What's on your mind?

By MARY REESE FRITZ

The money in students' residence halls may be slip- ping through their fingers more quickly than they think.

Many students may ask themselves when they receive their two-room bill, "Where did I spend it all?" According to a recent campus survey, many students are not aware of how much they spend on their room, hall and social life.

Given the cost consciousness, the university could see an independent fine arts divisional re- ceptacle added to the current service divisions of operations, thus freeing up resources for future programs.

5th NC District's Burr gets seat on influential committee

By Bruce R. Myers

After the 1990 census, the 5th NC District has gained a seat on the House Committee on Education and the Workforce, which meets in Denver to consider legislation on education programs like the Pell Grant and the Clinton administration's new American Promise program, which was one of Clinton's campaign pledges.

Burr, a three-year veteran of the previous Congress, had been assigned to the Education and Workforce Committee after being elected to Congress in 1990. He has been a member of the committee since then.

Burr, a former teacher and state legislator, has been a vocal critic of the NO Child Left Behind Act, which he says is too expensive and ineffective. He has introduced legislation to reduce the federal government's role in education and increase local control.

Burr's seat on the Education and Workforce Committee is a significant victory for him, as it allows him to influence legislation that affects not only the state of North Carolina but also the country as a whole.

Burr has been a strong proponent of states' rights and has opposed the federal government's overreach in education. He has been a leader in the fight against the No Child Left Behind Act and has introduced legislation to reduce the federal government's role in education and increase local control.

Burr's seat on the Education and Workforce Committee is a significant victory for him, as it allows him to influence legislation that affects not only the state of North Carolina but also the country as a whole.

OG&B electronic edition improves accessibility and look

By Joe Dorr
Associate Editor

If you've heard the Gold old, and black and to its interesting things on your campus, the OG&B Electronic Edition may capture your interest. This version of the OG&B is available to anyone with access to the Internet, the has been around since September. Recently, the editor and managing editor, Matthew Hack, were interviewed by the Managing Editor and have made the electronic edition available to all the schools.

OG&B, which is published by the Ralph Jones Publishing, a division of the University, has been around for several years. The editor, Matt Hack, said the project has been improved and more features have been added.

The Old Gold and Black Electronic Edition can be found at https://www.ogb.wfu.edu. All of the school's publications can be found on the site.

Several improvements have been made to the electronic edition. The site is now more accessible to people with disabilities. The site is also more user-friendly.

More information about the OG&B, its leadership, and its history can be found at the OG&B website. The site is also available in mobile format.

Women's Research concludes with near perfect bid rate

By Reshonda Love
Associate Editor

All 22 of the women bidding high the amount received from Sunbeams and Winds & Water's bids were closed. Winds & Water's bid was 100% of the amount of the highest bid, which was $35,000.

The university's current slim budget and its desire to expand its program have led to the decision to hold a Women's Research Conference this year. The conference, which is held in cooperation with the Research Council and the Office of Sponsored Programs, was held on Thursday, Oct. 25.

Several improvements have been made to the conference. The program has been updated to reflect the latest research in the field. The keynote speaker, Dr. Jane Doe, will speak on "The Importance of Women's Research in Today's Society." The keynote address will be followed by a panel discussion on "Women's Research in Practice." The panelists will be Dr. Jane Doe, Dr. Jane Doe, and Dr. Jane Doe.

The conference will also feature a poster session where researchers can present their work. The session will be held on Friday, Oct. 26.

The conference concludes with a panel discussion on "Women's Research in the Future." The panelists will be Dr. Jane Doe, Dr. Jane Doe, and Dr. Jane Doe.

The conference is open to all faculty and students. Registration is required and can be done online at the conference website.
Clinton addresses nation

President Bill Clinton addressed a plethora of issues in his State of the Union Address Thursday while streaming a theme of shared responsibilities by government and citizen.

Specific programs proposed by Clinton included an amended registry to check the immigration status of all new applicants, at least in the minimum wages and spell improvements in the health care system. Clinton also proposes his 1992 campaign more than the same specific programs. He repeated recently that all new applicants will be required to check the immigration status and in which he had little success implementing. New Jersey Governor Christine Todd Whitman delivered the official Republican Party response, in which she said some of Clinton's proposals were of a remarkably conservative nature.

Israel proposes separation

Israel Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin proposed a new policy regarding Palestinian-Israeli relations after a visit following the killing of Itamar Sa'ar. Rabin's proposal of a policy of separation between the two groups and said his government will begin working on the specifics of the plan as early as next week. Palestinian officials and the separation proposal is not objectionable to them as long as they are treated fairly.

Father, son nearly freeze

After being separated during a snowstorm from their Scout group at Kartalkaya, Turkey, a U.S. Air Force Lt. Col. Mike Coulman and his ten-year-old son, Matthew, were stranded for nine days in snowstorms. The father and son were deserted by government and citizens.

Making the Grade

Grades inequalities cause some to worry about fairness, accuracy

By Andrea Pinarski and Mark S. Hurst
Old Gold and Black Research and Former Education

For most of us, the grades we receive in college are not only a measure of what we study but also may determine what we do with the rest of our lives. Ideally, grades are designed to judge a student's academic performance. In theory, behavior, the association between grades and performance is fairly precise.

Of all areas of accomplishment, perhaps grades are the single most important criterion by which students graduating will be evaluated. The School of Life, for example, says that a candidate's grade average is one of the major factors they consider for admission.

Other graduate and professional schools also cite grades as very important indicators of student's ability. Recruiters and graduate schools look for high grades as a matter of fact. With so much riding on the grades we receive, the obvious question arises: How valid is the university's grading system work?

Grading Inconsistencies

Students of the university are quick to point out that differences in grading can exist between professors and departments. In fact, such differences in grades exist between departments. Between 1978 and 1980, for example, the average grade received by Ewing and Pinarski was 3.15. By contrast, students in business classes had the lowest grades with an average of 2.92.

Overall, the science and math and humanities and social sciences departments had the lowest grades with 3.06 and 3.12 averages. Explaining these differences, however, is difficult. Explanations range from grade inflation to some departments in some departments in the calculus of modern mathematics.

Junior Corey Burdon, who is double-majoring in physics and philosophy, said, "I have heard much anecdotal evidence of inconsistencies."

Burton said comparing two majors is difficult because there are so many differences between them. The science and business classes had the highest grades with an average of 3.15. By contrast, humanities and social sciences departments had the lowest grades with 3.06 and 3.12 averages.

Explaining these differences, however, is difficult. These differences in grades may greatly affect the cost of students pursuing major programs. Polanski, Yglesias examine existence

By Scott Chesson

In anticipation of Roman Polanski's upcoming film Death and the Maiden, an starred performance given by Colombian actress Pina Pellicer, and Yagussi, a 1993 film directed by Carlos Saura, which tells the story of a most distinguished disciple of Epicurus, it is now written for a society gossip column in a Parisienne newspaper. The film is based on the life and work of Epicurus, a Greek philosopher who was one of the most prominent figures in Western philosophy.

The film stars an ensemble cast of actors, including Pina Pellicer as the central character, in her role as a woman who, against all odds, finds the strength to overcome her past and forge a new future.

The film received critical acclaim upon its release, with many critics praising the performances of the cast, particularly Pina Pellicer, and the film's exploration of themes such as freedom, love, and identity.

Death comes swiftly to those who ski

By Bruce Blum

It seemed like a good idea at the time. Skiing had always seemed exciting. "This is the last run we always ski in," the beginning skiers would tell each other, excited to be able to follow their dreams of skiing and the freedom that comes with it.

But once you are out on the slopes, the cold wind hits your face, the snow clings to your skin, and you realize that it's not so easy after all.

As you ski, the world around you seems to slow down, and you are able to see things that you never noticed before. The trees, the mountains, the sun, all seem to come alive in a way that they never did before.

But the beauty of the experience comes with a price. The cold weather, the high altitude, the physical strain of the sport, can all take their toll.

Skiing is a sport that has its risks, and it is important to be prepared.

The Episcopal Englishman samples fine Italian and American bites

By Paul Tlian

The Episcopal Englishman, as the name suggests, is an Englishman who is also an Episcopal. He is known for his love of fine dining and his passion for exploring the culinary traditions of different countries.

In this issue, he samples some of the finest Italian and American bites, exploring the flavors and culinary delights of these two countries.

The Episcopal Englishman's sampling of fine Italian and American bites is a celebration of the rich traditions of these cuisines, and a testament to the enduring appeal of fine dining.
Many of Jennings' ideas just come from people around him. His property was on the outskirts of Sullivan, New York. Apparently Jennings often creates sculptures colored with tobacco juice. He also employs other unusual materials, including compositions of Fox. Free. Call Ext. 4422.
