Students commend education efforts

by Myrtle Miller

Several student leaders commended efforts being made by the administration to improve the educational environment.

"After prolonged hesitation, Wake Forest and its administration are finally realizing the need for a därk and educational activity involved in the development of the student body," said Gregory Huggins, student body president.

The fact that all of the first-time students are expected to live in dormitories is a step in the right direction, according to philosophy major, Cynthia Reed.

"It is important that students be exposed to other cultures and backgrounds," said Reed.

"I also appreciate the fact that the administration has begun to recognize the need for diversity programs or initiatives," Reed added.

These new programs, Reed said, will help foster an atmosphere of inclusivity and respect among students.

"It is important that all students are treated with dignity and respect," Reed said.

One of the key issues that the administration needs to address is the lack of diversity on campus.

"There is a need for more representation of different cultures and backgrounds on campus," Reed said.

Another concern is the need for more opportunities for social and cultural interactions among students.

"I believe that these initiatives will help to create a more inclusive and vibrant community," Reed said.

Assistant deans of students

Administration changes unite life residence program

by Julie Ragett

Advising at the University of Pennsylvania for several years, Corinne Curran was named as assistant deans of students.

This change follows the promotion of several deans of students to higher positions at the university.

"It is important that we continue to provide a supportive and inclusive environment for our students," said Curran.

"Our goal is to create a community where students feel welcome and valued," she added.

Curran replaces the retiring Robert J. Morgan, who has served as assistant deans of students for 30 years.

"I am excited to welcome Corinne to our team," said Morgan.

"She brings a wealth of experience and knowledge to the role," he said.

Curran, who has a master's degree in counseling and family studies, is a native of Pennsylvania.

She has worked in various capacities at the university, including as a counselor in the student health center.

Curran said she is looking forward to working with students and supporting them in their academic and personal growth.

"I am excited to contribute to the mission of the university and to support our students," said Curran.

For a number of years, Wake Forest has maintained a strong emphasis on academic achievement among its fraternities.

"We have seen a significant increase in the number of fraternities that are committing to academic success," she added.

McGehee noted that the university's Greek life community has made progress in recent years, with more fraternities engaging in academic activities.

"We have seen an increase in the number of fraternities that are hosting academic events such as guest lectures and panel discussions," she said.

McGehee added that the university is committed to supporting its Greek life community and encouraging academic achievement.

"We will continue to work with our Greek organizations to promote academic success," she said.

The role of academics

The dean's office report on fraternity academic standards raises some interesting questions about the role of academics at Wake Forest. First, are academics considered a top priority among students? Second, should there be more strict policy regarding academic performance and extra-curricular involvement? Third, fraternities are being scrutinized here—should other organizations on campus be included? Do we impose our concerns of basketball, golf, alcohol, visitation, etc. on the university? The caliber of their students, we impose our concerns of athletics, fraternities and minority affairs.

Personal Prejudice

How we react to the small number of American medalists at the Olympics is often the first step we take into international affairs. An Olympic volunteer is the best ambassador any one country could have. It is all at once, we should welcome politics from sports. We should encourage the promotion of diversity in our society. Let us all realize that we are changing after the American basketball defeat in Mexico. The United States has missed the opportunity to create millions of new black voters. If we change the perspective of the individual athlete, an excellent athlete's role is not the same as an equal ability. If we change the perspective of an American athlete should be treated with respect. American athletes voluntarily improve their government. Support their government. Their government is supported by the individual athlete. Support the Olympics. They are the largest sports.

Minority Affairs

Black Awareness Week will have come and gone before many people sit and ask themselves, what is the meaning of Black Awareness Week? Many people ignore the social and racial issues. The black community often feels ignored and left out of the mainstream. We must all realize that Black Awareness Week is a chance for blacks to express themselves and be heard. Let us give them a chance by making the black community a part of the university. The black community remains a part of the university and we students must be aware of their struggles.

Disband the Spirits

I write this in response to the Deacon's page. I never have been a Deacon. But I did notice a recent comment by the Deacon in a recent issue of the Deacon. The comment went something like this: "The Deacon is a legal entity that has been involved in a number of sports, particularly track and field, for many years. The Deacon is a vital part of the university community." I believe this was a fair and honest assessment of the Deacon's role.

Lingering Prejudice

Black Awareness Week is an appropriate occasion in which to bring to the present and future generations of blacks in our society. An optimistic individual would point out the significance of certain images to certain issues. An optimistic individual would also point out the importance of the Deacon's role. It is a role that should be preserved and not tarnished. The Deacon is a vital part of the university community and we should support it.

Learning to grow

As a graduate of the class of 1988 and a member of professor Abigail's first class, I must thank her for being my catalyst in learning the skills required to get through college and graduate school. I must also thank her for being the mentor I had during my undergraduate years. I am grateful for the experience and for the opportunities she provided for me. I am grateful for her advice and guidance. I am grateful for her ability to encourage me to think critically and to question everything. I am grateful for her ability to teach me how to think for myself. I am grateful for her ability to teach me how to learn for myself. I am grateful for her ability to teach me how to grow and to become a better person.

Signing Off

The Phoenix Society would like to apologize to any student for any offense this sign may have caused. This sign was never intended to be policy directed and was hung in a way that the students were aware of its context. Our knowledge. Once again, watch your language.

Apathy resides as source of potential killer

As a result, the Soviets now recently become more aggressive in Afghanistan and elsewhere. And there is little indication from that behavior since 1987 that they will continue to be adventurous.

This is certainly possible that they might attack the United States in some way, directly. But the advantages would outweigh the disadvantages. Even in the future, its probability that such a move will be the form, however, яг more attacks stopped hätte, to counter the nuclear war threat, but are not at present in a nuclear war, the technical. The fact that the s to counter nuclear war advantage of others is involved in all cases. What would happen if the U.S. followed? You had the advantage of the even a million Americans. (The number would be reduced, greatly by the potential, and in the future, the usual method.)

But this would not be the case by a kind of a nuclear exchange of weapons which would place the American President as a president in a conflict with the United States. The idea is that neither of these sides would be able to attack the other. And if the President's risk of nuclear war is significant, because it is obvious that only military power has successfully and mitigated. The next 90 days are due to the 19900. Now, in a world war, the United States, which is nuclear war, has been won, but we will see... There is no way to avoid the decisions which would be made in this war, and it is not clear how the world will react.

The idea is that the Soviets, who would be the aggressors, and the United States, would be able to attack the other. Big Country

Recent release offers originality

By Grover E. Jones

The second album of the Scottish rock group Big Country, which is scheduled to perform in Waltz Chapel on March 3, has been released in the United States. The group has been described as having a distinctive sound that combines elements of punk rock and traditional Scottish music.

The band's debut album, "The Crossing," was released in 1983 and featured songs like "The Bridge of Sighs," which were well-received by critics and fans alike. However, the group's second album, which is titled "LookOut Miles," has received mixed reviews from critics.

Despite the mixed reception of the album, the group's popularity continues to grow, and they have been invited to perform at several music festivals and concerts around the country.

The album's opening song, "LookOut Miles," sets the tone for the rest of the album, which features a mix of rock and folk influences. The band's use of Scottish bagpipes and other traditional instruments adds to the album's unique sound.

Despite the mixed reviews, the album has been well-received by fans and continues to be played on rock radio stations around the country.

Wake Forest rolls over Monmouth, 85-57

Randy Pomahac.

Former Wake Forest basketball player Michael A. Roberts was sentenced to a year and one day in prison in the U.S. District Court of the Eastern District of North Carolina for accepting a bribe to change his former coach's rating of a player.

The sentence was announced by the college basketball coaches' ratings organization, the National Basketball Coaches Association (NCAA).

Roberts, a former Wake Forest player, was forced to retire from basketball at the end of the 1983 season after it was discovered that he had accepted a bribe to change his former coach's rating of a player.

The bribe, which was reportedly $10,000, was offered by a scout for a professional basketball team.

The bribe was discovered by NCAA investigators, who then contacted the NCAA and the University of North Carolina, which had hired Roberts as an assistant coach.

The NCAA subsequently imposed a one-year suspension on Roberts, who had been a successful recruiter for the Deacons.

Roberts, who had once been considered a top recruit, was forced to retire from basketball at the end of the 1983 season.
