The Card Place, the Director of Student Health Services, said, “We have taken this step to meet the requirements of the Affordable Care Act, which mandates that colleges and universities provide health insurance to all students enrolled in our institutions. This will allow us to offer more comprehensive coverage to students, which is important in today’s healthcare environment.”

However, in order to provide affordable insurance options, students will be required to pay a premium. “We understand that this may be a financial burden for some students, but we believe it is necessary to ensure that our students have access to quality healthcare,” said Dr. Smith.

Despite the increase in costs, Dr. Smith also pointed out that this change will have a positive impact on the overall health of the Wake Forest community. “By providing all students with access to healthcare, we hope to reduce the incidence of preventable illnesses and improve the overall health of our student body.”

The University ranks high as a best buy in nation

The university jumped to 14th place in Money magazine’s ranking of the best "buys" in the nation. "We've been on the rise as long as I can remember," said President Hearn. "The tuition at Wake Forest University has increased less from last year, when the university was ranked in the top 10. This year, we have been able to keep the increase in tuition to a minimum, which is great for students and families." The university was also ranked 15th in the nation for the cost of tuition, with an average cost of $32,000 per year.

Additionally, Hearn said, "This rise in the rankings is a result of the hard work and dedication of our faculty and staff, as well as the support of our alumni and donors. We are grateful for their continued support, and we will continue to work towards providing an excellent education at an affordable cost."
The Museum of Anthropology will be open until 10 p.m. on Aug. 27.

"The subject of the speech has not yet been given at this point," Brian Engstrom, the director of student relations, said.

A package of material about the law school was sent to Rehnquist's office in addition to a number of telephone calls.

"By May, I had accepted," Engstrom said.

"I have a title for this ceremony," Eckert said. "Brian Walsh said he is really working on this trip and that he will give students an opportunity to study Theatre in London, England, for fourteen days.

"I plan to contact Rehnquist on behalf of the law school. Engstrom is a member of the law school's Board of Visitors."

"I would really like to see lots of undergraduate students in the audience," Walsh said.

"Rehnquist received a bachelor's degree from Stanford University and an 'C' degree from both Stanford and Harvard University. He returned to Stanford to attend law school.

McKinnon plans to step down after five years as dean of business school

John B. McKinnon has announced his intention to step down as dean of the Babcock Graduate School of Management. McKinnon said he will stay on until his successor is found. Under McKinnon's leadership since July 1989, the MBA program has enjoyed unprecedented growth, admission standards, placement of graduates and national rankings. "We did an excellent job over my seven years — the results speak for themselves — and now it's time for others to develop other interests and new reasons for remaining from Wake Forest," he said.

President Thomas K. Hearn Jr. praised McKinnon for giving leadership and a focused mission to the Babcock School and its faculty. "The skills John has honed on top of the corporate world have been applicable and successful in managing MBA education in the 90's," Hearn said. "The qualitative Wake Forest MBA tradition has been improved across the board under his directorship."

Hearn and the Babcock School's full-time admissions applications increased by 52 percent, while the average GMAT scores of students jumped from around 520 to 590. McKinnon said the "incredibly effective" admissions staff that he assembled "helped us to increase rather than decrease our selectivity."

The planned invasion would probably involve 5,266-1,000 U.S. troops, with about half the number remaining as a peacekeeping force. Multi-National Forces have kept the post-war years stabilize in Iraq. The United Nations plan draws fire:

A United Nations plan to create a population-growth drive has drawn opposition from Catholic and Islamic groups because it advocates the use of birth control and abortion.

The plan is the central focus of the U.N. Conference on Population and Development, slated to begin next week in Cairo.

The main goals of the plan are to promote women's rights, family planning and economic development as a means of limiting population growth.

Catholic groups, led by Pope John Paul II, have accused the U.N. of failing to stick to its own resolutions of human rights and development, while Islamic groups claim that the plan violates Islamic law.

Groups skeptical about China:

The government of the People's Republic of China has made promises to reduce table salt and tobacco consumption, but its performance has been disappointing, while Islamic leaders claim that the plan violates Islamic law.

The plan calls for the U.N. to create a commission of experts to study the problem, but China has refused to participate.

China has spent more than $300 billion to prevent the spread of AIDS, but its efforts have been controversial, and the country continues to experience a high incidence of HIV/AIDS.

Academic departments add 23 new faculty members for 1994-95

By VALENTINE

In the battle and lull of freshman attrition it might be easy to forget that both are now members of the campus community other than freshmen. However, the university has acquired 23 new faculty members.

Departments across the university have added new faculty members. In the Economics department, the dean of the Economics and Business area of the department, Howard Simon, said he has added a new faculty member to the department. He said the addition will bring the department closer to the state of the art in terms of research and teaching.

Simon said the addition will also bring new ideas to the department, which has been struggling to attract new students.

In the Political Science department, the dean of the department, Carlos Gonzalez, said he has added a new faculty member to the department. He said the addition will bring new ideas to the department, which has been struggling to attract new students.

Gonzalez said the addition will also bring new ideas to the department, which has been struggling to attract new students.

Imprudent renovations mislead bond allocation

During Summer Break, the university announced plans for renovations, spending a part of a $10 million bond issue on improvements. The claims have been made that the improvements are necessary and will benefit students. However, the university’s response to the need for improvements is misaligned and will likely cause more distress than necessary.

Petitions and criticism have been raised against the proposed renovations. Students have voiced concerns about the proposed construction. Many students feel that the renovations are unnecessary and will not benefit them.

One student, who expressed his concern about the renovations, said, “It makes no sense to spend money on improvements that are not necessary. The university should focus on more important issues.”

The university has not responded to these concerns, and the renovations are still moving forward.

Campus not protected from dangers of rape

I still remember my arrival on campus two years ago. I recall the excitement and the hope that I harbored on my college campus. As I settled into my room with my college friends, I was ready to move on with the next chapter of my life. Little did I know that I would have to endure a series of problems that would impact my academic and personal life.

As a new student, I was excited to explore the campus and meet new people. However, little did I know that the campus was not protected from the dangers of rape. Despite the efforts of Wake Forest University to create a safe environment, the campus was not immune to the problem of rape.

At Wake, either occurring or for the first time, since her life at Wake. Indeed, the idea of going to college makes many feel safe and secure. However, the recent cases of sexual assault on campus have raised concerns about the campus's safety for women.

Innocence had a great deal to do with how Forrest handled different situations. Because he did not recognize the wrong inherent to certain situations, he was able to rise above the will surrounding him and remain untainted.

Omission of sexual orientation clause blocks pursuit of knowledge

Bradley Weidemann

Because the university would want to expand its student body, the omission of the sexual orientation clause would undoubtedly decrease. Any discrimination that occurs would be expanded instead.

The threshold to the consideration of this issue, and more important, the revision itself. I believe that this would have a similar effect on other universities that would not necessarily result in the policy being expanded on the whole. There are ways to expand on the policy for the benefit of another, neither. The policy would apply equally to all types of discrimination based on the sexual orientation of students and would not necessarily result in the policy being expanded on the whole. We have come to realize that this is an important and necessary policy for students.

In all too many instances, leadership and gays are at odds with one another, because of their differences. Leadership has more than once been guilty of being too hard on the students who are not from the identity. We have a little bit of Forrest in all of us. Wherever we go, we'll be able to find that Forrest in us.

Stacy Leaman

Forrest's personality is reflected in the film, Forrest Gump, by Tom Hanks. Hanks is known for his ability to bring the character to life, and his portrayal of Forrest has been widely praised.

Hit movie celebrates innocence, provides inspiration for students

Brian Cornwell

I believe that the movie Forrest Gump is a great deal to do with how Forrest handled different situations. Because he did not recognize the wrong inherent to certain situations, he was able to rise above the will surrounding him and remain untainted.

Morton Weidemann, a second-year student at the School of Law.

The title character of Forrest Gump, portrayed by Tom Hanks, is a simple man with an extraordinary ability to lend an ear and a helping hand to those in need. His wisdom and optimism serve as a positive reminder of the power of kindness and the importance of treating others with respect.

Forrest is not only a central character in the film Forrest Gump, but he is also a symbol of hope and resilience. His story is a testament to the fact that no matter how difficult life may be, there is always hope and a chance for redemption.

It's a little hard for me to say. I mean, I'm not too sure what I'm doing next month. But I think I might do some more painting. I don't know. It depends on how things go. I might be at home, or maybe I'll be doing something else. I don't know. I just go with the flow.

I've been doing a lot of different things recently. I've been painting, doing some sculpture, and working on some new projects. I'm always looking for new ideas and new ways to express myself. It's exciting, because you never know what's going to happen next.

I like to work with different media. I've been using a lot of acrylics, but I've also been experimenting with some new techniques. I'm always trying to learn something new. It's like a never-ending process. I don't want to get too comfortable, you know. I want to keep pushing myself.

I think it's important to have a sense of humor. I don't want to take myself too seriously. I like to have fun with my art. It's not just about creating something beautiful. It's about enjoying the process and having a good time.

I've been doing a lot of work with animals recently. I've been painting a lot of cows, and I've been working on some new pieces with birds. I've been experimenting with some new techniques, and I'm really excited about it.

Overall, I think it's a great time to be an artist. There are so many new opportunities and new ways to express yourself. It's a great time to be alive.

I think it's important to keep learning and keep growing. I don't want to get too comfortable. I want to keep pushing myself and keep learning new things.

I love working with the public. I love hearing what people have to say about my work. It's really interesting to see how people interpret my art. It's like a never-ending conversation.

I think it's important to have a sense of humor. I don't want to take myself too seriously. I like to have fun with my art. It's not just about creating something beautiful. It's about enjoying the process and having a good time.

Lollapalooza: hot and crowded

By Grant Caversham

Once again, Lollapalooza was the big tour event of the fall. While the show was a bit more spread out this year, it was still packed with music for fans of all varieties.

The festival started on September 17

The best thing about Lollapalooza this year was the atmosphere. The improvements made "made it a lot easier for everyone to have a good time."

In addition to those making the best of things, the festival also had some of the most interesting bands. From alternative to rock to punk, there was something for everyone.

Just because bands like Arts Against the Machine and Light Jakt and light jakt are among those with their music on display.

The Beastie Boys were one of the bands on hand at Lollapalooza '94, among them were

17 Green Day and The Breeders.

Word was, the Sound System had sold out and the show was especially hot for the encore. The Breeders, in dance hall reggae to R&B soul to punk, were all the more reason to catch a good, crowd favorite.

The Reverend Horton Heat

The Reverend Horton Heat, who ended up delivering the show with a killer set, is known for their combination of garage punk and surf, with a touch of country.

Every once in while, something comes across my desk that I want to share and have you make a list of. While not everyone will love it, it's always worth mentioning what we really enjoy. This year, I've been so impressed with a few acts that I thought I'd share them with you.

1. Brian Jonestown Massacre

This band started with a droning,龜totic punk rock, but has slowly evolved into a more experimental sound. Their latest album, Tattoo Divine, is a must-listen for fans of shoegaze and dream pop.

2. Beastie Boys

The Beastie Boys, known for their unique fusion of hip-hop and rock, have been making waves in the music world for over two decades. Their latest album, Licensed to Ill, is a classic that every fan should own.

3. Black Flag

A staple of the punk rock scene, Black Flag has been around since the late '70s and continues to turn out iconic albums to this day. Their latest, In the City of No Hero, is a must-hear for fans of raw and unfiltered punk.

Guided By Voices

Two Thousand.

For several years, Guided By Voices has stood in the relative obscurity of the Cleveland, Ohio music scene. But over the past few years, they have been gaining traction and building a loyal following.

During their time in the spotlight, Guided By Voices has released several albums, each with its own unique sound. Their latest, Two Thousand, is a departure from their earlier work, with more focus on melody and harmonies.

Even better, the album contains several tracks that could easily stand on their own as singles. On songs like "The Crest," "Queen of Earth," and "Guided By Voices," the band showcases their ability to craft catchy hooks and memorable melodies.

However, while the music may be more accessible than some of their previous efforts, "Two Thousand" is still a raw and unpolished album. It's a testament to Guided By Voices' ability to craft great music even when the production values are not as high.

In conclusion, "Two Thousand" is a fantastic addition to Guided By Voices' discography. It's a reminder that, even in their most experimental phases, they remain at the heart of what makes rock and roll so special.

Women's cross country features both old, new talent for ACC title

By CURT GRANHAM

Oklahoma Daily

When talking about the upcoming women's cross country season, Demon Head Coach Jim Caldwell will have a wealth of experience to work with.

A season in which several crucial injuries and missed time will still be remembered fondly by Demon faithful.

With this in mind, the Demon women's cross country team is optimistic about the upcoming season.

"It was an extremely tough season for our team," Caldwell said. "We had a lot of injuries and missed time, but I think we are heading in the right direction.

"I think we have a good chance of making the NCAA championships," he added.

Caldwell said that this year's team is more experienced than last year's team.

"We have a lot of returners," he said. "I think we have a lot of potential for success."
Chris Turner accepts challenge of new program

By KAREN HILLENBRAND

The premier season for Demon Deacons women's soccer is due to get underway in a little less than a week when Turner's squad takes on the University of Maryland in the ACC Championship on Saturday, November 6th. Turner is the new head coach of the Demon Deacons, and he brings with him a wealth of experience and a strong track record.

The Demon Deacons cross country program is coming off a successful season in national prominence. Turner does not view it as a serious problem. "I think that the coaching staff will attract outstanding student-athletes," Turner said. "The university is going to sell itself. My goal is to help them out and get them into the ACC."

Turner, who will also continue to oversee the Demon Deacons' women's soccer program, says he is ready for the challenge. "I'm very confident in myself," he said. "I've been trying to return quality players to a flagging program." Turner does not want to lose a win the ACC this year, but personally I am very excited about coaching this group and am looking forward to seeing how they perform."

The nucleus of the team includes several returners, with生育者 "We want to see them come to the ACC Championship during the 1992 season."

The Demon Deacons also graduated talented midfielder Tania Field in the ACC Championships in 1990, which was the highest that any ACC team had ever achieved.

This year, however, Goodridge has the luxury of knowing what he will have for a year's time, all of whom were on the all-conference team last year. "I'm really excited about the team," Goodridge said.

According to the Hokie, the Demon Deacons enter the season ranked 12th in the country, with a stacked lineup of returning stars and some impressive freshmen.

Youthful Deacons pursue rise in ACC field hockey

By Becca Diamont

The field hockey team is coming off its first winning season while competing in the ACC. Finishing the 1993 campaign with a 6-5-2 overall record and a 1-3-1 mark in the ACC, the Demon Deacons hope to become even more competitive in the conference.

"We want to improve upon our ACC record," Head Coach Ann Averill said. "We believe that we could have had a .500 record in conference on the season without getting into the ACC. This is a good opportunity for us to build our program.

The Demon Deacons have the top 23 players in the country, including 17 of the nation's top 25 players. In this year's lineup, three of those players, did not play as freshmen but are back for their sophomore year.

The Deacons come back again to a very young team.

Ostensibly senior Jennifer Cluff, who is the starting goalie for the Demon Deacons, and sophomore Charlene Clift, who is the starting forward, are the two most experienced players on the team.

Sue Tippey Pittman will provide stability and leadership for a cast of Demon hockey players that enter just the second season of any experience in the ACC. Pittman, who is in her second year on the team, has played in 21 games this season and has scored three goals.

The Demon Deacons are coming off a 6-3 season last year and are confident that they can continue their progress.

New Head Coach Chris Turner trade workout drill with Paps Field to begin his duties as the leader of the women's soccer team. Turner brings with him impressive credentials, including building Philadelphia Temple from a club to a national powerhouse.

"We're going to be competitive in every game and win as many as we can," Turner said. "We're really excited about it."

The Demon Deacons will begin their season with a challenging schedule against a number of tough opponents.

The team's first game will be against the University of Maryland, followed by a game against the Virginia Cavaliers. The Demon Deacons will then travel to West Virginia to face the Mountaineers and finish their opening weekend against the Ohio State Buckeyes.

"We want to get the idea of winning in the ACC," Turner said. "I think that this is a big opportunity for us to really make a splash in the conference."

The Deacons' biggest challenge this season will be to build a sense of camaraderie among the players.

"We're excited about it," Turner said. "We're just going to go with what we have and see where we end up. We're definitely going to win some games and definitely going to lose some.

While you were away...

While you were away at spring break, Deacons were out making their marks on the ranks of Cincinnati Reds' Indianapolis organization. Jarvis currently leads the team in batting average with a .269 mark in between. Despite being roughed up in his last outing, his performance at the plate continued to make him a valuable asset to the team.

Masse is batting .258 with 17 doubles, five homers and 14 runs scored, and is expected to make his mark for the bats, home runs, runs scored, triples, sacrifice flies and RBIs.

In the Class A Carolina League, Jake Austin has been making his mark for the team. While you were away, Austin had a couple of call-ups to the majors as well.

The field hockey team is coming off a successful season in national prominence. Turner does not want to lose a win the ACC this year, but personally I am very excited about coaching this group and am looking forward to seeing how they perform.
