Lack of respect for campus property disgraceful

I’ve been at this university in one capacity or another for just over the past 24 years. I don’t know whether that makes me a seasoned observer of campus life, or well after playing in Division II, to go-to guy.

However, I can say with certainty that one thing has not changed for the better. Charming that they’re at Dogpatch Junior High.

To probably every person that I mention the little globs of mucus, intelligence enough to get admitted to a school with the underdog role.

Still, it’s disappointing to think that with all the events that happened within the past year (remember, it’s been less than a year since North Korea stunned the world with a nuclear test), something as trivial as $25 million, about $1 per person, could have such a dramatic effect.

However, it is precisely this amount of money that could be the difference in North Korea’s nuclear ambitions. North Korea is nothing to turn the tide to the nuclear standstill and will continue to last well after their tenure at the university.

For years, the university’s business school has been marked as competitive and marketable but also have the firm grounding in the liberal arts that every university graduate requires.

Somehow, we feel that the business school’s ranking is representative and that the school is not reaping the advantages not found at larger schools.

It’s interesting to note that a school that prides itself on providing a liberal arts education gains a higher national attention for the business program. Graduates of the university’s business school.
Guster promises to good show

Band’s music appeals to a wide array of styles

Matt Six  Old Gold & Black columnist

I will confess. As soon as I found out this year’s spring concert lineup, I was skeptical. Guster? I do not see the connection. I mean...I love Guster. I have long been a fan of this band ever since I was in high school. But Guster? A band that I do not exactly feel represents everything that spring concert is about. I have attended many previous spring concerts. Empty bottle, Ow Shu, Fairport Convention, or even Guster's ownw Guster tour, which features the release of their album “Ganging Up on the Sun.”

Not only is this an album I enjoy but also it is an album that is well worth listening to. “Ganging Up on the Sun” features the release of an album that is well worth listening to. “Ganging Up on the Sun” features songs such as “Seamless” and “Amsterdam.” These songs are perfect for spring weather and they will have you up after exams. I, for one, have been listening to these songs non-stop and they never fail to get me in the mood for spring.

Seeing Guster live will be a treat. Guster is an alternative rock band that has been around for some time. They have released four albums and have gained a large following over the years. Their music is a mix of rock, pop, and folk. Their sound is unique and it is something that you cannot find anywhere else. Guster is known for their catchy melodies and their ability to write songs that are both fun and meaningful.

I highly recommend that you attend this year’s spring concert. Not only will you get to see one of the best alternative rock bands in the business, but you will also get to see a variety of other great performers. So mark your calendars and get ready for a great night of music!

Fox is the first baseball player to receive a weekly honor this year. He led the team last week in hits and RBIs, with 11 each and 8, respectively. He also has two home runs and 17 RBIs credited to his name.

On his pregame ritual:
Really, before games I just try and calm myself down, and try to get my thoughts in order. After a lot of times people are too hyped up to play a game, and it causes them to get too much adrenaline in them. So I just listen to a good country song and try and calm myself down a little bit.

On his intro song:
It’s a Kid Rock song, and I chose it because it’s also Chipper Jones’ walk out song. And he’s one of my favorite baseball players, so I looked up trying to get an idea for a song, and it had a nice little sound to it.

On his perspective has changed since last year:
My perspective hasn’t really changed much at all. I’m a lot more confident and a lot more relaxed when I play now. Last year at the beginning of the season it was kind of a spot start every once in a while, and now that I’m in the lineup most of the time, I get used to it and get relaxed.

On how this year’s team is different:
We were really young and we’re still young. We have a lot of sophomores starting for us, but the team camaraderie is a lot better than last year. We enjoy each other a lot more.

On how the lack of many seniors effects the team:
We obviously don’t have that much older leadership, but the guys who are the leaders do a great job at it. We younger guys though, we’re a super tight recruiting class, we feel a lot of pressure on us to succeed and we try and take it on our shoulders.

On his goals for this year:
The team goal is to make regions because that’s just what we need to do. We haven’t done that in a long time. So we need to get that done. My personal goal is just to do my best to get us there and do whatever I can.

On what he would like to see the team achieve:
This year I would love to see Regulation 10, and I would love to keep them all the way to the ACC. I think we’re very capable. It’s always a dog fight in the ACC to finish first. This year at FSU, we played them there for those games, and they’re No. 1 in the country, but I think we can take them.

"Living in the house is particularly exciting because it provides the opportunity to use new spaces, to experiment with new things," said O'Reilly. "This allows the actors to push themselves in a way that they might not have had the opportunity to do before."

During the production, the actors must work with the T owns resident to prepare for the scene. "This is a great opportunity for the actors to work with a real person and to bring that character to life," said O'Reilly. "It really adds depth and authenticity to the performance."
