Huffman Coed Plan Receives Approval

By SCOTT PREODERUS

Huffman Dormitory will become a coed dormitory in 1986 as a result of a proposal made by the Huffman Dormitory Resident Council.

The proposal, drawn up by Huffman RAs Ian and Doug Graham, was presented to the council in October and was approved by the council.

Coeducational and Theme Housing Will Expand

By SCOTT PRETORIUS

A survey on alternate housing patterns con­ducted by the Student Governance Housing Com­mittee and the Student Life Council has Inter­estingly, it is often preferred by Wake Forest students that dorms be single-sex.

In an attempt to increase housing variety, those two options and a coeducational option — will be available to students returning next fall. There will be no return to the single-sex dorms.

The new ride board is currently located in the hallway near the Snack Shop, which is next to the fall of 1983 and consisted of six students. Recently, the Committee on Committees interviewed 15 candi­dates who had applied to fill four vacancies in the legislature. The new legislature includes four women, including Charles Campbell, Brian Croft, Andrea Gilgoff, Thomas Johnson, Dan McClellan, Paul Mitchell, and Kurt Wooten. Those three women were interviewed by the legislature last Thursday.

The new ride board is located in the hallway near the Snack Shop. It was installed in an effort to meet the needs of the many students who offer or seek rides each evening, who particularly part of the community.

SG Notes

The Ad-Hoc Committee on the House Problem will continue its work during the Spring semester, reviewing the present system and making possible changes. This committee is dealing strictly with the core curriculum and will exist in South Hall, in the Fine Arts Building, and in the Residential Commons.

The committee is working on their proposal to the resident advisor. They have not decided on what their final proposal will be.

CAMP THUNDERBIRD

Excellent summer counseling opportunities for men and women who are interested in serving boys and girls ages 7-14, guiding them in various recreational activities, helping them develop a basic understanding of a college education, and sharing their love of the great outdoors. CAMP THUNDERBIRD is located 17 miles southeast of Charlotte, N.C., on 1,500 acres surrounded by some of North Carolina's most beautiful mountain peaks. The facilities include 2 lakes, 2 pools (swimming, water skiing, and canoeing), and an added emphasis is made on a camp-wide religious emphasis (several opportunities for prayer, worship and backrouding). Horseback riding, water-white canoeing and traping are extras in our excellent program.

A Racist and Out-of-Taste Joke

Last week's editorial page carried an article by Tina Montgomery about the new program that makes it possible for minority students to attend Wake Forest. While we appreciate the effort to focus on university diversity, we believe that the program described has certain flaws.

First, it is a bit strange to call a program that makes top universities accessible to minorities the "new program." It seems like a program that's been around for 100 years.

Second, the program's description lacks the substance necessary to back it up. The term "minority" is too broad for anything to be done with it.

Third, the program's emphasis on athletic scholarships is a bit too much of a good thing. It seems like we're trying to make a pun about Wake Forest's athletic program.

Fourth, the program's emphasis on athletic scholarships is not enough to make it a true minority program. It seems like we're trying to make a pun about Wake Forest's athletic program.

Finally, the program's emphasis on athletic scholarships is a bit too much of a good thing. It seems like we're trying to make a pun about Wake Forest's athletic program.

In conclusion, we believe that the program described by Tina Montgomery is in need of some major improvements to make it a true minority program. It seems like we're trying to make a pun about Wake Forest's athletic program.

The art exhibition contains the first, the Visiting Fine Arts Faculty Gallery for just two more weeks until the end of the first quarter. This exhibit of work by the art faculty and staff of the art department will no doubt encourage members equally as it is enjoyed by the instrument masterful output in a non-classroom setting. Just as our professors are expected to regularly publish in addition to fulfilling their teaching obligations, the studio instructors must render substantial amounts of time and energy to creating and showing their personal art. It is the quality of work this show is in disarray, these seven artists have an obligation and the demands of their dual role of instructor-craftsman. Clark offers such a great variety of media and styles that it is impossible to discuss even one. A second or third visit is required to view the entire sculpture, photography and drawings on display. For this first article the work of Gary Cook, Deborah Fanelli and Robert Knott will be featured. As the notice contains recent work, few students will be covered.

unting among the gallery, Cook's large colorful monotypes are the first to immediately having reset his M.F.A. from Northern Illinois University, Cook displays a mastery of technique. His very patently self-portrait opens an unseen emotional chord. His oval shapes have been equally inked as week of energy and the demands of the augmenting physical. He views the geometry or "puzzle box" containing as a need with Energy that seems to be giving up. Poor Work, "Sentient Guardian." This is a witty play by Gary Cook (left) is in the main gallery, and another sculpture by Deborah Fanelli in the upper tilt.

"Isn't It Romantic" Opens Main Stage

By SUSAN COBB

The Wake Forest University Theatre will open the Main Stage of the Davis Fine Arts Center this week with the contemporary comedy "Isn't It Romantic?". Performances are Tuesday, February 14 through 16 and 19 through 22 in the Davis Center's 650-seat main stage. Curtain time is 8 p.m. for each performance. "Isn't It Romantic?" is a witty play that explores the contemporary man's fear of commitment, especially those of women. The plot concerns on Janie Blumberg and her best friend, Harriet Cornwall. Both continue to juggle careers, marriages and their boyfriends. Humorously connected as ing groups of female playwrights and their boyfriends, the play delves into the nature of subconscious symbols and forms that seem to be giving up. Poor Work, "Sentient Guardian." This is a witty play by Gary Cook (left) is in the main gallery, and another sculpture by Deborah Fanelli in the upper tilt.

The exhibition offers such a great variety of media and styles that a cursory walk-through does no justice to its range. A second or third visit is required to view the energetic sense. Richard Gere, is at times excellent and David Carradine and Barbara Hershey are superb and their performances are, for the most part, very good.

John had not come to the Great City to handle power and marriage at the same time. Christie is compassionate and his dealings with four major clients, as well as his relationship with a successful journalist who works for opposing candidates we see in the film, are the latest of gorgeous women in Lumet's movies who are to be reckoned with.

For every $1 the over-65 voter earns, $2 is deducted from his Social Security benefits. On top of that, he must continue to pay federal income taxes. This means a $1,000 income tax bill may cost him $2,000.

George Washington's decision as a young man made him seemingly that he would one day bring enough to address a significant problem. He suffered from smallpox, jaundice, epilepsy, and injury, all before he was 30. On his way back from the French en- velopage to the French Fort Lord, he fell off his horse on a trail and nearly died.

Meanwhile, the case seemed to be making some headway, but the song matches that of a human heart. Maybe a country needs a little more soul and simplicity basic as the song once was. John claims anyone who is even remotely interested in politics should never miss "Power." He should have a fan of Richard Gere. It is really a very good film which is highly enjoyable and delivers a message which is brilliantly relevant in a major election year.

It is far from fine acting and interesting plot, but remember another effort of Sidney Lumet to keep our eyes open to the political risk which lies in the main characters. Flat, even melodramatic, the average voter.

Chris Christie and Capshaw are the latest of gorgeous women in Lumet's movies who are to be reckoned with. Christie is compassionate and dimensional and his cast is superb. The film revolves around St. John and his dealings with four major clients, as well as his relationship with Buckely and his niece. St. John is a calculated "Parisian" who can be bought to serve a price or interest in the beginning gradually transferred into a more caring person with the experience and old friends who has been found from the Senate by corpulent executives.

As usual, it seems fairly well that politicians are partially manipulated by business interests and scolded by media and public relations experts. However, this film takes when St. John, a hugely successful media consultant who previously fell by the wayside when his wife, a successful journalist who worked for opposing candidates was working for opposing candidates, is working for opposing candidates.

Mark Clino, who has been in a shooting slump of late, tries to shoot out of it against East Carolina.

The Twelfth Shot at 6:59 mark is the first foul. Wake Forest scored an unanswered point to go ahead 14-10 with 11:20 left. They held a 34-14 edge with 5:35 remaining.

Tech answered with a two-point shot of the own to cut the lead 24-22 at the 4:09 mark. They would hold the lead until 11 seconds remained in the half, when baskets by Coles and Stokes erased a Lady Jacket lead and gave the Demon- 10-9 advantage at halftime.

Tech scored the first two second hand points to widen the lead 36-30 after 30 seconds. Wake Forest scored the next eight points to go back in front for good at 44-38 at the 16:40 mark.

After a Career score net the margin to 15-10 with 5:40 remaining, the Lady Jackets narrowed the gap at 24-15 at the 10:30 mark. The Demon then went on 31-10 point wave, which culminated with a Carla basket with 7:30 remaining to make the score 51-30.

Tech's bid failed four straight points to narrow the gap to 65-60 with 0:27 remaining. It was the last time the Lady Jackets would come in the contest.
