Leake and Reece receive promotions

By Paige Pettyjohn

In a recent visibility policy statement, the Wake Forest administration said that the institution would be more proactive in its promotion of its own work. The statement was presented at the Student Faculty Forum on Wednesday, October 26.

The goal of the new policy is to increase the visibility of Wake Forest on both the national and international stages.

The move comes as the university seeks to increase its prominence in the educational and research fields. The policy is intended to help the university achieve this goal by increasing its visibility and by promoting its work to a wider audience.

The policy states that the university will actively promote its work, including its research, teaching, and service initiatives. The policy also calls for the establishment of a new institutional research office to help coordinate and manage the university's research efforts.

The policy is the result of a year-long review of the university's visibility efforts. The review was conducted by a committee of faculty and staff members, and it was supported by a grant from the National Science Foundation.

The policy is expected to be implemented over the next few years. The university plans to begin by improving its website and social media presence. It also plans to increase its outreach efforts to the media and to the public.

The policy is expected to have a significant impact on the university's visibility. The university's leaders are optimistic that the policy will help the university achieve its goal of becoming a leading institution in the educational and research fields.

The policy is expected to be reviewed annually to ensure that it remains relevant and effective. The university plans to make adjustments as needed to ensure that the policy continues to meet the needs of the institution.

The policy is the result of a collaborative effort between the university's administration and faculty members. The policy is intended to be a reflection of the university's values and goals, and it is designed to help the university achieve its mission.

The policy is expected to benefit the university in a number of ways. The policy is expected to help the university attract more students, faculty, and funding. It is also expected to help the university improve its reputation and to enhance its standing in the academic community.

The policy is a significant step forward for the university. The university's leaders are committed to implementing the policy and to achieving its goals.

The policy is expected to be a model for other institutions of higher education. The university's leaders are confident that the policy will be successful and that it will help the university achieve its goals.

The Sesquicentennial celebration of the College was observed with speeches, concerts, and the public display of the history of the university. The opening event was a dedication service held in the chapel, the concert was in the McKeldin Union, and the history display was in the History Museum.

The student government, under the direction of Peter Penne, presented an impressive musical performance at the dedication service. The program included a variety of musical numbers, featuring performances by the Towson College choirs and the Towson College Band.

The concert, as planned by university planners as a feature of the Sesquicentennial, was a success. It was well attended and received high praise from the audience.

Study presents goals

The purpose of the study was to determine the effectiveness of a particular program and to evaluate the goals of the university. The results of the study indicated that the goals of the university were being met and that the program was effective.

In the future, the university plans to continue to focus on the goals of the study and to develop new programs that will further the goals of the university.

Revised sociology rush schedule pleases all

The revised sociology rush schedule was met with approval by all Rush Committee members. The new schedule allowed for more flexibility and better coverage of the Rush Committee's needs.

Visitation policy favored

The new visitation policy was approved by the Student Life Committee and is now in effect. The policy is designed to better serve the needs of the students and the university.

Full week planned

The three exhibits contribute to the celebration during the week of April 12-18. The Kunz Lecture will be held on Monday, April 12, in Civic Center. The Huntington Medieval Manuscript competition is scheduled for Wednesday, April 14, in the Fine Arts Center. The Lan-der University Exhibition opened on Friday, April 16, in the Fine Arts Center. The exhibit continues through Sunday, April 18.

The display commemorates President Pott's progressive contributions to the science field, particularly in the area of measurement. President Pott's appointment was approved by the Board of Trustees.

The Supreme Court to decide on draft/aide legality

The controversy between Amendment, named for speaker Howard Amm (R-Utah), will be decided first on the floor before the Senate. The bill, proposing to end selective service, has been cleared by the Senate and now goes to the House of Representatives.

The bill, moving forward, is said to be a response to the third of four consecutive years in which both chambers have rejected a similar version. The House, however, has passed similar bills in previous years.

The bill would make the draft a voluntary program. The Selective Service System would be replaced by a system of conscription. The bill would also authorize a draft lottery, which would be established by the President in consultation with Congress.

In the world...

The United Nations in New York is holding its annual General Assembly meetings. The theme of this year's meeting is "Peace and Development in the Twenty-First Century: Building a Global Partnership for2000 and Beyond."

The assembly's agenda includes a number of important issues, including human rights, disarmament, and peacekeeping.

A new report by the United Nations Human Rights Council states that the number of deaths in armed conflicts and other situations of violence has increased in recent years. The report also highlights the need to improve the protection of civilians in situations of armed conflict.

The United Nations Security Council is expected to discuss the situation in Syria, where a military coup has taken place. The council has been criticized for not taking stronger action to prevent the coup.

The United States and Russia have agreed to reduce their nuclear arsenals as part of a new disarmament treaty. The treaty, known as the Intermediate-Range Nuclear Forces (INF) Treaty, was signed in 1987 and entered into force in 1988.

The treaty prohibits the development, production, and deployment of intermediate-range nuclear forces in Europe. It also requires both sides to destroy their existing forces and prevent the development of new weapons.

The treaty is considered a major step in reducing the risk of nuclear war and promoting stability in Europe. Its implementation has been controversial, however, with some countries arguing that it favors one side over the other.

The treaty is set to expire in 2020, and negotiations are currently underway to extend or replace it. The United States and Russia are both expected to participate in these discussions.

A new report by the United Nations Arms Control Association states that the world is facing a new arms race, with more countries developing nuclear weapons and increasing their defense budgets.

The report calls for a renewed commitment to non-proliferation and disarmament, and for greater efforts to reduce the global stockpile of nuclear weapons. It also highlights the need for stronger international cooperation to prevent the spread of nuclear technology and materials.

A new report by the United Nations Development Programme states that poverty and inequality remain major challenges in many parts of the world. The report calls for increased investments in education, healthcare, and infrastructure to support development.

The report highlights the need for greater support for small-scale farmers and rural economies, as well as for more effective international cooperation to address global challenges such as climate change and migration.

A new report by the United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF) states that 25 million children under the age of five die each year from preventable diseases. The report calls for increased investment in health care and education to reduce childhood mortality.

The report highlights the need for greater efforts to address the root causes of childhood mortality, including poverty, malnutrition, and lack of access to clean water and sanitation.

A new report by the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights states that human rights violations remain widespread in many parts of the world.

The report highlights the need for greater accountability and justice for victims of human rights abuses, and for greater efforts to prevent and address these violations.

A new report by the United Nations Special Rapporteur on the right to food states that food insecurity remains a major challenge in many parts of the world.

The report calls for increased investment in agriculture and food production, as well as for greater efforts to protect the rights of small-scale farmers and workers in the food sector.

A new report by the United Nations Special Rapporteur on the right to housing states that housing insecurity remains a major challenge in many parts of the world.

The report calls for increased investment in affordable housing, as well as for greater efforts to protect the rights of tenants and homeowners, and to address the root causes of housing insecurity.

A new report by the United Nations Special Rapporteur on the right to work states that unemployment and underemployment remain major challenges in many parts of the world.

The report calls for increased investment in education and training, as well as for greater efforts to promote economic growth and create job opportunities.

A new report by the United Nations Special Rapporteur on the right to freedom of expression states that freedom of expression remains a major challenge in many parts of the world.

The report calls for increased protection of journalists and other media workers, as well as for greater efforts to promote media freedom and diversity.

A new report by the United Nations Special Rapporteur on the right to peaceful assembly and association states that these rights remain under threat in many parts of the world.

The report calls for increased protection of public safety and civil society organizations, as well as for greater efforts to promote the rights to freedom of assembly and association.
Visitation policy

Silence no longer...majority speaks out

The improved security involves not only that the RA's have to spend more time playing with the new megaphone and slotting a guard at the front of the building, but also that the RA's are kept busy at their jobs. The change in policy, more important to some members of the student body, is that the RA's are now able to sit in on the classes that they have chosen. It is not clear whether or not the RA's have the same idea of freedom of speech as the students, but it is clear that the RA's have a new job.

The most overwhelming question that is greater visibility will stimulate students to achieve the social maturity that a liberal arts education should produce. It is clear that the present visitation policy may change the student's perception of the university.

Studying or socializing in any real sense would be a problem. This is a great loss of education to the university, as a single word. Maybe that's why they never need to commit themselves to being at every basketball game, and always change the door may get you a date with the guy/girl of your dreams one day. OPINION/EDITORIAL
1984 presidential election

"Why vote?"

"Why Reagan?"

We'll get to the jobs, the economy, the need to spend more on defense and have more influence in the world. But what about the reasons we should vote and who we should vote for?

There are many ways to look at the presidential election. It can be viewed as a choice between two candidates who each represent different visions for the country. It can be seen as a referendum on the performance of the current administration, or as an opportunity to express support for the Democratic Party.

Regardless of the specific reasons for choosing a candidate, it is important to remember that our vote is a powerful tool for shaping the future of our country. By voting, we have the opportunity to support policies and candidates who align with our values and beliefs.

I encourage everyone to cast their vote in the upcoming election, and to do so by making an informed decision based on a careful consideration of the candidates and their platforms.
Reports lists highest quality universities

Washington and Lee University in Lexington, Va., drew 4.5 percent of the votes to top the annual rankings of the colleges, and Union College in Schenectady, N.Y. received 4.7 percent of the top vote for the second place. The final vote was divided between the other five institutions, but they did not receive more than 3 percent of the top vote for any place.

The top five vote-getters in the annual rankings are:
1. Washington and Lee University in Lexington, Va., drew 4.5 percent of the votes to top the annual rankings of the colleges, and
2. Union College in Schenectady, N.Y. received 4.7 percent of the top vote for the second place.
3. Amherst College in Amherst, Mass., received 3.8 percent of the top vote for the third place.
4. Williams College in Williamstown, Mass., received 3.6 percent of the top vote for the fourth place.
5. Amherst College in Amherst, Mass., received 3.5 percent of the top vote for the fifth place.

These schools were selected for their comprehensive curriculums, prominent undergraduate liberal education offerings, and limited professional programs. They were also selected because they offer quality in all areas of study, from the humanities to the sciences, and because they maintain a high level of academic rigor.

The rankings are compiled from the annual surveys of presidents of the nation's liberal arts colleges, who are asked to rate their institutions on a scale of 1 to 5, with 5 being the highest rating. The rankings are then compiled and published in the annual edition of "The College Guide," which is produced by the National Association of Independent Colleges and Universities.

The rankings are used by students and their families to help them choose the right college for their needs. The rankings are also used by colleges to help them improve their programs and to attract new students.

It turned out to be a long night for Wake Forest in Chapel Hill Wednesday night as the Deacons never got comfortable in losing to North Carolina, 72-71 in overtime.

While it was the exciting and intense basketball game I've had the opportunity to cover," said Wake Forest's Bob Workman. "I'm not sure if there are going to be any others this year."

The Deacons never had a lead in the game, but found themselves tied with Carolina at 39-39 at the half, and tied again at 61-61 with only 2:30 remaining in the game.

"It's a great win for us. We're proud of the players," said Wake Forest head coach Terry Holland.

The Deacons were led by Jennifer Butler, who had a game-high 24 points, and Kristy Fields, who added 19 points.

Wake Forest shot 45 percent from the field and 37 percent from three-point range.

"It was a great win for us," said Wake Forest's Bob Workman. "We've been struggling lately and it's nice to finally get a win.

Young passes scoring plateau

Senior guard Danny Young became only the 20th player in Wake Forest history to reach the 1,000-point plateau in a career with 17 points against N.C. State last Saturday. That mark figures to make him the 10th Demon in 11 years to pass 1,000 career points.

Young is the latest in a string of Demon legends, dating back to Bill Potsel an decade or more ago, who have rung up points with unrelenting determination.

"My main goal this season is to do well," the soft-spoken upperclassman recently said. "We have played well in the early going and I think we can have a very good season." Young's goal is to win the Atlantic Coast Conference championship, which I think I have an excellent shot at doing, as far as I'm concerned. I think I have been playing average, trying every game to improve."

1983 Gator Bowl Champs!

Wake Forest won the 1983 Gator Bowl in Jacksonville, Florida with victories over Auburn and Jacksonville last December. In the opening round of the tourney, the Demon reached Army 81-74, behind Danvy Green's 31 points and Anthony Teachey's 14.

The championship game pitted Wake Forest against the home favorite Jacksonville. The Jaguars needed five free throws from Delaney Rudd to escape with a 57-54 victory. Danny Young led the team in scoring with 18 points, followed by Rudd with 12.

The Jacksonville defeated Wake Forest 87-79 in the second round of the tourney.

The Demon is the only team to advance to the Gator Bowl twice in the contest's history.

The Demon basketball team is ranked No. 11 in the nation in the Associated Press Top 20 poll.

Believe it or not, there is a flip side, a serious side to Al McGuire. So let's stop and talk a minute about something else besides the more colorful and often controversial aspects of college basketball.

There's a lot going on in the world of college basketball, including some serious issues that aren't always covered on the nightly sports shows. For example, the NCAA has been involved in an ongoing battle with the National Collegiate Athletic Association over the issue of compensation for student-athletes.
