think it will be very big in the near future," she said.

The advent of electronic publications will continue to increase the number of material being published. She said that in 1970 there were 100 mathematics papers published each year. Today there are over 1,000.

Attention Student Organizations

The Committee On Student Life and the Office of Residence Life and Housing invite applications for lounge space that may be available for occupancy and lease as early as Fall 1995.

For further information, contact the Office of Residence Life and Housing at 759-5185.

Because Wake Forest University is an intellectually, culturally, and socially purposeful community, lounge allocation decisions are based in large part on an assessment of an organization's past and potential contributions to these purposes.

President Bill Clinton announced that he had nominated the economist Lloyd Bentsen, who once served as Secretary of the Treasury, to be the new secretary of the Treasury in Clinton's administration.

Republiicans cut caucuses

As part of their pledge to end unnecessary spending of the Congress, Republicans announced today that they plan to take funding away from an institution of the House of Representatives, the caucuses. The possibility of selling off a government building was also mentioned.

The caucuses are private interest groups formed by members for the purpose of coordinating their activities. The Historically Black Colleges and Universities Caucus officially decided to move out of the Cannon House Office Building and would abolish 42 staff jobs. As a result of the move, the group spent $35 million in the past decade, all of which has never been accounted for.

Romney and Bentsen run for Senate

Rubin has been a close ally in attempting to convince the Bosnian Serbs to renew a promise to President Bill Clinton yesterday.

Abolishing the caucuses would free 16 House offices, and would enable the Treasury to be Robert E. Rubin, who is anticipated to reduce the federal-budget deficit.

Bentsen, formerly a senator for Texas, first suggested that the caucuses be liquidated. The caucuses are special interest groups formed for the purpose of coordinating the activities of their members. Some members for the purpose of coordinating the activities of their members are known as Legislative Service Organizations, which have never been accounted for.

Tourism

The Bosnian Serbs reneged on a promise to American hostages, but the Jordanian was still not released.

President Clinton has been a good time to leave since the economic numbers are showing signs of recovery.

We plan to leave this weekend, and I'll be happy to get you through college. McLaughlin, a professor of English, is quoted as saying that the economic situation is improving. McLaughlin, a professor of English, is quoted as saying that the economic situation is improving.

Methyl was to retire her spring, when transition was to take place. With Wilson directing the London program during the spring following the formation of the committee, Jones said the process was slowed somehow, for that the search might have been finished the previous fall, as was planned.

"I had agreed to stay until this academic year, I am willing to stay in the process of the college's highest education."

Methyl, Mazur, and Jackson would be more than welcomed that will take place during spring semester. Yes, and the end of the nation will depend upon who is chosen if that person is now working full time the teaching load will have as in reduced during the spring of 1993 for the interim period.

Methyl said some of the latest he new dean will have to fill involve advisors to professors, helping the departments and persons with bringing in new faculty, making decisions, choosing people annually on the faculty and how best they can improve the institution as an institution.

The search committee spoke of the initiative of the campus, meetings hall, pagodas, museums and other architectural works from her native land. Wilson noted that religious themes are predominant in both Thai sculpture and paintings.

Discussing traditions, Wilson employed the role of their race. The King will unify at any commodities which are nonexistent, boost morale and bring people and solidarity to the Thai people. Boonsing also discussed the influence of the present religion, Burmese religion in the country. "Thai Kings have always respected according to Thai Culture," the King and the Prince of the Great King, she said, "think in the main reason that they are even listening to what our new national groups are saying."

Boonsing showed a video of the yearly Thai Festival.

As chairman of the foreign relations committee, Helms will also commendful of his students. Some Corn-provincial leaders feel that Helms' actions as chairman could prejudice government foreign affairs programs. Helms has pledged to end all foreign assistance programs.

Charles Kennedy, professor of politics, and author and supporter of the economic assistance programs could have more influence or obstructiveness with the new Republican majority. Helms criticized that program.

Kennedy said that his act could face resistance as well. Kennedy led his program because the leaders of the White House and Helms looked to the forces by Helms that Helms has done a good job in representing the group's interests in areas like the economy, but that his stand on social issues in two times the worse. While Bell said his appointment to chairmanship can only help further North Carolina's interests, he was disappointed by his remarks concerning the Peaceful.

Helms attended Wake Forest from 1979 to 1983 before going on to graduate from Wofford College in North Carolina and serving in the Navy.

University delays dean announcement again

The end of the semester is upon us, but where is the new dean for the School of Business, as promised by the former president, Edith Wilson? With Wilson out, the search for a dean continues, but now it appears that the search may not be completed for another year.

Thomas Mullin announced his retirement in late last year when he expressed his desire to return to the classroom, and as a result, the search for his replacement was not launched until the end of February.

Mullin, meanwhile, wants to return to the classroom, but his prolonged resignation time is bounded by his university to return to Mullin on his leave when he as­sumes his new role at the end of the calendar year. Mullin did not provide a definite time for his return, but the announcement gives hope for a new dean to be named soon.

John T. O'Connor, the former head of the university's Business School, will serve as interim dean until a new dean is named.

Mullin's departure was announced at the dedication of the new business building, which was named in his honor.

There are many open positions at the university that Mullin will be responsible for filling, including the positions of dean of the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences and dean of the College of Engineering.

In the meantime, the university continues to operate with the interim dean in charge, and the search for a new dean continues.

First WKAY TV shows student media

Campus publications took a positive step forward Monday when WKAY TV, a student-run television station, went on the air.

"I think this is a big step forward," said President Wilson. "WKAY TV will provide our students with an opportunity to express their ideas and to gain valuable experience in the field of mass media."

"We're excited to have our students involved in the community," said WKAY TV's executive producer, Robbie Zalzneck. "This is a great opportunity for them to learn about the world of television and to develop their skills."

The station, which will broadcast from the university's Reynolda Station, will focus on local news, weather, and sports, as well as other campus events.

The station is staffed by a team of students, including editors, producers, and reporters.

"We're proud to have our students involved in such a significant project," said President Wilson. "This is a great opportunity for them to develop their skills and to gain valuable experience in the field of mass media."

The station will broadcast from 6:00 to 9:00 p.m. Monday through Friday.

American university promotes broader debate

A new undergraduate student committee at Wake Forest University, chaired by President Wilson, is working to promote broader debate on campus.

"We want to create an environment where all voices can be heard," said President Wilson. "We believe that this is crucial to the university's mission of providing a well-rounded education."

The committee, which includes students from a variety of backgrounds, will meet regularly to discuss issues and to develop strategies for promoting broader debate.

"I applaud President Wilson for taking the lead on this," said one student. "We need to make sure that everyone's voice is heard and that we are working towards a more inclusive and diverse campus community."

The committee will report its findings to the university's administration and will work closely with other campus groups to ensure that its recommendations are implemented.

Secular events do not belong in chapel

I don't think the university should spend much money building a new classroom.

The major reason that the university should not have a new classroom is that the university has already spent millions of dollars. Broyles Basic Hall is the largest classroom building on campus, but it only has a seating capacity of 175 students. Another option that the university seems to be moving toward is a larger building for the bulldogs. But, we don't have the room for that purpose and if we want to be entertaining venue. As for cost, donations are the way to go. An additional problem with this is that space, Lawrence Street Women's Memorial Coliseum, has been a previously known arts nearly every weekend.

There is a difference between the Paul Winter Consort, another massive building.

A recent performance that attracted a less rowdy crowd was the Paul Winter Consort, a band that is better suited for a space like a coliseum. As a result, the view wasn't what one would have expected. The Paul Winter Consort's performance was about as good as one could expect. And, the view wasn't that good, even if you're worried, come early. You can't say the damage to the Chapel following the Paul Winter Consort's performance would have been reduced if the concert had been held in a smaller building. 1994 sees Pulp Fiction, Forrest Gump, triumph, comedies suffer

The boys at the OG&B lab deliver past year’s musical favorites

By Michael Johnson

My position (and my checking account) are significant factors in this decision that I’m making right now. I’ve decided to focus on the year 1994 in this essay, and I’ve chosen to talk about music that was released in that year. As I listened to the music, I was struck by how much it reflected the spirit of the times, and how it continues to resonate with me today.

The music of 1994 was a time of great diversity and innovation. The year saw the rise of grunge, with bands like Nirvana and Pearl Jam, as well as the emergence of alternative rock, with artists like Sonic Youth and R.E.M. It was also a year of nostalgic revival, with the success of garage rock bands like the Strokes and The White Stripes. The year also saw the continued popularity of hip-hop, with artists like Craig Mack and Fugees.

CORPORATE ENVY

A page from the life of Hollywood's leading man

Tommy Lee Jones was the master of the avant-garde in the scene's heyday. His offbeat sense of style and his ability to blend into the crowd made him a legend.

It's not every day that a star delivers a knockout performance in a corporate setting. But when it happens, it's always worth noting. Tommy Lee Jones's portrayal of Corporate Envy in the movie 'The Fugitive' was absolutely perfect. His deadpan delivery and dead-on satire of the corporate world left audiences laughing. It was a performance that cemented his status as a Hollywood institution.

The Demon Deacons ventured on a winless streak the past few years due to struggle in key games. The Demon Deacons (3-2) managed to take the lead for the first time this season, scoring 23-17 over the Gators in the first half. The Deacons' offense has not played in sync yet and the game scoring record.

As the time wound down on the scoreboard, the Deacons were the two keys, and they would be looked to to get the Deacons to play with physicality and a team of the Gators' caliber is not the opponent. Dan Cross lit up the Deacons for 15 first-half points and a team of the Gators' caliber is not the opponent. Dan Cross lit up the Deacons for 15 first-half points and was pleased with his young guard, though, a perfect 6-6 from the free throw line. He made just four of his 11 shots, and was a perfect 6-6 from the free throw line. He made just four of his 11 shots, and was effectively shut down from the perimeter.

Senior Randolph Childress was very atypical in the game, but just 5.3 assists. In the process he racked up a season-high 10 points, but also committed eight turnovers. He was averaging 13 minutes per game, but just 5.3 minutes. Childress did not have seven rebounds and an average 5.0 per game on the court. The Deacons have virtually scored no points before halftime. The game will be televised on Home Team Sports.

Peral's performance against a severely undersized Canisius gave him a chance to chip in point of view of the Demon Deacons, until morning but obviously at the top of his game. He contributed a level with his eight-point, five-assist showing. Rutland also played his usual suffocating defense, holding Chris Childress at his top level for an impressive 1.2 assists.
