Last week the Winston-Salem Journal gave students a new look at the student body. The newspaper covered the speech from the press box, with pieces ranging from the press box to the Student Union. The resulting deflated budget for the average man in the crowd.

In his speech, the president of the university, Roy H. Wilkes, recognized the need for a more efficient way of handling the story. "I've always been a firm believer in supporting the students," Wilkes said. "But this year we have to work out some kind of budget that will be acceptable to the people of the city."

Wake Forest has yet to make any decisions on the future of the campus. John G. Willard, university vice president, said that decisions will be made in the near future. "We will make decisions on the future of the campus," Willard said. "But we have to look at the long-term implications before making any decisions."
Cartoon cels sell as investments

Neliole Wolch

Cartoon cels — that's the term for animated pictures that have become collectible art — has become a hot topic in recent years. However, you really need to be careful when picking your idea. Many people are now collecting animation art for investment purposes, and prices are soaring. At an auction held by Sotheby's in New York, several original animation cels from the films "Bugs Bunny" and "Daffy Duck" were auctioned off for upwards of $10,000 each.

The gallery representative, CU Monday through Wednesday at 8:20 a.m. in Reynolda Hall.

"The seemingly high prices are because of the strong appeal of the artwork. The Museum of Modern Art is one of the few institutions that are keeping up with the demand," said a spokesperson from the gallery.

Prices at the show range from $50 to $1,500 for a drawing owned by a Walt Disney estate, and $100 to $300 for a pen and ink drawing owned by the Walt Disney estate.

The second year the Lainzberg gallery has been sold in the country, and many artists are trying to make a name for themselves.

"We've had a lot of interest in our gallery," said the gallery representative. "We've had people from all over the country come to see our art."

Pandora's box

Perhaps unintentionally, a group of RAs opened Pandora's box last Friday.

With its contents unleashed, the challenge will be for the administration to redress the evils and solve the problems.

The administration should address the evils and solve the problems.

Those two objectives - academic achievement and social concern - are not mutually exclusive concepts.

The second problem I have with the showing of the film is that it was actually a movie, not a documentary.

In the same manner, they opened Pandora's box.

When an editor makes up a story that he knows is not true, he is merely repeating the steps of the film.

The only reason why anyone would do that is if they had a need to be taken seriously.

The film is the fact that it was actually a movie, not a documentary.

Bowl

Bowl

In the last few months, we have been discussing the idea of holding a bowl game in this city.

I think it's a good idea, but there are some concerns.

1. Logistics: How will we accommodate the large number of people who will attend?
2. Safety: How will we ensure the safety of the participants and spectators?
3. Financial: What will be the financial impact of hosting a bowl game?

To address these concerns, we propose the following:

1. Plan early and involve all stakeholders in the planning process.
2. Use private security personnel to ensure safety.
3. Create a detailed financial plan and secure funding from various sources.

We believe that these measures will help mitigate the concerns and make the bowl game a success.

Although the Wake Forest student body has been vocal in its support of attending a bowl game, there is a significant segment that remains hesitant.

"We do not want an out-of-town player to score the winning touchdown, but you can't explain why you would choose to not do this," said Coach Jones.

This Wednesday, Wake Forest will play host to its annual football game against Appalachian State.

"It's a difficult, but important event. We need to focus on the task at hand and ensure that the rewards are equal to the effort."

So we are left with a choice. We may either improve our academic performance to meet the expectations, or we may continue to focus solely on our football games.

"For now, we will focus on our team's success on the field."

Thoughts turned homeward

Home is a place that looks different to everyone.

Some people never quite make the break, and remain in their college dorm rooms.

Others have been on the road, usually on weekends.

This is not to imply a soulful return.

Wake Forest press conference, handed Bowl hopes still alive

Although the Wake Forest men's golf team has not won a national title, they have been known for their consistent play and solid performances. Coach Jesse Haddock emphasized the importance of the team's recent success at the Duke Invitational, where they finished in second place, two shots behind the winner. Tom Knox placed third, three shots behind the second place finisher, and Robert Wrenn took a third place medal in the ACC tournament. The team's ability to perform well consistently is a testament to their training and discipline, as Haddock mentioned.

Golfers romp at Duke

The Duke Invitational was a significant event for the Wake Forest golf team, as it was their first tournament of the season. Coach Haddock spoke highly of the team's performance, stating that their ability to stay focused and maintain a strong competitive edge was a key factor in their success. He also acknowledged the contributions of individual players, such as Tom Knox and Robert Wrenn, who played outstandingly.

Amateur racing team formed

North Carolina's first amateur road racing team, the Tar Heels, was formed during the fall season of 1980. The team was established to promote the sport of amateur road racing and to provide a platform for athletes to compete at a high level. The team was significant because it showcased the talent of young people who were passionate about the sport and were committed to improving their skills.

The team's founder, Jim Deaton, was a former professional cyclist who had a keen interest in promoting amateur road racing. He believed in the value of providing opportunities for young athletes to compete and develop their skills. The team's first season was a success, with a strong showing in several races. This success helped to lay the foundation for the team's future success and contributed to the growth of amateur road racing in the region.

North Carolina ended its season of Wake Forest with a victory over the Demon Deacons. The Deacons lost a 4-3 match in the ACC Tournament at Chapel Hill on Sunday.

The Deacons had a tough match against Wake Forest, but were able to pull out a 4-3 victory. The team is now 7-6, 7-6, 6-4, 6-3, 6-2.

The Deacons' only victory came when Cindy Corey and Ann Gilley upset the number one singles. The team is now 7-6, 7-6, 6-4, 6-3, 6-2.

The Deacons are ranked fifth in the ACC and will run through the ACC Tournament this weekend. If we can upset some of the top teams, we can win it all.

The Deacons' next match is on Tuesday against the University of Virginia. We are excited to see what we can do against them.

John Leonard

With the season's final match this week, there's no better time to discuss the offensive potential of Wake Forest's senior, John Leonard. Leonard has been a consistent contributor for the Demon Deacons this season.

Leonard is a versatile player who can hit with both hands. He has a strong serve and a solid return game. Leonard is capable of hitting winners from both the baseline and the net.

Leonard has been a key player for Wake Forest throughout his career. He has been a consistent performer and has been a leader on and off the court.
