Admission Policy Altered

By CARLA DAVIDSON

Faculty because of the success at this year's athletes' scholarship program, the administration has increased the scholarship award to $1,000. This increase will be distributed among the athletes based on their contributions to the university community. The policy was introduced in response to the demand for increased financial support for student-athletes, which had been expressed by both students and alumni.

The policy also includes a new provision that athletes must complete a minimum of 12 credit hours per semester to maintain their eligibility. This change was made to ensure that student-athletes are making progress toward their academic goals. The policy further requires that athletes must maintain a minimum GPA of 2.0 to remain eligible for scholarships.

The change in policy was approved by the faculty, who recognized the importance of supporting student-athletes both academically and athletically. The policy is expected to have a positive impact on the quality of the university's athletics program and the overall academic performance of student-athletes.

Publicity Needed

We do not feel we have the sufficient facts yet to comment on the admissions policy for athletes and other exceptional students that has been in effect for some time, but has only recently come to light. However, we do wonder why everyone is so concerned about a policy which the university cannot be said to have initiated or promoted.

SJB Mocks Process

Bob Williams, co-chairman of the Student Judicial Board, said earlier this week that it had been "a good year" for the board. After the open trial Wednesday night concerning Neal Berkowitz, the truth behind the verdict remains to be seen.

If the procedures which it follows are not up to the standards of those which it follows, the SJB has not been a good year for the board. Several faculty members have voiced concerns about the board's decision-making process, which is often kept secret. The SJB has been criticized for its lack of transparency and for its failure to provide adequate due process to those accused of misconduct.

Golfers Prepare For Biggest Test

By RONNIE McPHERSON

The Wake Forest golf team was in no mood for a light mood as it prepared for the ACC Championships in Atlanta.

"We have been practicing all year for this," said coach Doug Jones. "And we are ready to show what we are made of." The Demon Deacons were chosen to finish second in the league standings, behind Florida State.

The team is composed of several players who have won individual events during the season, and they are hoping to repeat their success in the ACC meet.

The event will be held on the Olde Georgia Golf Club, and the team will be seeking to improve on their second-place finish in the tournament last year.

"We are looking forward to the challenge," said Jones. "We have been working hard all year, and we are ready to compete." The Demon Deacons are expecting a tough fight from the rest of the ACC teams, and they are hoping to come out on top.

The ACC Championships will be held from April 30 to May 2, and the team will be hoping to bring home the championship trophy.

Dale Surprised at Signing

By JANE ALDRICH
Sports Editor

Former Wake Forest basketball player Dale Stinson was surprised by the news that he had been signed to play for the Greensboro College Southern basketball team.

"I was really surprised by the news," said Stinson. "I had no idea that it was going to happen." The Demon Deacons' basketball team had been expected to select Stinson in the upcoming NBA draft, but they decided to give him a chance to play in college.

Stinson, who had played for the Demon Deacons for four years, had been a key member of the team, and he had been a leader on and off the court.

"I am really happy about the news," said Stinson. "I have always wanted to play in college, and this is the perfect opportunity." Stinson will be joined by a large group of new players on the team, and he is looking forward to playing with them.

The Greensboro College Southern basketball team is expected to be one of the best teams in the conference, and Stinson is looking forward to the challenge of playing against the top teams in the league.

Women's Sports: Where Now?

By LAUREL WIGGERT

Women's sports today are no longer just for fun. They have become a serious part of the college experience. At Wake Forest, women's sports have grown in popularity over the past few years, and now we're seeing a shift in the way they are perceived.

The budget for women's sports has increased dramatically over the past few years, and this is reflected in the improvements we see on the field. With better facilities and more resources available, women's sports are able to compete on a more equal level with men's sports. This is especially true in the realm of women's volleyball, where Wake Forest has a strong team that is starting to attract more attention.

In addition to the increased funding, women's sports are also gaining more recognition from fans and administrators. This is thanks in large part to the hard work of our athletes, who have shown that they are just as capable as their male counterparts. In fact, many of them are even more focused and dedicated.

Despite these positive changes, there is still much work to be done. Women's sports continue to face challenges such as funding, facilities, and gender equality. But with the progress we've made, it's clear that these challenges are becoming less and less insurmountable.

Overall, the future of women's sports at Wake Forest looks bright. With continued support and dedication from both the administration and the student body, these programs will continue to grow and thrive. So let's celebrate this shift in perception and support women's sports wherever we can.
I followed your advice and wrote a letter to the Dean of Students about the incident. I explained that the checks had been sent in error and that I would be happy to pay for any damage caused. I also mentioned that I was aware of the University's policy regarding student conduct.

The following day, the Dean sent a response acknowledging the letter and stating that further investigation would be conducted. He also mentioned that the University would cover any expenses incurred as a result of the checks being sent.

I am still waiting for a formal communication regarding the outcome of the investigation. I will keep you updated if anything changes.

Sincerely,
