The overall division is very much interested in the arts, since the department is ready to make that transition. Dr. Smith said she thought that was very important. "It will be a challenge to make that transition, but we will try our best to do it."

Dr. Smith said that she is looking forward to working with the board in order to make the transition as seamless as possible. "We are very excited about this opportunity, and we are committed to making it successful," she said.

President Hearn lectures on poetry of Robert Frost

By Keith Belaf

President Thomas K. Hearn, Jr. spoke about the poetry of Robert Frost, focusing on the relationship between Frost's works and the American romantic tradition.

"Robert Frost was a great American poet," Hearn said. "His poetry is characterized by a deep understanding of nature and the human condition."

Hearn cited several examples from Frost's poetry, including "The Road Not Taken," "Mending Wall," and "Stopping by Woods on a Snowy Evening.

Hearn said that Frost's poetry is often characterized by a sense of ambiguity and uncertainty, which he believed to be a reflection of the complexity of the human experience.

"Robert Frost's poetry is a wonderful example of the ways in which poetry can help us understand ourselves and the world around us," Hearn said.
GAG sponsors panel discussion on peace in Arab-Israeli conflict

BY KATHARINE HILLMAN

One of Wake Forest's newest student activist groups, the Global Awareness Group, organized a panel discussion Monday, highlighting "Perspectives in the Middle East" in relation to the Arab-Israeli Conflict. Held in Henson Hall of Presidents Chan­cellor's Lounge, which usually accommodated a tour of "Paradise for Peace in the Middle East" to gain inspiration for the project, the panelists were:

Noam Shalit, an Israeli who was held for 24 years by Palestinian terrorists in a West Bank jail.

Hanan Shaltut, a Palestinian, who has been captured and held in an Israeli prison for six years.

Hanan Shaltut is Palestinian, and can support them as well. Hanan Shaltut is Palestinian, and can support them as well. Our students are very happy to participate in the discussion, if they can understand the situation, "Hanan Shaltut said.

Their goal is to bring about circumstances of peace, the panelists said, which means finding a solution to the conflict. The Israeli student said, "There is violence, the program stops. Then there is a growing need between helpless people, (taking and giving) hands to make things happen."

Alcohol consumption has been an issue in the three-year history of the group. The first issue of the group's newsletter was devoted to alcohol and the "growing problem among the student body," according to the newsletter's editor. It was decided that a special day had been "elected" to help the students understand the issue of alcohol abuse.

Jenifer Fitzer, the pre­sid­ent of the campus ath­letic program, said, "What is interesting is that the lỗi­al alcohol abuse issue is so far from the rest of the campus." TENURE

Professors' tenure was postponed until next year. The association said the professors' new post-tenure evaluations were the reasons for the postponement.

The association said it was concerned with the professors' teaching, not their research or publication productivity.

"The department's recommendations are based on teaching and service," the association said.

Another factor contributing to the association's recommendation was the university's new policy on the role of women professors.

The association's Women's Faculty Committee conducted a study last fall examining the university's policies and procedures on the role of women professors.

The association said the university's new policy on the role of women professors was "not sufficient." The association urged the university to "be more responsive to the needs of women professors."

The marijuana proposal defined a "reasonable amount" of marijuana that a person should be allowed to consume at a party as the "equivalent of two 13-ounce cans of beer or two 5-ounce glasses of wine." For example, if a student uses a party at 8 p.m., the drug would be considered "reasonable" if he or she used almost three beers because the party is ending three hours later.

The legislature also delayed the 1:30 a.m. curfew to parties recommended by the committee, as opposed to 2 a.m. proposed by students.

Change must not harm students' interests

We commend the decisions of the speech communication and business administration deans to avoid, with the utmost efficiency, harm to students. We also commend the new faculty and staff who have taken an active role in the decision-making process.

True compassion

I am writing in response to Jay Broder's column in this issue of the Old Gold and Black. I must express my deep appreciation for his article. Broder writes about the importance of compassion and empathy in our daily lives. He highlights the need for us to be more understanding and compassionate towards others. I believe that this message is very important and should be shared with everyone.

Former Esquire editor describes Hayes

By Stephen Mason

IT was the 1960s, and in a room on the fifth floor of the Newsweek Building in New York City, Leonard L. Loeb, the magazine's art director, was talking to Harold T.P. Hayes, a young editor for the magazine. Hayes was only 28 years old at the time, but he had already made a name for himself as a journalist and editor. Loeb admired Hayes' work and had offered him a position at Newsweek.

Loeb said he had met Hayes for the first time when he was 20 years old. Hayes was then a student at Harvard University, and Loeb was the art director of the Harvard Crimson, the university's newspaper. Loeb had been impressed with Hayes' writing and had encouraged him to pursue a career in journalism.

Loeb said Hayes was a very ordinary young man. He was a regular guy, who liked to hang out with his friends and did not have a lot of money. But he had a passion for writing, and he was determined to succeed.

Hayes had written for several newspapers and magazines, including The Atlantic Monthly and The New Republic, before he joined Newsweek. Loeb said Hayes was a great writer, with a unique style that captured the attention of readers.

Loeb said Hayes was an excellent editor as well. He had a keen eye for talent and was able to spot promising writers early in their careers. He also had a strong sense of what made a good magazine cover, and he was able to connect with readers through his covers.

Loeb said Hayes was a great editor and a great writer. He was a real talent, and he had a lot to offer the magazine industry. Loeb was proud to have been a part of Hayes' career and had no doubt that he would go on to great things.

Panel of journalists discuss aspects of Hayes' ascension, legacy

By Stephen Mason

There are two panels held Friday as part of the Harold T. P. Hayes symposium, which highlights how Hayes changed journalism and the consequences of that change.

The first panel included Carol Polugay, a journalism professor at Indiana University; Josephine Polugay, a reporter for the Kansas City Star; and Michael Riley, a writing professor at New York University. The panelists discussed Hayes' relationship with the media, and the consequences of that change.

Hayes was a great editor, and he was also a great writer. He had a unique style that captured the attention of readers, and he was able to connect with them through his covers. He was a true original, and he will be missed by the industry. Hayes was a great inspiration to all of us, and he will be remembered for years to come.
Kipnis gives plucky performance, lecture

By MICHAEL ARMISTER

Taking notes seemed to be the aim of the audience as坐落 Dan Locklair, an associate professor of music at the University of Massachusetts, performed his well-received recital Friday evening at the Sacks Fine Art Center. Having already attended several recitals, he showed his proficiency for the audience.

When Kipnis appeared on the stage, the crowd responded to his presence. He quickly moved on to the piano and began to play his music. His performance was captivating, and the audience was enthralled.

Throughout the recital, Kipnis captivated the audience with his dynamic and expressive playing. His technical mastery was evident, and he demonstrated a deep understanding of the music he was performing.

The recital concluded with an encore of "Les Baricades Miserables" by Rameau. Kipnis's performance was received with great applause, and the audience was left in awe of his talent.

The recital was a wonderful evening of music, and Kipnis's performance was a highlight of the evening. His technical mastery and emotional depth were truly remarkable. The audience was left with agreater appreciation for the art of music and the dedication required to achieve such a level of proficiency.

Men's golf team finishes twelfth at PING/American

By Jay Barnick

Of course, the Demon Deacons couldn't control the weather.

The men's golf team entered the PING/Amateur Air Lines Collegiate in Cary ranked sixth in the nation but wound up finishing 12th.

The team was forced to complete its final round of the event at Wake Forest's Falcon Golf Course.

The Demon Deacons finished 12th in the field that included teams from Wake Forest, Georgia Tech, Florida State, North Carolina, and others.

The team's finish was a testament to the perseverance of its members in the face of adversity.

Despite the challenging conditions, the team showed great resilience in competing against some of the top teams in the country.

The Demon Deacons will now look to build upon their success in future tournaments, as they aim to improve their ranking and compete for championships.

Women's team 'defends' ACC championship at home after six-year layoff

By Steve Weatherford
