Business school strives for international scope

by Ginger Duffy

In response to the growing needs and concerns of the U.S. economy in meeting unique competitive challenges in the international market, the Wake Forest business school will become an international campus for students and faculty.

The initiative is the brainchild of the Wake Forest business school, which was initiated by the American Assembly of Colleges of Business in its accreditation requirements.

In an April 1987 address to the Wake Forest business faculty, chairman and professor of economics George A. Meister said: “The international economy is changing and our business schools have an obligation to prepare students to compete.”

Meister said the college/National Business School will be a joint venture of the National Business School and the Wake Forest business school.

The agreement will be a partnership between the two institutions, he said. The purpose of the partnership is to provide a broader range of opportunities for students and faculty.

Cultures lure Petreman

From childhood to the present, foreign languages have had a special fascination for Petreman, the interim director of Latin America and World Languages at Wake Forest University. Petreman's interest began at a young age. Born in the Dominican Republic, Petreman's family lived in the United States when he was a child, and he was exposed to both Spanish and English.

Attending public school in Winston-Salem, Petreman immersed himself in the Spanish-speaking culture. He credits his parents for encouraging him to study languages, and he continues to excel in his foreign language coursework.

In 1975, Petreman entered Wake Forest University as a freshman, and he quickly became interested in the Latin American Studies program. He credits the program with shaping his future career.

Petreman's interest in Latin American studies continued after college, and he pursued graduate studies in the field. He received his master's degree from the University of Wisconsin-Madison in 1980 and his doctorate from Rice University in 1984.

Petreman's research focuses on the political and social issues of Latin America, and he has published numerous articles and books on the region. He is currently working on a book about the role of the United States in Latin America.

Petreman's expertise in Latin American studies has led to numerous opportunities, including teaching positions at the university level and a number of international assignments. He has taught courses in Latin American history, politics, and economics, and he has also worked as a consultant for various organizations.

Petreman's dedication to the field of Latin American studies has been recognized with numerous awards, including the Outstanding Alumnus Award from Wake Forest University in 2000 and the Distinguished Service Award from the Latin American Studies Association in 2010.

Petreman's contributions to the field of Latin American studies have earned him respect and admiration from his colleagues and students alike. His expertise and passion for the region continue to inspire and educate future generations of Latin American Studies scholars.
Music lovers applied for prestige

by Josephine Serrall

The Gewandhaus Orchestra of Leipzig, with a German conductor and an existing German orchestra, have a meritorious program of concerts in the United States. Leave from East Germany for an American tour, the Gewandhaus orchestra is on the level of the Berlin Philharmonic in the artistic, technical, and financial sense. Various critics have praised the Gewandhaus Orchestra as a truly international orchestra, and this tour is no exception. In addition, the Gewandhaus has been invited to participate in a festival in the United States.

A standing ovation followed the premiere Gewandhaus Orchestra of Leipzig on Nov. 1, at the Civic Auditorium. The performance was part of the 1985-86 season.

Survey offers change for change

The political and budgetary pressure on Wake Forest University's administration to conduct a survey of student life has reached its summit. The desire for change and the demand for the survey have not been met. The survey is due to be conducted by the Administration, but the results will not be released until the end of the year. The survey was conducted by the Student Body Association (SBA) in 1965, and the results were published in the Wake Forest Student.
Shagging made easy

I still have nightmares of my first encounter with shagging. There I was, a naive, northern high school senior. Shagging was the rage. For two years, I'd heard that the popular girl across the hall was the queen of shagging and that all the wise and popular people would be at her meetings. Being a high school senior and wanting to be popular, I felt I had to go. So I went. It was a fiasco. I had never seen a shagging party before and was completely unprepared. I didn't even know what to expect. I was there, but I didn't know how to participate. I didn't know how to talk to the people who were there. I didn't know how to even stay awake.

In the beginning, the shagging party was chaotic. People were dancing, laughing, and having a great time. But as the night went on, the atmosphere changed. The room became more intimate, and the conversation turned to serious topics. I didn't know what to say, so I just listened. But I still felt like an outsider. I didn't know anything about shagging and didn't know how to fit in.

The next time I went to a shagging party, I was more prepared. I had seen it before, and I knew what to expect. I was more confident and knew how to talk to the people there. I still felt like an outsider, but I didn't feel as uncomfortable. I was able to enjoy the party and have a good time.

The last shagging party I went to was the best. I had seen it all before, and I knew what to expect. I was able to have a good time and enjoy the party.

NCAA penalizes teams

Clemson reached the 1973 College World Series, but 121 points of eligibility were deleted from 24 athletes. The penalty, announced Monday, is a result of a suit filed by the university in 1983. The suit was dismissed in 1984 after the university reached a settlement with the NCAA.

The University of Southern California is one school that has been penalized by the NCAA for cracking down on ineligible athletes. The school was penalized in 1985 for using ineligible athletes in its football program.

The NCAA is expanding its enforcement of eligibility rules in an effort to keep ineligible athletes from participating in the sport.

The NCAA issued a statement Monday indicating that it will continue to crack down on ineligible athletes.

The NCAA is also considering implementing a new rule that would allow schools to keep ineligible athletes off the field.

The NCAA's penalty system is designed to keep ineligible athletes off the field and to ensure that athletes are eligible to compete.

The NCAA has also announced that it will increase its enforcement of eligibility rules in the future.

Nuclear arms

Take a closer look

The nuclear arms race is one of the most controversial issues of our time. It is a subject that is often discussed in academic circles, but not in everyday conversations. The nuclear arms race is a complex issue that involves politics, economics, and military strategy. It is a subject that is often overlooked, but it is important to understand the nuclear arms race in order to make informed decisions.

The nuclear arms race is a race to build more and more nuclear weapons. The goal of the nuclear arms race is to gain an advantage over other countries. The nuclear arms race is a very dangerous and unstable situation.

Church involvement enriches academics

by Nancy Miller

Several religion majors are exploring the academic and practical aspects of religion. They not only study the ideas of religion but are also involved in its religious practices.

Robert Miller, a junior from Salisbury, was considering going into religion. He said, "I believe it is important to study religion because it is a part of our daily lives." Miller is a member of several religious organizations, including the Baptist Student Union and the local chapter of the Southern Baptist Convention.

Miller also participates in religious activities, such as attending worship services and participating in religious discussions. He said, "I believe it is important to be involved in religious activities because it helps me to understand the beliefs and practices of others." Cross Country

Recruiting aids team

The men's cross-country team has had a successful season, and the women's team has emerged as a national contender in the years. The women's team improved also, although not a national power with some exceptions. Last summer Thomas landed two state champions who are now two of the top three on the team. Both are seniors. Their names are Debbie Wortman and Shannon Miller.

The team went to regionals in cross-country, Ohio, and State, with both state champ state champ in cross country, team AA, and State, state champ, class AA.

The team won the meet last weekend with a second-place finish.

Interest grows in women's program

The women's cross-country program at Wake Forest was practically nonexistent before Ramsey Thomas took over. The team was improved to the point that the runners have been invited to a full team (seven runners) meets. That has Thomas landed on the all-around. His program and philosophy have attracted many runners to the school and the women's program is on the rise.

With the men, the major reasons the team has improved are better training programs and the academic reputation of Wake Forest. Andrew Jones, coach of the team, said, "If you come to Wake Forest to be an athlete, you have to be a good student also. Our academics is really strong."

Thomas explained, "We are not going to have a lot of the same runners coming out of high school this year. We have improved our recruiting in the last two years. During the last two decades, theDiscuss Thomas took over as coach in 1978. Thomas has improved the men's team and the women's team to national power with some exceptions. Thomas guides runners

Cross-country and track coach Ramsey Thomas has been involved with running for a long period of time. In the mid-1970s, Thomas was involved in track and cross-country at the college level. Thomas has since become a prominent figure in the sport of running, and his influence has been significant in the development of cross-country and track programs at Wake Forest.

Thomas has guided the women's cross-country program at Wake Forest to national prominence. His team has consistently placed in the top ten at national championships, and he has developed several top runners.

Thomas has been recognized for his work, receiving numerous awards and honors. He has also been a vocal advocate for running and for the sport of track and field.

In addition to his work at Wake Forest, Thomas has been involved in various other aspects of the sport, including coaching, writing, and speaking. He has also been an active member of various running organizations, such as the American Track League and the National Wrestling Association.

His dedication and passion for the sport have earned him the respect and admiration of his peers and his students. His influence has been significant in the development of cross-country and track programs at Wake Forest, and he continues to be a leader in the sport.
Harriers drawn by academics and coach

Wake Forest's academic reputation, coupled with coach Ray Ramsey, has drawn many of the school's freshmen. Several freshmen, including George Nicholas, Chris Davison, and Robb Raisbeck, are among the team's high school All-Americans, and they have been recruited and chosen. Wake ForestBecause of Ramsey's running program and the academic reputation of the school.

"It helped me a lot to see Wake Forest because of Ramsey," Nicholas said. "His running philosophy and his enthusiasm. I have a lot of respect for the way he runs.

Raisbeck, a freshman from Barrington, New Jersey, had an excellent high school track season. He decided to come to Wake Forest because of the academics, among Wurster's combination of academics and the attitude of the coach.

"I came to Wake Forest mainly for its academic reputation," Raisbeck said. "I had heard about the running program, but I was more interested in the academics." He also liked the idea of being a small school and the team run seriously since high school.

Wurster, a senior in high school, had also liked the team and the opportunity to perform in high school. He was looking for a small school and academics. "I knew I wanted to be a history major and academics," he said. "I was looking for a small school and academics for my interest in the school because by senior year, it's all about academics," he said.

Ramsey convinced him basically because he was interested in Wake Forest record for the state and the state champ for the two mile in track.

"We went to the top schools and we decided to come to Wake Forest," Ramsey said. "It was a combination of the running program and the academics," he said. "I was looking for a small school and academics. I was interested in the academics and the philosophy of Ramsey."

The team's top four runners are in the top four finishers in the state. They will be the top runners in the state.

The team includes senior Scott Newton; junior Herb Johnson-set an example to the rest of the team. They are drawing a lot of interest from the other freshmen.

"It was a combination of the running program and the academics," he said. "I was looking for a small school and academics. I was interested in the academics and the philosophy of Ramsey."
