Alumnus presents Founders' Day address

by Marilyn Miller

John W. Chandler, president of Wake Forest College and former president of Wake Forest Baptist Medical Center, addressed a joint meeting of the Wake Forest Baptist Medical Center and the Wake Forest Alumni Association at the University's Founders' Day Convocation on Friday, Feb. 16 in Wait Chapel.

"The purpose of the celebration of Founders' Day is to remember the origin of our university," Chandler said. "We may be better prepared to deal with the problems of the future if we fully understand the problems of the present and the past."

Chandler said the most important thing he did during his term as president of Wake Forest College was to try to understand the people of Wake Forest and Wake Forest University's community. He said he enjoyed the relationships he built with students, faculty and staff.

The most important thing he learned during his tenure as president was that Wake Forest is a community of people who care about each other. He said he was proud of the way the community came together to support each other during difficult times.

Chandler said he was proud of the way Wake Forest has grown and changed over the years. He said he was impressed with the way the university has adapted to new challenges and opportunities.

Chandler said he was also proud of the way Wake Forest has continued to be a leader in higher education. He said he was impressed with the way the university has continued to attract top-notch students and faculty.

Chandler said he was also proud of the way Wake Forest has continued to be a leader in service to the community. He said he was impressed with the way the university has continued to work to improve the lives of people in the Winston-Salem area.

Chandler said he was also proud of the way Wake Forest has continued to be a leader in international service. He said he was impressed with the way the university has continued to send students and faculty to work and study in other countries.

Chandler said he was also proud of the way Wake Forest has continued to be a leader in athletics.

Planning and placement gear up for the job hunt

by Julie Treadwell

The Campus Life Committee and Placement and Placement, in cooperation with the Career Development Center, is gearing up for the spring career fair. To encourage students to find their ideal job, the Career Development Center encourages students to explore career possibilities and make informed choices. This fall, the Career Development Center will conduct a series of workshops on interviewing and resume building.

Once students have identified potential career opportunities, they will be provided with a variety of resources to help them explore these options. The Career Development Center will offer workshops on interviewing techniques, resume building, and networking strategies. Students will also have access to a variety of job postings and resources to help them identify potential job opportunities.

The Career Development Center will also be working closely with employers to ensure that students have the opportunity to learn about various industries and job roles. The Center will coordinate on-campus interviews and job fairs, as well as facilitate opportunities for students to network with professionals in their field of interest.

Overall, the Career Development Center is committed to helping students find their ideal job and prepare for a successful career. By offering a comprehensive range of resources and support, the Center aims to empower students to make informed decisions and achieve their career goals.
WEEK IN REVIEW

The first conscious memory many students have of subliminal persuasion probably revolves around a discussion held in a high school biology class (subliminal suggestion is that which relies on damage below the level of awareness). But, surprisingly, an experiment conducted by theเบาstlower Medical School has since demonstrated even though they can't be seen or heard consciously, they can still be absorbed into the subconscious, and, whether they are aware of the stimulation or not. Studies have been conducted on the influence of subliminal messages, but enough evidence exists today for the Federal Communications Commission to be considering using subliminal advertising over television programs.

Advertising, of course, they use even subliminal messages in their ads, despite rumors to the contrary. A great many sub-out and broadcast programs are being sold as subliminal connections between products and personal memory images. Cigarettes, cigars and other addictions and personal habits have long been used to subliminal advertising.

In a handbook for advertisers, the teachers at the Washington State University State, said, similar female ads were given against cigarettes in the future. In addition, larger, less noticeable changes are made to make a subject more involved in the message. This is especially true when he is working in the category of the same ad.

The ads that were brought to federal court under the True Ad Test by the Washington Post, the American Foundation of the Arts and Humanities, and more employees.

The computer program faster messages I can control to “I can stop smoking” across the screen at a rate of every 1.5 minutes. Smithson doesn’t plan any experiments testing the effectiveness of the program.

What we know today is that the brain is more and more the eyes and ears,” said William L. R. Peterson, “We have a good sense of the overall awareness of the body but not the details of what is going on.”

Artistic expression is an expression of this internal awareness. Aesthetics is a conscious form of internal awareness.

A dedication to alumni

Founders' Day 1986 is not just a time to celebrate the founders of Wake Forest, it is a time to recognize the growth of the university, and all those who have contributed to its success.

Most important to the development of Wake Forest is the fact that it is the result of the hard work and dedication of all those who have contributed to its growth. The founders' vision and ideals continue to support the university to this day. The university is a place for students, faculty and campus life in general.

A $250,000 goal for the College Fund was set by the Alumni Office last year. The Alumni Office set this goal in order to encourage students to contribute to the university's buildings, programs and other facilities. The Alumni Office set this goal in order to encourage students to contribute to the university's buildings, programs and other facilities.

Last weekend a conference of the Alumni Association, headed by William W. Summer, explained its desire to encourage students to contribute to the university's buildings, programs and other facilities. The Alumni Office set this goal in order to encourage students to contribute to the university's buildings, programs and other facilities.

If you are interested in learning more about the founders' day at Wake Forest, please contact the Alumni Office at 336-758-6000.

Letters to the Editor

Rouney plays Teller off

If there is one thing that can be learned from the founders' day at Wake Forest, it is that we are big trouble makers. The founders' day at Wake Forest, it is that we are big trouble makers. The founders' day at Wake Forest, it is that we are big trouble makers.

Partly to protect our national security, we have been told to avoidpillows for Wake Forest. But when we listened to our conversation with the founders' day at Wake Forest, it is that we are big trouble makers. The founders' day at Wake Forest, it is that we are big trouble makers.

We are all very happy that an extinct (and now extinct) volcano named Mount St. Helens has erupted. But we are also concerned about the potential for blowouts in our current national security. The founders' day at Wake Forest, it is that we are big trouble makers. The founders' day at Wake Forest, it is that we are big trouble makers.

Early this year, Professor John Pheil went to the coast of the United States and began his research on the foundations of our national security. Since that time, he has been working with the national security, and has been published in the national security.

In this world, the founders' day at Wake Forest, it is that we are big trouble makers. The founders' day at Wake Forest, it is that we are big trouble makers.

Expert discusses defense

Mike Schenker is on tour with his own band, the Michael Schenker Group, and he recently played and recorded with the Scorpions. This year's "Lavatory" album.

In 1979, the young guitarist decided to form his own group. Today, the Michael Schenker Group features two other talented musicians, and the band is said to be less of a driving force than essential element that is.

The advantage of defense is that it is less expensive than offense. Defenders must have more science and decision making to be successful than offense.

Guitar sound characterizes Schenker Group

Gary Barlow's MHS·s recent record, was used to leave and then return. Jackson's return to the group was even more energy and precision.

A great deal of fine guitar work is displayed by Michael Schenker Group, especially in such sets as the instrumental "Capricorn" and the splendid "Red Sky." Force is also an essential element that is emphasized in the song "The Dogs of War" and "Race the Storm." Furthermore, the album covers are eye-catching. The front cover features the striking break-up and reunion of the San Francisco band. The cover photo of "Expert discusses defense" and "Expert discusses defense" is also in the music magazine. The CD cover features the striking break-up and reunion of the San Francisco band.

Caricature, as an art form, captures all sides of subjects

By Jennifer Minkes

American Association of University Women is sponsoring the sixth annual Reynolda House program challenges students to explore their heritage. This year’s program is named “The two sides of the story: As two sides of the story.”

One student is Jennifer Millner, whose research for this project was based on the theme of “Diversity in America.” She chose to explore the experiences of African Americans in the South during the Reconstruction period.

A member of the program committee, Millner says, “I think it’s really important for us to look at the different perspectives of our history.”

Feminist challenges anthropology

As she examined the two sides of the story, Millner was struck by the contrast between the experiences of African Americans and other minority groups in the South.

She observed, “It was interesting to see how racism was prevalent in both groups, but in different ways.”

Another student, Sarah Lee, chose to explore the experiences of women during the same period. She discovered that women were also subjected to discrimination and prejudice.

Lee said, “Women were not given the same opportunities as men, and they faced many challenges.”

The program challenges students to understand the complexities of history and to think critically about the different perspectives on events.

The Blue Devils couldn't get past the Wake Forest defense last night, and the Warhawks escape with a thrilling 73-70 victory, their first in seven tries. The Wake Forest team was led by the All ACC Freshman, Mark Price, who scored 28 points and grabbed 11 rebounds. The Wake Forest team wore red uniforms, while the Blue Devils were in their traditional blue and white. The game was played in front of a capacity crowd of 14,000 fans at Cameron Indoor Stadium.

Wake Forest took the lead early and held it for the first half, leading 43-37 at the half. But in the second half, the Blue Devils came back to trail by only seven points, 66-59, with seven minutes left in the game. The Blue Devils were led by their star player, Charlie Patterson, who scored 22 points and grabbed 12 rebounds. The Blue Devils were nestled within range of the basket, but they couldn't get past the Wake Forest defense.

In overtime, both teams played with the ball, but it was Wake Forest that emerged victorious. The Wake Forest team scored 13 points in overtime, while the Blue Devils scored only seven. McQueen relives exciting past RALEIGH - When Coast McQueen, N.C. State's 11-year-old center, became a member of the last all in wake and reflect, he readily admitted that his life for the past couple of years has been exciting and exhilarating.

"Delightful," he said. "There aren't many people who can say they've played for a national championship team or played college basketball all over the country, getting to make it to the NCAA."

This past season, McQueen, who was just 11 years old, stepped into the spotlight as a junior varsity player for the Wolfpack. He became a household name when he led his team to victory over the championship. McQueen's journey to the NCAA is a testament to his hard work and dedication.

Oustanding Frosh leads women's team

Ansonia junior forwards Marcia Gingles and Margie Gardner lead the Lady Deacons' basketball team to national prominence. Gingles, a 6-3 forward, was named to the All-American first team last season, while Gardner, a 5-10 guard, was named to the All-American second team.

Gingles, who finished her first season at Wake Forest with a perfect 1.0 grade point average, was not as heavily recruited as many of her fellow freshmen in the ACC. But as quickly as the junior forward in the North Carolina State University's starting lineup showed her prowess on the court, she showed her poise off the court.

"I guess I'm like any other college kid," she said. "When I first enrolled at Wake Forest, I was nervous about meeting new people and adjusting to my new surroundings. But I was surprised by how welcoming everyone was. I quickly learned that the ACC is a tight-knit community where everyone supports each other.

Gardner, on the other hand, was a more reserved individual. She had only played on the junior varsity team for the past two seasons and had not received much recognition for her basketball abilities.

"I was nervous about playing against the ACC schools," Gardner said. "But when I got here, everyone was so supportive. They encouraged me to be myself and helped me feel comfortable.

Despite their different backgrounds, Gingles and Gardner became close friends on the court and off it. They shared the same goal: to make a difference in the ACC and prove that freshmen can have a significant impact on the game.

"Gardner and I are very similar in many ways," Gingles said. "We both enjoy playing defense and have a strong work ethic. But we also have our own unique strengths that we bring to the table. I think that's why we complement each other so well on the court.

The Lady Deacons are off to a strong start this season, winning their first two games. Gingles and Gardner have been instrumental in their team's success, with Gardner leading the team in scoring and Gingles providing a strong presence on defense.

"We're excited to be a part of this young but talented team," Gardner said. "We're looking forward to playing against some of the best teams in the country and proving that we can compete at the highest level.

Gardner and Gingles are not the only freshmen on the team who are making an impact. The Lady Deacons have five other freshman on their roster, including 6-4 forward Jennifer Collins and 5-8 guard, Sherry Jones.

"The Lady Deacons are young, but we have a lot of potential," Head Coach Cokie Goble said. "We're not a typical freshman team, and I'm sure we'll make a name for ourselves in the ACC.

Fire breaks out in dormitory

By Alan Brown

Engine Company No. 5 responded to the alarm in Davis House around 10:30 p.m. on Wednesday. The firemen were summoned when a mysterious fire broke out in David.

Janie Benkoff and the resident advisor Kevin Burket were both in the room when the fire broke out. Kevin, who was asleep at the time, was awakened by Benkoff's yell. The resident advisor, who had been asleep in her room, was not aware of any sounds resembling that of a fire until she gathered her things and ran through the hallway to call the fire department.

Object of confusion was the fire department. "The water main's not out yet in the fire, which started coming out of the dormitory in the hall," said Kevin. "It's true the water main is out, but the fire department could not reach the fire because there were too many obstacles in the way."

After several attempts to extinguish the blaze failed, an M.A. hand-pumped the fire department in the second floor of the dormitory to assist in efforts to control the fire.

For several years, Kevin had been attending classes in the hall. In one of the dormitory rooms, Kevin said, her room was not much different from a dormitory room. The fire department and their "service" had been known to Kevin as a child.

President of Williams College gives Founders' Day address

The emphasis on volunteerism in college curricula and the view of a liberal education as a means to the end of self- actualization has been reflected increasingly in the curricula of the college.

Perhaps the most basic outgrowth of this direction is the development of educational endeavors on a campus, which serve as a model for the larger society.

In his remarks, President Robert D. French said, "We learn from the college experience how to develop our own capacities to meet the moral, intellectual, and aesthetic challenges of our society."
