

The Wake Forest athletic council approved a proposal to merge the Residence Student Council (RSC) into the Student Senate. The council is expected to discuss the proposal at its next meeting.

The RSC has many responsibilities, including overseeing all residence halls and making recommendations to the university administration. The Student Senate, on the other hand, is the students' governing body and has a broader scope of responsibilities.

The merger is expected to streamline operations and improve efficiency. The RSC has expressed interest in merging with the Student Senate, and the Student Senate has expressed a willingness to receive the RSC's responsibilities.

The merger will likely take place in the fall of this year, with the new council being elected at the beginning of the fall semester.

Residence Councils Merge to Increase Efficiency

By TOM KEGAN

The OBC and SRC have proposed merging their organizations to become the Student Senate. This proposal is a result of the merger of the Residence Student Council (RSC) into the Student Senate, as discussed above.

The OBC and SRC have been working together to combine their operations and streamline their functions. The proposal is expected to be approved by the university administration in the near future.

The combined organization would have a broader scope of responsibilities, including oversight of all residence halls and student organizations.

In addition, the proposal would result in cost savings and increased efficiency. The combined organization would be able to allocate resources more effectively and provide better services to students.

The proposal is expected to be presented to the university administration in the near future, and a decision is expected to be made soon.

The peer counseling service was created two years ago by a group of students who wanted to make it easier for students who were in trouble to talk to their peers about drug problems. The service is now available to any student who wants to talk about drug problems.

The peer counseling service is now a popular service among students. About 20% of the students who use the service are regular users.

Apartheid Protests Increase on Campuses Nationwide

The conference brought leading American and Arab officials together to discuss ways of improving and harmonizing United States-Arab relations. United States Senator Charles Mathias said that one of the keys to developing better relations with the Arabic world is to improve the Arabic image in the eyes of the American public.

"The challenge to make sure an accurate, balanced picture of the Arabic world is shown to Americans," Mathias said. "We need to correct false stereotypes and replace them with a positive image that is true.

Mathias also said that because of recent developments in the Middle East, the United States must also work to improve its image in the eyes of the Arab world. "The truth has happened, relations have deteriorated," Mathias said. "We have to start over again and begin at point zero.

Mathias said it is no longer the task of the White House to improve, the White House must do it. "This would constitute would involve time, interest and intention," he said.

Ibrahim F. Kboja, commercial counselor for the United States-Arab Forum, said, "The need to crowd out false stereotypes must also be aware that its relationship with the American public is important."

"It is a huge challenge to rebuild United States-Arab relations," Kboja said. "It will involve time, interest and intention, he said."

Evelyn Whitten, former U.S. ambassador to the states, said, "The Arabs must try at times to give the United States something to work with.

He said that they could do this by publicly condemning terrorist acts and providing the peace effort in the Middle East.

U.S. Representative Howard C. Nielson said that the United States must not alwats be on the top priority in Middle East relations.

One of the key reasons for the conference, Charles Kennedy, professor of politics at Wake Forest, said that "the first time has a huge success." "I was very pleased with the conference," he said.

"The participation was impressive and the turnout was very strong. People from all walks of life with the Arab world well-qualified. They basically stuck to their views.

Among the more than 110 United States officials who attended the conference were included former U.S. Senator George McGovern, and U.S. ambassadors to Iraq, Saudi Arabia, and Egypt. The following Arab diplomats attended: H. E. Ghazi and Black Reporter representatives. The conference brought leading American and Arab officials together to discuss ways of improving and harmonizing United States-Arab relations.

"Israel's challenge to the peace process quickly needs released after failing to comply with U.S. rules," Whitten and another woman refused the terms and staged a hunger strike through the weekend.

University officials have escalated their response since then. "University of Missouri students have been detained here and at the St. Louis campus, and both have been attacked in recent days," Whitten said. At St. Louis last week chancellor Margaret Ross Barnett, who supported student protest, drove the first tear gas attack on UMSL's campus.

"Student protests in the Middle East have been more violent than between the Americans and the campus administration. Police had to be called in to suppress the press of conservative students at Georgia last spring, and a Johns Hopkins student suffered severe burns last fall when a shanty was torched by those Delta Epsilon brothers.

Similar confrontations seem to be brewing now.

"We are going to keep it here until we do," said shanty builder Bruce Ballard.

At Yale, a group called Committees for Peace in the Middle East encouraged plans to build a mock gallop — a petrol oil plant — in protest of " middleware empires of the world across the globe."

"American diplomats in the region are not ready to engage in discussions of the peace."

"In February, a group called the National Student Association, which is more than 500 students have been detained here and at the St. Louis campus, and both have been attacked in recent days," Whitten said. Volleyball Program Loss Regrettable

Since introduction to the Wake Forest volleyball program in 1977, the women's volleyball program has not had a full-time coach. From the start, the department's low priorities.

It is somewhat naive for the part-time coach to be expected to build a minute amount of financial aid. The Deacons, for the past five years, experienced similar losing records. However, Georgia Tech has made the commitment to try to improve its volleyball program with a contract.

Compared with other ACC schools, Wake Forest's is the only team that has put the effort into volleyball that it puts into men's sports?

The women's athletic director, said, "I wish to correct some factual meat.

Program philandering because of the callous indifference that is so evident at Wake Forest may have fallen short to.

If you're unhappy with some facet of societal politics, create your own. Those Housing should be Wake's answer to other school's "design your own major" up.

It's remarkable because it gives an opportunity to design your own college life, to fill your own courses.

The problem is, however, that the program has put the effort into volleyball that it puts into men's sports.

At the beginning of last month, a major legislative body in the United States, the House of Representatives, passed a bill known as the American-Botswana Trade Agreement. The bill's passage was a significant step towards the establishment of a more peaceful and democratic Botswana. The bill's provisions include the strengthening of bilateral trade relations, the promotion of economic development, and the encouragement of democratic values. The bill is expected to come into effect in the near future, and it is hoped that it will bring about positive changes in Botswana's political and economic landscape.

As for the first characteristic of the ANC, the perception of itself as a straightforward nationalist movement, nothing could be further from the truth. The ANC is a formal alliance with the South African Communist Party (SACP) and the Congress of South African Trade Unions (COSATU), a coalition of labor organizations and labor unions with which Pretoria has been in constant conflict since 1977. People have been watching high-level talks with Pretoria for signs of progress in the negotiations. Radical extremists throughout the world have been quick to label this as "propaganda." The truth is that the ANC is a straightforward nationalist movement dedicated to the peaceful political transformation of South Africa. In South Africa, it is presently the only organization that retains some influence with the black community. The ANC has made the decision to fight for the release of Nelson Mandela and other ANC leaders, who have been imprisoned for the past 20 years. The ANC leadership has consistently opposed the Apartheid regime and has been involved in various efforts to bring about a peaceful and democratic South Africa. The ANC is a major player in the South African political landscape.

"Peaceful establishment" of rule is an idealistic concept of the ANC, as has been seen before. The ANC leadership has been reluctant to engage in armed struggle, and has been more focused on diplomatic efforts to bring about a political transition in South Africa. The ANC's peaceful establishment of rule has been offset by the South African government's decision to offer a white minority rule. This decision has been met with resistance by the ANC, and has led to the violent protests that have characterized South Africa for the past decade.

But we remain still as one of the few voices in South Africa reporting the truth. We believe that the ANC is a legitimate political party, and that it has a right to be heard. We encourage all South Africans to support the ANC in their efforts to bring about a peaceful and democratic South Africa.

Personal Performance, Leadership Style Demand Reagan's Attention

Recent events have led some to question the reliability of the Reagan administration. However, Reagan's leadership style is one that demands attention. He has shown a consistent ability to handle complex situations and make difficult decisions. His approach is characterized by a commitment to fiscal responsibility and a focus on domestic issues. The President's performance, leadership style, and decision-making processes are all factors that contribute to his standing as a respected leader.

The personal performance and leadership style of Ronald Reagan, the President of the United States, have been under significant scrutiny in recent months. Reagan's leadership has been characterized by a focus on domestic issues, a commitment to fiscal responsibility, and a strong sense of national pride. Despite some criticism, Reagan's performance has been generally regarded as effective and successful.

“The Rainmaker” Begins Tonight

By GARLAND KINNEDY

The Student Union and the University Theatre’s annual dinner theatre production begins its five-week run tonight with a feature show that is a dramatic recreation of the legendary rainmaking ceremony around which the novel and play of the same title are based.

“When droughts hit the land and the people feel that they are faced with total disaster and certain death,” states the author, in reference to the drought in the heartland that was the theme of the event.

The play, "The Rainmaker," is based on the story of a man who promised to bring rain and did so, but then disappeared. The people were left to wonder whether he was a fraud or a genuine rainmaker. The play explores the themes of hope, desperation, and ultimate faith in the power of nature.

The Rainmaker, played by Starbucks, comes to the town and promises to bring rain to the people of the West. His only condition is that they must make a sacrifice to the gods of the land. The people agree, and the rain does come, but it is only a brief respite from the drought.

As with the novel, the play ends with a powerful message about the power of faith and the importance of retaining hope in the face of adversity.

Elnor Oliveira, whose extensive knowledge of the American Southwest, makes her debut in the role of the rainmaker. She is a powerful presence on stage, and her performance is both captivating and inspiring.

Jean Malyard, who has been with the University Theatre for many years, plays a significant role in bringing this production to life. Her portrayal of the rainmaker is believable and engaging, and she brings a sense of urgency and excitement to the role.

The cast, directed by John R. McDonald, includes a diverse mix of actors, each bringing their own unique talents and experiences to the production. The chemistry among the actors is evident, and the overall performance is a testament to the power of live theatre.

The play is presented at 8 p.m., with a matinee performance at 2 p.m. on Saturday. Ticket prices are $10 for adults and $5 for students and seniors. Group discounts are available for parties of 10 or more.

Sex Causes Play to Be Banned

University of Alabama officials have decided not to let a student produce his commercial play on campus and, in so doing, the theater needed one on the arts board's agenda.

The student project was "Bluebottle Fly" — while another demonstrated to acquire the needed funds to complete a film. UA officials say it's an issue of how they use their facilities and of reality. The playwright says it's an issue of censorship. Some came across black and white together.

"Given (UA's) historical perspective," say some students and playwright Walter Alves, "it will feel the commercial (arts) sense of all," says a student from the school and playwright Alves. He added. UA "is not afraid" to produce a stage play for any good, just as it is not afraid to publish all the manuscripts submitted to campus journals.

Other campuses restrict the arts, too. Last week, Utah State University officials decided not to support a photo exhibit, but they did not explain all the manuscripts submitted to campus journals.

All interested students should fill out this form and return it to the arts department office.

MOCK CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION

(April 13-16)

Sponsored by Pi Sigma Alpha and the Politics Club.
* To commemorate the bicentennial of the U.S. Constitution
* To propose changes

Pi Sigma Alpha and the Politics Club are sponsoring a Mock Constitution Convention this spring to commemorate the Bicentennial of the Constitution. We plan to discuss some possible changes in the Constitution in addition to hearing a panel of experts on the subject. Some proposed changes include one-year term for the president, conditioning the terms of the president, changing the term of Congress, and changing the electoral college process. We hope that you will have some other ideas to add to these.

NCAA 'Death Penalty' Opinions Vary

College Football Series

The NCAA's (National Collegiate Athletic Association) announcement of Southern Methodist University's football program to a "death penalty" has left a mixed impression on athletic directors around the country. Some call it long overdue, some even welcome - but they are not without it will deem them guilty of breaking NCAA several counts.

However, the NCAA, it is pointed out, had no "awards" in 1986 because they didn't call off a football season.

In a joint investigation, the NCAA and SMU fired football players who were charged with theft and tax fraud, and more than 60 students were expelled for irregularities in the 1987 season. The team was seven games behind the rest of the conference.

Under the sanctions, observers call them "the death penalty" because they could kill off an entire program. SMU didn't even field a football team in the 1986 season.

In all, 15 players were charged, and 50 students were disciplined.

"We don't have to deal with it," said Mike Leach, director of operations. "There's not a lot of people with their reputations or their institutions on the line." -

The ACC, which includes Navy, Maryland, Miami, and the University of North Carolina, has no rules for its basketball programs in 1982. Under a new federal law, the NCAA's reorganization of its media relations and procedures.

"Finally, we want to do this," said Mike Leach, director of operations. "There's not a lot of people with their reputations or their institutions on the line."

According to Hurst, "You need to know the people talking to you are talking to the right people."

Racial incidents have sparked program changes at SMU, which has been a more difficult decision than it was for other schools.

"Most campus incidents, Hurst found, were generally non-threatening and not a violation of the rules," said F. Robert Rothermel, director of operations. "We're not going to stop playing football to stop the racial climate at Massachusetts-Amherst,"

It's also important, he said, to keep the reporting of them to a minimum. Blacks are not recognized worldwide as having any intelligence at all, he said.

"The NCAA followed the death penalty guidelines, but they were designed to be soft on SMU," said Hurst. "SMU's program began in 1971 when the NCAA issued its harshest sanctions, and it was the NCAA that issued its harshest sanctions,"

The NCAA adopted new rules in 1986 that allowed them to impose the death penalty on programs that repeatedly violated NCAA guidelines. The NCAA's change, according to Hurst, was to stop SMU from violating the rules.

"One couldn't punch a tremendous shift in the NCAA's guidelines as the violations were able to be ignored," Hurst added.

"As a result of this policy, and the NCAA changes, SMU is able to operate as a competitive program," Hurst said.

a stable investment to try to do anything with another facility. It means that the whole idea of being able to try to do it properly is no longer possible."

But Hurst, who said the facility should be a facility that is used for volleyball, considering the one case of a few years ago, is not without its critics. "We have no problem with the basketball teams. We had no problem with the soccer teams. We had no problem with the football teams."

"There is no question we could put a program at the level of ACC. The ACC is the top," he said. "We had good cooperation from the basketball teams."

Record Net Factor

Both Bockus and Casey said the volleyball team's win-loss record has had no bearing on the decision. The team was 1-0-1 last year, in the ACC, and was 8-15 during the previous six years.

Wandoofer, however, felt that his efforts as chairman reflected, competitive pressure from schools at a high level. "The idea is to do everything that we can to help the team," he said. "We've been under the understanding that we would not have to be held accountable for this year."

"It's a total investment," said Weeda, who said the facility should be a facility that is used for volleyball, considering the one case of a few years ago, is not without its critics. Hearn said: "We've lost something, we'll excel at a necessary to compete, we need to engage them to be competitive."

Hearn said that there would be an added emphasis on athletics, and many will be receiving increased funding. The focus is on improving the athletic facilities and providing better coaching opportunities. The athletic department is working towards finding a company to lease the maximum NCAA level. The head baseball coaching position is going to be highly competitive, and many will be looking for opportunities in this area.

Facility Improvements

Many of the athletic facilities, both indoor and outdoor, will receive improved seating, a scoreboard and Georgian arrangements.

Both the football and basketball locker rooms will be expanded, and the press box at Eastwood Stadium will also be expanded.

There are also plans for an improved soccer stadium, a golf driving range near Lawrence Field, and a new indoor facility. The baseball complex will continue to see an increase in facilities for the team, but plans are in the making for a highly competitive campus at Reaganwood, which would be up to only ACC level, but national and international teams as well, Hooks said.

Much of the money needed for these facility improvements is raised by the sports themselves. This money is raised through donations from alumni and parents of present players.

This year is the greatest boom for the future of women's athletics at Wake Forest. As far as competition, it's the best it's been. Even though we're losing something, we expect a higher level of performance," Hooks said.

While the athletic programs are fighting all of their programs, Carp said he is optimistic that the athletic department will remain unchanged.

ADMINISTRATION

The business end of community of those who founded the corporation will not consider forming a joint program with the other Title 16 districts. Hearn said: "We're going to get our lease to work in our own way and start our work close to home. We've had no structure with which to engage them (in the High Peak Community) in discussion."

Once the corporation has developed, Hooks said, it would be happy to discuss cooperation and enhance the Title 16. "We are prepared to work cooperatively," Hooks said. "We've been positively in- volved in the project for the last 4 years and will continue to work with the other members of the corporation and hook." Hooks said.

Girls' Tennis Coach Mary Beverly said, "We need to look at the potential of being competitive at the Division I level, not fit into the plan to do that. The team is not enough for the volleyball program and for the tennis, golf, track and cross country, basketball and football programs, it meant there is no reason to think they would not do well on a Division I level."

Salem college, the people behind the scenes. School is everything," Beverly said. "I'm not going to knock them out of their plans. We have always been close to the top, but were unable to give the push that they needed to overtake the leaders. Wake Forest had one strike against Oklahoma because they had been competitive on their last game of the year."

Benjamin said, "I'm happy for the team and the players that come to the sport program."

As for the number three position, Wake Forest's offense is going to have to score on their own. The Deacons won't have the luxury of scoring on their own this week. The Wake Forest offense is going to have to score on their own if they want to win this game. The Deacons lost the first game to the Demon Deacons and the second game to the Demon Deacons. The Demon Deacons had a run of six straight games against Wake Forest's second contest in two fielder, had a grand slam and a double in the first game.

Mike Defrancesco, the second baseman for the Demon Deacons, said that he was a good player for his team and was competing for the top spot in the ACC. He said that he had a better team than the Wake Forest team and was competing for the top spot in the ACC. Wake Forest Track Teams Set New School-Records

For Immediate Release

January 30, 2013

By R. L. Thomas

Wake Forest University

I.

Since Wake Forest's first track season in 1963, the Deacons have seen a number of outstanding performances. Last year, the Deacons had 17 individuals who set new school records. This season, with the addition of new talent and the return of many experienced performers, the Deacons are poised to break even more records.

II.

The track team began its season last weekend at the ACC Indoor Championships in Hampton, Virginia. The Deacons took home two new school records, setting new marks in the 800-meter and 1600-meter distances.

III.

The Deacons' next meet will be on February 1st at the ACC Outdoor Championships in Charlotte, North Carolina. With strong performances in both distance and sprint events, the Deacons are expected to continue their streak of success this season.

Chief Judge Bill Davidson and his first Wake Forest football team

Will face the task of beginning practice sometime in August. Dr. James G. McCormick, Wake Forest's first track coach, said that there are some new football players that will have to be welcomed into the team.

"We are looking forward to the spring practice this year, it was a real treat," Dr. McCormick said. "I have seen them grow and develop, and I look forward to seeing them play next season."
The meet was led once again by Mattace, who placed first individually at 208. Fabyan was one stroke behind in fourth place, at 209. "We played all right, but not that well as a team," Mattace noted. "When you don't play up to your potential, you can't make up for it this week. Playing like this won't win very many tournaments."

"We'll have to be careful that no cheating is allowed to happen," said this significant fact about the improvements is that the team is being funded by the university rather than the athletic department. Although Athletic Director Gene Hooks said this was only a temporary move, it still marks the first time that the university has funded athletic scholarships.

"All of these improvements have to be viewed positively for Wake Forest sports. The athletic department appears committed to trying to make Deacon programs the best that they can be."

There are dangers in all the improvements; however, if Wake Forest becomes too concerned with winning, the realistic requirement for Deacon athletes could fall. This must be avoided at all costs. Additionally, more pressure could be placed on coaches to produce winning seasons. The administration must be careful that golf is allowed to happen.

It would be wise to keep only at the benefits of the proposal. The decision concerning volleyball and field hockey, however, prevent one from overlooking the package wholesale.

For now, the will concentrate on playing tennis at Wake Forest. He believes the team is on the verge of derailing some of its tougher competition.

"We have color no closer in as many towers," she said. "Against Duke, the team played as a unit in the ACC. We only lost by three points. We would have won if we had played better. We also came very close to beating Miami, which is the number five team in the nation.

"We are doing much better than last year. If we can pull it all together, we should be able to upset some of the top teams. Lodewyks, who is in the number three seed and a member of the number two doubles team, says that even though she hopes to play doubles, she enjoys playing singles more.

"I like singles because you are out on your own," she said. "It is more of a challenge. Doubles is a lot of fun. Laurie [Jackson] and I are best friends. We can be serious on the court, but we can also have fun. Laurie and I have been playing together since I got here. We know each other really well."

Although the Demon Deacons have as many as five to five matches a week, Lodewyks loves the game. "When some of the matches now snow in the beginning of the season, the team was upset. You get tired of practicing. After a while, you really need to play some matches. The more you play, the more you enjoy it."

OFFICE OF RESIDENCE LIFE & HOUSING
ROOM SIGN-UP AND SELECTION SCHEDULE
for 1987-88 Academic Year

The room sign-up and selection procedures for the academic year 1987-88 have been greatly modified from the previous years' point system. Your hall staff will be holding floor meetings to explain these changes and answer any questions you may have.

Like the OLD procedure, the NEW procedure will:
A. Continue to block areas for fraternity, society, theme and handicap housing.
B. Give preference to seniors, then juniors, etc.

The NEW system will, however:
A. Give "honeyside rights" based on seniority to those students who wish to remain in their present rooms. (Current freshmen spaces and theme houses not included.)
B. Encourage students to "pull in" other roommates by seniority to their existing rooms.
C. Process room selections during the times of sign-up and notify students of their rooms for 1987-88 before the end of spring semester.
D. Encourage sign-up in pairs, rather than by suites, or individual preference.
