Board Adds 2 Business Departments

The University Board of Trustees Friday approved the creation of two business departments within the College of Business Administration.

The board unanimously re-elected Leon A. Condon, Jr., of Winston-Salem, to the post of chairman. In addition, L. Van Deventer, president of Watauga, was again named to the post of vice chairman and_time Secretary.

In making the appointments, Dr. E. W. Wilson, associate professor of accounting and directing the business administration, said: "We believe this is the first time that we have had a faculty man who is capable of overseeing both these departments."

"We will be able to bring a more unified approach to business education."

Shaw Play Will Open Thursday

The University Theatre will open its 1970-71 season Thursday night with "The Odd Couple" by Neil Simon. The play will be presented in the newly renovated Reynolds Theatre, located on East Fourth Street.

The odd couple is characterized by the different relationship of two co-workers, with one being a compulsive bachelor and the other a neat-freak. The two roommates must share a small apartment in New York with a loud and obnoxious roommate. The play is about to end a successful tour with the cast which will be performed in Reynolds Theatre.

The play is being presented by the theater directed by John L. Smith, chairman of the department of dramatic arts at the University. The production will begin with a new set of furniture for the first time in the history of the University Theatre.

Challenge "E" has received pledges totaling more than half of its $5,000 budget even though it has not received any financial assistance from the university. Pledges also have made sizable contributions to Challenge "D." Challenge "C" has made a small contribution of $100.

Almost $1,400 in pledges have been received, so Challenge "B" has $2,000 budget. Miss McPhail said the club can expect to have its $5,000 budget in pledges before the challenge is over.

Although individual faculty and administrative personnel have contributed, the University itself has not included any contributions.

Bill Veek, former owner of the Cleveland Indians, said Tuesday that leaders must not be afraid to take risks.

"Leadership is necessary for survival," Veek said. "It's about taking risks and leading the way to new horizons." Veek is known for his bold leadership style, which he says is essential for success in today's world.

Veek also emphasized the importance of teamwork and collaboration. "Leaders must be able to work closely with their teams to achieve success," he said.

Veek's advice comes as the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill is gearing up for its 125th anniversary celebrations. The university is planning a series of events to commemorate its history and celebrate its achievements.

"Rachel, Rachel" Refuses to Use Cinematic Gimmicks For Success

By DOUG LEE

"Rachel, Rachel" is one of a select group of films that refuse to make a nonsense of itself by using gimmicks and other devices meant to keep the audience from falling asleep. This is not to say that it is better than many of its competitors, but it is certainly no worse. The thing about "Rachel, Rachel" is that it is a strange little piece of writing and is not immediately apparent to many viewers. The story revolves itself with the unpleasantness of a death belonging to a teacher, during the mid-1940s. As we read through the story, we find ourselves in a strange little place called "Rachel, Rachel," which is a small town in the midst of a strange little world. We find ourselves in a place where the usual rules do not apply, and the usual habits are not observed. A quiet and pleasant place, it seems.

"Rachel, Rachel" is a screening of the latest film of the master of suspense, Hitchcock. For those who are not familiar with the master of suspense, Hitchcock, we rarely see him in this form. But those who are familiar with him know that he is a master of suspense. "Rachel, Rachel" is his particular piece of art, and his particular piece of art is a film that will leave you on the edge of your seat. How Do Negro Athletes Feel About Life At University

by FREEDOM WARS

Negro athletes today have an image problem. They are more than mere sportsmen, more than mere entertainers. They are the future of their race, the symbols of a struggle which has been going on for years. They are the Beaten C for Cello of Tchaikovsky (Stereo)

- or does any development mean that they are more than just athletes? What if the future of our race depends on them? What if they are the key to our survival? What if they are the answer to our problems? What if they are the answer to our questions?

The answer to these questions is not easy. But one thing is certain: the Negro athlete today is a symbol of hope for his race. He is a symbol of the struggle for equality. He is a symbol of the struggle for freedom. He is a symbol of the struggle for justice.

Wake Forest And Carolina Look For First ACC Win

By JEFF BUEHLE

Wake Forest, once atop the ACC and now fighting to avoid finishing last in the league, will meet a Carolina team that could be playing in its first ACC game.

The two teams have had little success in the past, with Carolina winning only twice in the series. However, the Deacons are currently in the middle of a three-game losing streak, which has their season off to a rough start.

Carolina, on the other hand, is coming off a win against NC State and is looking to build on that momentum.

Both teams have young quarterbacks leading the way, with Wake Forest's John Black and Carolina's Tyler Wilson. The ACC is known for its high-scoring games, and this matchup should be no different.

The game is set for 3 p.m., with kickoff at 3:30. Carolina is favored by 10 points.

Lewis Helps Americans To Victory

In World Amateur Golf Championship

By RICHARD SINK

Wake Forest's Jack Lewis is one of the favorites to win the World Amateur Golf Championship, which will take place in England this week.

Lewis, a senior at Wake Forest, has been playing golf since he was a child and has been competing in tournaments for years. He has won several local and regional championships, and his performance in the World Amateur Golf Championship will be a testament to his skill.

The tournament, which is considered one of the most prestigious amateur golf events, will feature 250 players from around the world. Lewis will be one of the favorites to win, along with other top players from the United States.

Lewis is looking forward to the challenge of competing against some of the best golfers in the world and hopes to bring home a victory for his country.

The tournament begins on Monday and will run through Sunday. Lewis is expected to perform well and is a strong contender for the title.
Wake Is A Loser

By RICHARD SINK
Sports Editor

Wake Forest has a losing tradition. It's no secret when Wake Forest athletes are mentioned, people immediately think of the losing tradition. As an example of this came in Bill's week's column last Thursday when he said: "To lose is to speak of leadership and winning, but I then I remembered -I was at Wake Forest.

Veek also make another reference to Wake Forest's losing tradition. "I have all the time about being a Deacon," he said, "and it's the same as the Wake Forest."

The students laughed at these comments by Veek, but unfortunately, they are painfully true. People in this town often say things such as: 'Don't you get tired of losing all the time? Do Wake Forest ever win in anything? How can you stand to always watch Wake Forest lose?"

I usually make a bubble reply such as, "haven't you ever heard of our golf team? We've got a great golf team."

Then I reply, 'Our football team was and basketball team was the best 10 years ago, but now that you've played soccer, aren't you happy with us today?"

Still the football team has failed to win a game in its first four games. (This column was written before the Purdue game.) Wake Forest has lost its first four games is not because we have played teams with superior ability.

Wake Forest played N.C. State, Clemson, Minnesota, and Virginia Tech in the first five games of its season. None of the schools in this season are any better than this year's Wake Forest football teams.

Yet each of these teams, with the exception of Clemson, did not get a winning record. The Chalk Point game was the only exception.

The margin of victory ranged from Clemson's first game in Chapel Hill to four points in Virginia Tech's one game. That's three losses by a total of ten points.

These teams did not have football tradition. They did not have something that Wake Forest had, a winning tradition.

Many of the hotels equal football teams play each other, and one school and another school often play once or twice a year. It is a tradition for Wake Forest to play each other. The scoring will come from the best of the team with the winning tradition will win.

This is going to be the case with this year's Wake Forest football team.

Travis Edward has developed a good football program at N.C. State. There is no winning tradition at State. The Wolfpack have not won last year and defeated Wake Forest.

The only school who won last year's game was Clemson, another school with a winning tradition. The Tigers went unchallenged that year in ACC.

In the second half of the Chalk Point game, Wake Forest twice led by a touchdown only to see the Tigers come back and eventually score the winning touchdown with less than three minutes left in the game.

The question is raised: If Wake had been trailing by a touchdown late in the game, would the Deacons have been able to come back and gain the tie? Probably Note.

The Deacons were able to make a comeback because they knew they could. Their winning tradition spurred them on.

Clemson was the third opponent of the season for Wake Forest. Just being in the Big Ten is enough to give Minnesota a winning tradition. Big Ten schools have a tradition of winning when they play outside competition.

The Gophers last year tied for the Big Ten championship. Although many people did not realize it, Wake Forest traveled to Minnesota with a good chance of winning. And the Deacons almost did it. They just refused to lose. The Gophers tried it with little points with little play, but they scored 14 points in the last seven minutes to win.

Still, Wake Forest has come on in the last three games to win the game. The Deacons have the ball near the Minnesota 20 twice in the last three games. Both times failed to push across the winning touchdown.

Minnesota, with its winning tradition, came from behind and was able to hold Wake when Wake was held. With its losing tradition, could not hold off Minnesota late in the game.

Virginia Tech was the fourth opponent for Wake Forest. Wake Forest should have won this ball game, it was obvious from the beginning that the Deacons were the better team.

But it was, the same story in this game, Virginia did not hold off the Deacons late in the game.

This in the last two games, the Deacons are leading in every game. Obviously, the Cobbers have a winning tradition.

Viewing The Deacs

By RICHARD SINK

Late in the game, with the Deacons trailing 7-0, Wake scored its only touchdown of the game and decided to go for two points to try to win. The pass for the two points failed, and the score stood at 7-0. The game ended with the same score.

But what if Wake had been leading by a touchdown late in the game, and Tech had scored a touchdown and decided to go for two? The Deacons would probably have made it because they have a tradition of winning even late in the game. Even later in the Tech game, Wake Forest had a chance to pull out a victory, but Tech came up with a pass in desperation to half the Deacons for a win.

Wake Forest, needless to say, has to develop a winning tradition if it expects to produce winning athletic teams. This is a lot easier to say than it is to bring about. Naturally, you can't produce a winning tradition without winning. It can't be produced overnight or in just one season.

Many people thought that the four victories in a row at the end of last season would make Wake Forest football into winning football. Apparently, the four wins at the end of last season would help. Winning the last five games would not start a winning tradition, but a Winning tradition had to start somewhere.
