Baptist Group Suggests Wake For Seminary

A Committee of Fifteen, appointed last week by the Baptist Convention of North Carolina, submitted a proposal today in which they recommended that the present campus be reorganized and that the new Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, under the proposed Reynolds site in Winston Salem, be moved to Wake Forest. The report states that Wake Forest has been in existence for nearly a hundred years, and that it is one of the oldest educational institutions in the state.

For many years, the Baptist Convention of North Carolina has been considering the possibility of establishing a new seminary. They have been aware of the need for an expansion of theological education in the state and have been concerned about the quality of theological education being offered.

The committee believes that the new seminary would be an asset to the state and would help to meet the growing demand for theological education. They also believe that the new seminary would be a valuable resource for the Baptist churches in the state.

The committee’s report is the result of careful consideration and deliberation. They have taken into account the needs of the churches, the lack of theological education in the state, and the need for a quality seminary.

The committee recommends that the new seminary be established as soon as possible. They believe that this will be a major step forward in the development of theological education in the state.

The report includes a number of recommendations for the new seminary. These include:

- The site of the new seminary should be in Winston Salem.
- The seminary should be affiliated with the Southern Baptist Convention.
- The seminary should be established as a separate institution.
- The seminary should be supported by the Baptist churches in the state.

The committee’s report is a major step forward in the development of theological education in the state. It is hoped that the recommendations will be taken seriously and that the new seminary will be established as soon as possible.

Wake Forest Seminary

Last March, when a Committee of Fifteen charged by the State Baptist Convention to study the present seminary system of the present Wake Forest campus and its buildings met for the first time, this column stated in part: "OLD GOLD AND BLACK will not go on res-art at this time as supporting one or . . . plans. We welcome the opportunity to picture study a then and now the fall when the suggestion will be great in the campus and to preface the national Baptist Conven-
We do say, however, that the minds of hands this matter will remain what Wake Forest is to many. It means a great many years. Most of these must know and love Wake Forest.

"So when the Wake Forest College we know steps to another place to be of broader service is to say as much as we can say as much as we say, we beg that they will place here what they will use will bear as an unshaken tradition of service the service of carrying the light of learning into minds in which, be-development of the campus.

"We said, then, to this recommendation that the present plant be turned into a theological seminary upon the removal of the academic schools to Winston-Salem, several things may be said:

- In the first place, as the Reverend Mr. Cates of Asheville pointed out in his address fact that the party is in the minority does not matter.
- In the second, the campus will be an ideal place for the development of the religious life of the community.
- In the third, the students will be better centered in the religious and the moral life of the community.
- In the fourth, the students will be better educated in the religious and moral life of the community.
- In the fifth, the students will be better educated in the religious and moral life of the community.
- In the sixth, the students will be better educated in the religious and moral life of the community.

In conclusion, we must say that the Wake Forest College has been a real handicap, in the long view, to the students of the university. It has been a real handicap, in the long view, to the students of the university. It has been a real handicap, in the long view, to the students of the university. Orientation For Coed Freshmen Now Underway

An unpublicized feature of the fall orientation program has been the series of meetings that have been held for the Women's Government Association to acquaint them with their duties and responsibilities and to teach them practical college life. Under the able and competent guidance of Gladys T. Reeder, Director of Women's Government, the freshmen and transfers were given a practical guide to their responsibilities under the rules for campus coeds. The meeting was held Wednesday night in Room 11 of Old Main.

The first meeting is scheduled to be held on Friday evening, Oct. 9, at the President's House, and the members are expected to be present.
