Residence Life and Housing officials were trying last week to resolve a problem that has been plaguing the对接 Lounges in the Kirby Sigma Phi ligma and adjacent rooms, several windows were broken, a Sigma Phi ligma lounge, a broken mirror required 20 minutes to fix, said George Gregory, the director of residence life and housing.

The ligma lounge was closed Wednesday and the Kirby Sigma Phi ligma lounge is scheduled to be closed March 3.

Gregory said that the Pledge Night break-in was not an isolated event. There have been some fairly serious judicial incidents that year.

Gregory said that the student council and Greg need more information before they can make a decision on whether to close the ligma lounge.

The new president, Mike Wood, said he would like to see a more positive attitude from the student council.

The situation began to unravel last Friday when the Kirby Sigma Phi ligma lounge was broken into.

"We are concerned with the recent events and the violence and the destruction that results. There have been some fairly serious judicial incidents that year," Wood said.

Black women students have used their academic interests and skills to make a difference in their communities in a variety of ways.

The American Civil Liberties Union (ACLU) has a long-standing commitment to ensuring that black women have equal access to educational opportunities. The ACLU has worked with black women students to challenge discriminatory policies and practices in schools and universities, and to promote academic excellence and success for black women.

In recent years, the ACLU has helped to ensure that black women students have access to the resources and support they need to succeed in their studies. This has included advocating for increased funding for black women students, as well as for the elimination of racial and gender biases in educational policies.

The ACLU has also worked to ensure that black women students have access to high-quality educational resources, such as textbooks and other educational materials. The ACLU has helped to ensure that black women students have access to the same resources and support that are available to their non-black peers.

In addition, the ACLU has worked to ensure that black women students have access to scholarships and other financial aid opportunities. The ACLU has helped to ensure that black women students have access to the same financial aid resources that are available to their non-black peers.

Overall, the ACLU has helped to ensure that black women students have access to the same educational opportunities and resources that are available to their non-black peers. The ACLU's work has helped to ensure that black women students have the opportunity to succeed in their academic endeavors, and to make meaningful contributions to their communities.

Black women students have made significant contributions to the ACLU's work on behalf of black women and other marginalized groups. WFU Senior Considered For Fulbright Scholarship

By Bres J. Flynn

Jesse Kalboginos, a senior psychology major with a minor in German, had his interests piqued when he heard about the Fulbright program. He has written several research papers in German, and has spent the past two semesters in the University of Munich where he has taken courses in German language and culture.

"Fulbright is an incredible opportunity," he said. "It's a chance to immerse yourself in a different culture and to learn about the language and history of a country you may not have otherwise visit." He also mentioned that he is excited about the possibility of studying in Germany because of his family's ties to the country.

"I'm looking forward to meeting new people and exploring different parts of Germany," he said. "It's a great opportunity for me to learn more about the German culture and to gain a new perspective on the world."
Incorporating athletics into your everyday life can be a great way to stay healthy and active. Whether you're a student-athlete or just someone who enjoys participating in sports, there are several ways to get involved and make the most of your athletic experience. Here are some tips to help you get started:

1. Join a Sporting Club: Most universities have a wide range of sporting clubs, from traditional sports like football and basketball to more niche sports like rock climbing or rowing. Joining a club can be a great way to meet new people and try out different activities.

2. Attend Games: Whether you're a fan of your school's teams or just interested in watching a good game, attending athletic events can be a thrilling experience. Many universities offer discounted tickets for students, so make sure to check out the schedule and see what's happening.

3. Get Involved in the Community: Athletics often extend beyond the playing field. Many teams have community service projects or volunteer opportunities, which can be a great way to give back and make a positive impact.

4. Consider Coaching: If you're interested in athletics, you might also consider coaching. Many universities offer coaching opportunities for student-athletes, and these positions can be a great way to gain experience and stay involved.

5. Take Advantage of Health and Fitness Resources: Most universities have on-campus fitness centers and recreational facilities. Take advantage of these resources to stay healthy and active, whether you're looking to improve your skills or just want to stay in shape.

Incorporating athletics into your daily routine can be a fun and rewarding experience. Whether you're a student-athlete or just someone who enjoys participating in sports, there are many ways to get involved and make the most of your athletic experience.

have read and reread Mr. Broyles' letter "The Myth of the Athens Student" in the January 11 issue of The New York Times. Mr. Broyles' letter is always a good read, providing a well-argued perspective on the Athenian experience that is a worthy subject for debate. However, I must respectfully disagree with Mr. Broyles' assertions.

Mr. Broyles suggests that the Athens experience is intellectually superior to that provided by American universities. He argues that the Athenian approach to education is more rigorous and intellectually challenging than the traditional American approach. While I agree that the Athens experience can be intellectually stimulating, I believe that American universities provide a more comprehensive and balanced education.

First, let me address the issue of rigor. Mr. Broyles argues that the Athens experience is more rigorous than the American one. While this may be true in certain subjects such as philosophy and rhetoric, I believe that American universities provide a more balanced and comprehensive education.

Second, I believe that American universities provide a more diverse education. While the Athens experience may emphasize traditional disciplines such as philosophy and rhetoric, American universities offer a wider range of courses and disciplines.

Lastly, I believe that American universities provide a more engaged and interactive learning environment. The Athens experience may emphasize small group discussions and seminars, but American universities offer a wider range of learning opportunities, including lectures, seminars, and small group discussions.

In conclusion, while I believe that both the Athens experience and the American one can be intellectually stimulating, I believe that American universities provide a more comprehensive and balanced education. I encourage all students to consider both options and to choose the one that best suits their needs and interests.

Smiths' Promising Career Ends With Split

As far as it seems, the amount of "singer-songwriter" has been the case for a long time. People are always knocking on the door, asking for five minutes of their presence. All because some club, group, or radio station is sponsoring a singer-songwriter. It is to wonder why these functions are popular and decided to give some difficulty in locating. Therefore, here is an article from the New York Times about the Smiths' demise. I will read it aloud and then hit you over the head with a pack rat. -The correct spelling of the leader of Libya's government is Qaddafi. This is a common error.
American blind, Richard Groves, pastor of Wake Forest Baptist Church, will lead the discussion, which is free and open to the public. It will take place Thursday at 8 p.m.

On Feb. 23, the Triad German Club and Reynolds Halls, German students will meet to hear a lecture titled "Ich Dick Dich." This event is also free and open to the general public.

The Virginia Cavaliers used an early lead and held off several Wake Forest rallies to hand the Deacons an 82-81 loss in an ACC women's basketball game Wednesday night in Reynolds Gymnasium.

The Cavaliers opened up a 17-point lead in the first half and held on to win their 10th straight game. Virginia coasted to a 50-34 lead with 16:32 remaining in the second half.

"We were down 5:50 before we could find our rhythm," Head Coach Joanne Boyle said. "The kids were kind of forced to fight or lose the ball and come from behind.

Virginia senior forward Lisa Davis found the baseline for the first time of the game. The inside the team another game. The Deacons closed the half at a 19-54 total for 84.

"I think we had a good prepared and we made prepared in a way that was the right time to go down to the court," Boyle said.

"We signed some good running backs, but we didn't sign the big running back," Dooley said. "We've got two good running backs in Barry Fabyan and Tim McDaniel, and a young one with six points, Laura Kidwell and Colleen Koontz with three points each and Barry Fabyan led Wake Forest to a fourth-place finish in the ACC Championship game.

"In the wake of this season, the Deacons are 8-3. They are 4-1 in Atlantic Coast Conference play, with three conference losses to the Cavaliers. Virginia Coach Debbie Ryan said.

"I think they're in that V-Golden era, but they've got the type of class that in order to compete, they're in that type of class that in order to compete," Dooley said.

Women’s Team Seeks Conference Championship As Search for Allen’s Replacement Continues

The women’s tennis team is in the process of looking for a new coach, but it shouldn’t affect the talented Deacons in their quest for an ACC championship.

Dede Allen, Wake Forest’s women’s coach for the past six years, left to take a position with the United States Tennis Association (USTA). Allen compiled a career record of 82-51, including last year’s 21-11 mark that placed the team in second place in the ACC and earned Allen ACC Coach of the Year honors.

Allen’s replacement, Ian Crookenden, the director of the tennis program at Wake Forest and the head coach for both the men’s and women’s teams, and the Wake Forest athletic administration are currently reviewing applications for Allen’s replacement.

“We have received a lot of applications and should have someone by early March,” Crookenden said.

Crookenden has been travelling with the women’s team in the early indoor season. He does not seem overly concerned about finding a new coach quickly.

“I’ve always been responsible for both teams,” he said. “This just lets me be with the women’s team on a competitive basis.”

The team’s goal of an ACC championship was given a boost when it gained the services of two women who should greatly enhance the depth of the squad.

Karim Dallwitz, a first-semester freshman, was the number one player in Mexico in the 18 and under division, and the team also added Lisa Pamintuan, a transfer from Southern Methodist University. Pamintuan played for the team in the fall season.

Crookenden feels that with the addition of these two women the team is better than the top 30 ranking they received in the pre-season polls.

“I believe we should be ranked in the top 20 very soon,” he said. “We’re closer to the ACC championship than last year and we finished second then.”

To win the conference championship, the Deacons must first get past Clemson, Duke and North Carolina, all of which held national rankings in the pre-season.

The team is led by senior Jackie van Wijk and junior Angelique Lodewyks, numbers one and two in singles. Crookenden feels both will be nationally ranked.

A year ago, van Wijk and Lodewyks both registered impressive records in singles to lead the Deacons to their second place ACC finish.

Other top players for the team are number three singles player Monica Kowalewski and number four Laurie Jackson.

In doubles competition, van Wijk and Kowalewski team up for the number one team, while Lodewyks and Jackson play in the number two position.

Dallwitz, senior Jolyn Smith and sophomore Noelie Paschon have each taken part in the number three doubles team this season.

The Deacons started the season with a 2-1 record as they played indoors at the end of January at Yale University. They began by blanking Brown University 9-0. Van Wijk and Lodewyks led an impressive Deacon effort, winning 6-1, 6-0, and 6-0, 6-1, respectively. Crookenden was happy with the intensity that the Deacons showed in defeating Brown, as the Brown women managed to win only one set.

Wake Forest’s record dropped to 1-1 after the next match to Yale, which walked away with a 5-4 victory. The Deacons lost four out of five three-set matches, including three out of the top four singles matches.

“Tennis is a tough match against an experienced team,” Crookenden said. “A lot of those matches could have gone either way.”

Wake Forest bounced back the next day to defeat Notre Dame 5-3 to improve to the present 2-1 mark.

After the three-match series at Yale, only the doubles team of Lodewyks and Jackson had a perfect 3-0 record. Lodewyks also had a 2-0 singles record, having not played a match by mutual agreement of the coaches against Notre Dame. Dallwitz also had a 2-0 singles record at the number six position.

Crookenden hopes the optimism surrounding the team after last year’s finish coupled with this year’s expectations will bring out the spectators to watch the team.

Men’s Team Moves Closer to Winning ACC Title With Talented Returnees, Promising Newcomers

Ian Crookenden, the Wake Forest men’s tennis coach, enters the 1988 spring season with a very familiar goal, but this season he believes his team’s chances of reaching that goal are improved.

“Our goal from year to year never changes — it is to win the ACC,” Crookenden said. “We feel we are getting closer each year.”

The Deacons’ chances of continuing this trend will rest with five returnees from last year’s top six as well as two promising freshmen.

Leading the way for the 1988 squad is the talented trio of Mark Greenan, Stefan Dallwitz and Christian Dallwitz.

Greenan returns to the number-one spot after being named all-ACC last season. The sophomore had an excellent fall with a record of 13-6. He won the singles and doubles titles at the University of South Carolina Invitational and reached the finals of the Roehl ITCA Regionals.

The Dallwitz brothers will both close out their fine careers this spring. Stefan enjoyed an overall record of 11-4 in the fall. It was highlighted by his winning the sportsmanship award in the Wake Forest 4 Plus 1 Tournament and making a semi-final appearance in the South Carolina Invitational.

Christian finished the fall at 7-4. He was a singles quarter-finalist and teamed with Greenan to win the doubles title at the South Carolina tournament.

Sophomore Doron Hartal, senior Mark Kriscunas and freshmen Michael Dillworth and Steve Phillips round out the lineup.

Hartal had a 4-4 record in the fall, but reached the finals of the second flight of the USC Invitational.

Kriscunas returns for his final spring after finishing 4-6 in the fall. However, he had a win over Davidson’s number one player, and also lost a three-set match to North Carolina’s top player.

Dillworth was 2-3 in the fall, but teamed with Kriscunas to win three of four doubles matches in the 4 Plus 1. Phillips compiled a 5-3 mark. Both freshmen gained valuable experience in the fall.

The final member of last year’s top six, Lance Illsfield, withdrew from school and returned to his home in South Africa.

Physical conditioning has been stressed in the practices.

“Since at the beginning of the season you don’t have much match play, you want to have confidence in your conditioning,” Crookenden said.

“We’ve been working harder than ever,” Stefan Dallwitz said. “Everyone must stay healthy; we can’t afford to lose any of our top seven.”

Last season, the lower part of the lineup could not win on a regular basis. Hartal will be an important factor in changing this as he will play number four singles and number three doubles.

“I didn’t play consistently well last year,” Hartal said. “I got nervous and put too much pressure on myself. However, he sees improvement in both

"Our goal from year to year never changes — it is to win the ACC. We feel we are getting closer each year.”

— Men’s Tennis Coach Ian Crookenden

Some changes from last year have been made as the top two doubles teams switched partners. Greenan and Christian Dallwitz will form the number-one tandem, and Stefan Dallwitz and Kriscunas will team at the number-two slot. Hartal and Dillworth will occupy the number-three spot.

The schedule will once again prove to be very challenging. It includes eleven nationally-ranked teams in addition to the always-tough ACC matches.

“They [the NCAA] reduced the number of playing days a team can have, so we had to cut off some of the teams that weren’t quite as strong,” Crookenden said.

The schedule will be an end of the Miami Quad Invitational on Feb. 12-14. The field consists of Wake Forest, 22nd-ranked Miami of Florida, New Mexico and South Florida.

Through the season, the tough schedule should prove advantageous as the experienced players take on leadership roles and the freshmen continue to acquire the needed experience. Crookenden hopes this process will be completed in time to peak for the ACC tournament.

Len Mattiace returns for his junior year as the Deacons will once again challenge for the national title.
Deacons Return Every Player from Last Year
As They Gun for National Title Once Again

After finishing second in the NCAA Championships a year ago, the Wake Forest men's golf team looks to reclaim the number one position it held in 1986.

Head Coach Jesse Haddock, now entering his 28th year at the helm of the Deacon program, returns virtually the same lineup that finished second in the nation last season.

Haddock has a very positive outlook going into the 1988 spring season.

"We think we have a good team. Three of them (Barry Fabian, Len Mattiace and Tim Straub) played on a team that won a national championship. Last year, we were runner-up in the nationals, and all those players are back. Overall, I think it's a very talented and solid team," Haddock said.

This year's team will be led by juniors Fabian and Mattiace, both third team all-American selections last season.

Fabian saved his best performances for last, as he turned in the lowest scores for the Deacons in the last two tournaments a season ago.

In the Oak Tree Intercollegiate, Fabian shot a 212, finishing in 12th place during fall play.

His play was one of the reasons that the Deacons finished second in the nation.

During the 1987 fall season, Fabian's best showing was in the Guilford Invitationals, in which he shot a 148 over two days and tied for 10th.

Also returning is junior Mattiace, one of the most consistent performers on last year's team.

Mattiace finished either first, second or third in four different tournaments last season, including a first-place finish in the Imperial Lakes Classic.

Mattiace's best performance in the fall 1987 season was in the Guilford Invitational, in which he shot a 147 and finished eighth.

Junior Straub is also back for the Deacons this season, and he is the third key to the success of the team.

Straub had an excellent season last spring, finishing third in the Atlantic Coast Conference Tournament and sixth in the Iron Duke Classic. In 1987, Straub reigned as the New York State men's amateur champion, adding this to his list of already impressive credentials.

Sophomore Eoghan O'Connell contributed a great deal to the program as a freshman, and is now expected to do bigger and better things for the Deacon squad this season.

O'Connell was all-ACC last season, and deservedly so. He finished in a tie for third (201) at the Chris Schenk Intercollegiate and in a tie for fourth position at the Doral Park National Collegiate.

During the fall 1987 season, O'Connell's best showing was in the Golf World/Palmetto Dunes Collegiate. He shot a 216 and finished eighth in a three-day tournament held in November.

"All four of those players...are number one players. What order in the lineup they play, I don't know, but they are all capable of playing in the number one position."

- Men's Golf Coach Jesse Haddock

Russell Blake
Old Gold and Black Reporter

Barry Fabian
Len Mattiace
Tim Straub

These four golfers make up the nucleus of the Wake Forest team, and are essential to the team's success.

"All four of those players — Straub, Mattiace, Fabian and O'Connell — are number one players," Haddock said. "What order in the lineup they play I don't know, but they are all capable of playing in the number one position. They are outstanding college players."

Before the fall season, the fifth spot was up for grabs. Among the contenders were Tony Mollica, David Clarke, Mark Cero and Mark Strickland.

Sophomore Cero came on top, but the position is still in the air.

"At the end of the fall season, Mark had not sewn up the fifth spot, but had earned the spot over the other three. We've got to leave it where if one player is not in the lineup and is playing better, and we feel like he can handle the competition, then I've got to make that decision if he should move into the fifth spot," Haddock said.

Cero, from Lebanon, Ind., played in two tournaments last season, and was a high school all-American.

In the 1987 fall season, Cero shot a 228 at the Southwestern Intercollegiate in Oct.

Junior Mollica, who played in every tournament last year, will battle Cero during the season for the fifth spot, even though Cero played in the Deacons' first tournament.

During the 1987 fall season, Mollica tied for 38th (148) at the Guilford Invitational. Also expected to compete for the fifth position will be junior Clarke, from Greenwich, Conn. Last season, Clarke played in the Oak Tree Intercollegiate and shot a 219 over three days. Locally, he won the Greenwich Club title in both 1986 and '87, and looks to contribute more to the Deacon squad this season.

The only newcomer expected to make an impact is Strickland. The freshman from El Cajon, Calif., was a highly-sought-after recruit last season.

Strickland played in one tournament during the fall season, the Guilford Invitational. He shot a 155 over the two days.

The attitude of the players is also an important factor in the team's success, and Haddock believes it is very positive.

"I think our attitude is very good," Haddock said. "We think we can win, but we have to be realistic. We haven't had an opportunity, because of the weather, to get out and practice this spring, so this might affect us somewhat."

As far as the outlook for each of the tournaments, the Deacons have scheduled some of the toughest teams in the nation. But Haddock believes that the team can perform well against others squads in the high-rent district.

"The players and I think we are good enough to win any collegiate tournament in which we play, but that does not mean we will win every one," Haddock said. "I don't know of any team that can go out and win every tournament. But you have to be good enough to think you can in order to win a good number of the tournaments."

"The toughest tournaments will be the Miami-Doral Park Tournament [last weekend], the Raleigh Intercollegiate and the Chris Schenk Intercollegiate, because of the strength and caliber of the teams," Haddock said.

But if there is one key to the Deacons' success this season it has to be consistency. "What I'd like to see with this team is more consistency," Haddock said. "I'd be disappointed if that were not true — both in the physical and mental game."

McGirr Hopes to Overcome Team's Inconsistency By Building Around Solid Nucleus of 4 Players

Arnold Palmer and Curtis Strange are names with which every Wake Forest student or alumna are familiar. They are sports heroes.

You will be excused, though, for scratching your head when asked about Patti Jordan and Brenda Corrie. Since the founding of the women's golf team in 1971, Wake Forest has labored in relative obscurity despite winning the Big Four title in the fall of 1979 and the ACC title in the spring of 1986.

Despite these highlights, the program has not been able to maintain a top level of play. Most of the problem lies in a lack of consistency, both from tournament to tournament and from year to year.

But this spring, Coach Mary Beth McGirr is looking to look up for Head Coach Mary Beth McGirr and her team. The school is beginning to become more serious about women's golf, offering more scholarships and improving the golf facilities as women's golf becomes more popular around the country.

McGirr feels she has a core of young and talented players on which to base further improvement towards the nationally-competitive level on which the men play.

"We have a solid nucleus of our top four players and a blend around with a couple of other young, developing players who can help out in the number five spot," McGirr said.

"What is most encouraging is that all six are either sophomores or juniors, yet the top four all have the experience of playing together in our tournament lineup for a year and a half!" That foursome includes sophomores Laura D'Alessandro, seniors Loren Milhench and Kiernan Prechtl and co-captain. Senior Kim Logue is the other co-captain.

"Karen has improved her game tremendously," McGirr said. "Right now she is by far our most consistent player."

Noble improved her stroke average from her 1986-87 total of 80.4 to 77.7 this fall, easily leading the team. She paced the team in every tournament this fall, with her best performances being an 11th place showing at the 19-team Florida State Invitational and Tie 13th place in the 17-team Kentucky Invitational.

D'Alessandro, Milhench and Prechtl all have the talent to make the Deacons a winning team, but they haven't been able to put together the consistency that it takes to win tournaments.

D'Alessandro had a brilliant prep career at Toms River High School in Toms River, N.J., leading her team to three undefeated seasons from 1984 to 1986.

She started strong as a freshman, placing third on the team in her first collegiate tournament and finishing the year with a stroke average of 80.0, second on the team.

But D'Alessandro went through a slump this spring, finishing 15th in two tournaments but playing relatively poorly in the two others. "She's been practicing a lot this spring and I'm very confident she will rebound," McGirr said.

"Loren Milhench's game has shown a lot of promise this year after a disappointing sophomore year last year. She could lead some consistency to this team," McGirr said.

Milhench was in and out of the Deacon lineup last year as she experienced some problems with her swing, but this fall she seemed to have worked them out, shaving her stroke average from last year's 85.7 to 80.5.

"We have a solid nucleus of our top four players to build around with a couple of other young, developing players who can help out in the number five spot."

followed an 83 the day before. The 83 tied for the highest a Wake Forest player had in the tournament.

"If she gains the consistency to go with her great talent, she could be the team's best player," McGirr said.

Finally, sophomores Goslak and Kodak will round out in the team's fifth spot in what shapes up to be a battle to see who will hold that spot next year.

Both players have fairly limited tournament experience and are going to be given a chance to show what they can contribute to the team. In two tournaments this fall, Goslak had a very respectable 82.5 stroke average.

In her one appearance this fall, Kodak turned in a poor 93 round on the tournament's first day, but went on to play well in the next two rounds.

"Both girls are still working through swing changes," McGirr said. "They just need a lot of practice to get their swings down pat."

McGirr stresses the need for everyone on the team to play more consistently throughout the five tournaments on the spring schedule.

"They're a good group of players and are very hard workers, McGirr said. "We just need to start playing well in every round and have strong play from everyone in every tournament."

"Another problem of the team is depth. We need for some good players to develop outside of our top players so that replacements will be on hand."

When the team opens play on the first weekend of March at the Troy State-Hudson Industries Invitational in Eufaula, Ala., it has the potential to win. But potential is not enough, as McGirr knows.

"We need to all play well — together," she said.

Prechtl may be the deciding factor in the Deacons' season. "She is definitely the key to our team because she needs to get some consistency," McGirr said. "She is extremely talented, and we rely a lot on her to come through for us."

Prechtl finished seventh in the ACC Tournament in her freshman year, helping to lead the Deacons to the league's last tournament championship. She's been a very inconsistent player, though.

While she registered the team's best round of the fall with a 73 in the Beacon Woods/South Florida Invitational, it

Goodridge Hopes to Overcome Lack of Depth With Strong Distance Events, Improved Sprints

The Wake Forest men's track team will look to overcome a lack of team depth as it attempts to break out of the Atlantic Coast Conference cellar this season.

"In track and field, our biggest weakness will be our team depth, but our season has the potential to be highlighted by some outstanding individual performances," Head Coach John Goodridge said.

In addition to a strong distance program, led by members of the Deacon cross country team, Goodridge expects improvement in other areas of competition this year.

"Considering our overall starting point this year, I think our track team is a bit more balanced than it's been. We've improved in sprints, middle distances, throwing and hurdles," he said.

Included in the new Deacon talent is hurdler Steve Brown, a freshman from Washington, D.C. Brown, a member of the Wake Forest football squad as well, won the national junior championships in the 110-meter hurdles last year. Brown finished undefeated in three international meets held this summer in Havana, Cuba, Vancouver, Canada, and Pullman, Wash. in addition to the Deacon team as well.

Brown is still eligible for junior competition this year, and will compete in the World Junior Championships.

The Deacons will also receive help from the football program in the short distances this season.

"We're receiving excellent support from the football program this season," Goodridge said. "Football players Buddy Smith and David Braxton will provide added strength in sprints.

In addition to Smith and Braxton, the track squad will be bolstered by the addition of two freshmen, Kevin Cokley and Pat Kelley.

Cokley, from Pilot Mountain, earned all-conference awards at East Surry High School. Kelley, from Fayetteville, was a two-time all-conference performer in high school. Kelley has already set a school indoor record in the 200 meter sprints.

In the middle distance events, freshman Michael Guegan has already set school indoor records in the 400 and 800 meter events. Guegan, recruited from St. Clement, England, was timed at 47.7 in the 400 meters earlier this year.

In addition to Guegan, Darby Buroker from Lima, Ohio, is another freshman recruit who should contribute to the Deacon squad.

Goodridge also expects senior Chris Ingalls to figure prominently in the Deacon middle distance efforts. Ingalls, a member of the cross country team, finished seventh in the ACC Championships last season in the 800 meters.

In the distance lineup, Goodridge will count on the performance of several of his runners from this season's successful cross country team.

Individuals Could Qualify for National Tourney
As Team Hopes to Improve in Competitive ACC

The Wake Forest women's track team enters the spring season with the prospect for several individuals to qualify for the national track championships and for the team as a whole to move up in the highly-competitive Atlantic Coast Conference.

"We are at the point where we can score and start beating some teams in the ACC," Head Coach Francie Goodridge said. "We were sixth last year. We may well move up to the middle of the conference.

"You can count on having competition in this conference if you are a middle distance or a distance runner. You don't have to go into a meet wondering if you are going to have any competition because it is there. The thrust of most of the teams in the conference is distance running."

The Deacons' success in the ACC will be dependent upon a corps of highly-talented runners, most of whom were members of the cross country team that finished 10th in the nation last fall. Returning for her final season of collegiate competition is Karen Dunn. Dunn has been hampered by injuries for the past two track seasons, and this spring will mark her first appearance in outdoor competition since 1985.

"We have high hopes that she will come around and have a great season," Goodridge said. "National qualifying is certainly in the picture. That and finishing high in the ACC are primary goals for her.

Dunn will be concentrating primarily on the 3,000 and 5,000 meters events. She won the NCAA Division II title and finished in eighth place in the 3,000 meters in 1985, making her the first female athlete from Wake Forest to earn All-American honors.

Another promising national qualifier is junior Sue VanderWagen, last season's most valuable runner. She won the ACC 10,000 meters championship last spring, making her Wake Forest's first conference track champion.

Although VanderWagen is nursing an injury and sitting out the indoor season, Goodridge is confident that she will be able to qualify for the nationals in events ranging from 3,000 to the 10,000 meters.

"We still have high hopes that she will be racing well by the end of the season," Goodridge said. "Sue was very close to qualifying last year. Obviously, with the injury, we are behind where we were a year ago. But we are hoping that a year's strength and the fine cross country season she had will make up for that."

Also competing in her final track season is Jennifer Rioux, who has the potential to qualify nationally in events ranging from the 1,500 to 10,000 meters. Rioux earned All-American honors as a member of Michigan's two-relay team before coming to Wake Forest. She also gained All-American honors at last fall's National Cross Country Championships.

"Jennifer is coming off the best cross country season she's had since coming to Wake Forest," Goodridge said. "We are hoping for national qualifying from her as well."

Liz Becker is yet another potential national qualifier for Wake Forest. Despite a severe bout of bronchitis last spring, Becker rebounded to finish fourth in the ACC 5,000 meters and set personal bests in the 3,000 and 5,000 meters.

"She is in the best shape of her life," Goodridge said. "We are extremely enthused about the potential she has."

"We are at the point where we can score and start beating some teams in the ACC. We were sixth last year. We may well move up to the middle of the conference."

Susan Cnsp, a highly-touted transfer from the University of Florida, has been suffering from a variety of injuries but should be ready to compete later this season.

Once the Deacons begin the outdoor season, they will be competing almost every weekend. One of the key meets they will be in is the ACC Relays at North Carolina State.

"It has always been a terrific meet for us," Goodridge said. "By the end of March, this team has always been ready to give some nice performances."

"Last year, Sue came reasonably close to qualifying at 5,000 meters for the National Championships. The competition is great there. N.C. State's distance runners alone are enough to push us. We should be ready to run some good times."

Another important meet for Wake Forest will be the Dogwood Relays in Knoxville, Tenn.

"It will be a real testing experience," Goodridge said. "We get competition from all over the Midwest coming down there. We usually have some good performances there."

Adding strength to the Deacons' group of possible qualifiers is freshman Anne Letko. She provided consistent performances for Wake Forest in cross country last fall. In the recent Midnight Run in New York, Letko captured the women's title with a time of 27:45.

"Anne is running extremely well," Goodridge said. "We are hoping for some really nice things from her. She clearly is one the best freshmen in the country."

Letko will concentrate on the mile, the 800 meters and the 5,000 meters.

Juniors Amy Kattwinkel and Kristi Cassell will provide strength in the longer distances. Kattwinkel, the number seven runner on the cross country team last fall, will focus on the 5,000 and 10,000 meter events. Cassell, who is currently recovering from an injury, has scored in the 10,000 meters in her previous track seasons and
