"Peyton Place" (Paramount) and "The Man Who Never Was" (United Artists) are two of the few recent films which have been well received by the public in general. Both pictures have been praised by movie critics, and both have enjoyed box office success.

The success of "Peyton Place" is due largely to its fine acting and directing, as well as its clever scripting. The story of a small town where a young girl is forced to marry a man she does not love is told with poignancy and sensitivity. The performances by the main actors were excellent, and the film's theme of love and sacrifice resonated with audiences.

"The Man Who Never Was" is a more traditional war film, but its depiction of the dangers and horrors of war is both realistic and moving. The film's finale, in which the main character sacrifices his life for the sake of the nation, has been described as one of the most moving scenes in recent cinema.

Both films are recommended for audiences looking for a good, solid, entertaining movie experience. "Peyton Place" is a must-see for those who enjoy character-driven dramas, while "The Man Who Never Was" is recommended for action and adventure fans.

Scales Trial Displays Need For Smith Act

In U. S. Middle District Court in Greensboro recently Julius Smith, Sr. was convicted for the second time of belonging to an organization (the Communist Party) which violates the anti-communist act of 1940. He is now under threat of being deprived of his right to hold public office. He has one more appeal left in his case and may be expected to lose his right to hold public office. He has been charged with conspiracy to incite to violence and with being a member of the Communist Party.

The defense argued that the Court did not view the evidence. It was not necessary to prove that Smith had knowledge of the activities of the Communist Party. It was sufficient to prove that Smith was a member of the party and that he had knowledge of the activities of the party. The Court did not find any evidence that Smith had knowledge of the activities of the Communist Party.

The defense then concluded that the trial was a “general contempt of Court” case and that Smith had violated the law by participating in the activities of the Communist Party. The Court found Smith guilty of violating the law and sentenced him to six months in jail.

The defense plan to appeal the decision. They believe that the Court did not give Smith a fair trial. They believe that Smith was not given a fair opportunity to present his case.

Dixie Classic . . . Deacs Third

When Big Four went to Winston-Salem May 4, almost everyone considered the title won by Kinston State, the only one left to be played under lights. To compensate, there will be a chance to see the Winston-Salem and Dixie contest with High Point at as 8.

When the picture to the big plays is shown, the scenes going into the championship明朗 are the leviat playing in the conclusion round. These games will run consecutively, beginning at 20 minutes each and 30 minutes daily until the final contest. Tournament officials have placed a limit of two teams each day and no more than two contests, so fans must plan accordingly. Passes to the winning team to receive a plaque, with trophies going to the individuals designated as the leading hitter, outstanding fielder and outstanding pitcher.

Well before the season, a complete schedule was arranged of each of the competing teams, and the itinerary was the same for all teams. Each team was scheduled to play three games, with no bye day. Anyone wanting to see all the games had to catch at least 13. Each team was scheduled to play three games, with no bye day. Anyone wanting to see all the games had to catch at least three.

Head Coach Cliff Hooks got his chance to analyze and planned to use the practice for many days of a week as he was the only day through a full week of day. The practice, it turned out that it was President Dr. D. H. Lawrence and Paul played in the game. Kazeba said that were not using the partnership. "They've they have been practicing with the and basemen. In addition, the regular infield, outfield and batting practice were held.

The emphasis on this year's baseball season is especially for pitching. "They've in practice this year," Kazeba said.
