Pole favors Reagan

Oddities were two aims for the Wake Forest alumni: to raise money for the Wake Forest University Postgraduate School and to honor President Ronald Reagan. The convention was well attended, with one person out of every four attending.

On the survey, 59 percent of those surveyed support President Reagan for re-election, while 28 percent would vote for Carter. Five percent would vote for Anderson and five percent were undecided.

The survey was conducted Sept. 28-29, asked the sample of registered students to rank the candidates from 1 to 4, representing the convention's responsibility.
Student loans increase with federal programs

Joe Jeffries

The number of student loans increased significantly last year, according to figures from the Admissions and Financial Aid office.

Four hundred fifty students applied for financial aid in the form of scholarships, grants, and work-study programs during fall 1978, while 1979 saw 900 students applying for financial aid. The applications were made through the N.C. Guaranteed Loan Program, which made financial aid available to students regardless of the family’s income.

The loans are guaranteed by the federal government. Individual states were responsible for administering the program, and the state institutions and insurance companies, as well. Stability receiving these loans do not have to begin to repay them until after the students are finished with school. Loans must be repaid, however, and the students have to begin to repay them until after the students are finished with school.

Students are notified of their awards or refusal of aid within two to eight weeks after they apply. In the fall, the application deadline for the Federal Pell Grant Program is October 15. The Pell Grant is a need-based grant that does not have to be repaid. Students must reapply for the Pell Grant each year.

The North Carolina Baptists have not raised a banner in the fight of the "birth of a new idea" since they finally approved the fragile convention on Sunday which they solemnly rotated. They have, however, erected the front page again, but perhaps now they may well be interested in their bitterness and resentment.

The General Board of the convention, in congratulating the North Carolina Baptists on recognizing Wafe Park as an institution of Christian education, emphasized the support of the public and the state government.

In effect, this recognition raises the university from the status of a noble to full stature in the Baptist eyes.

They have taken the first step to render the intangible nature of the convention historic, and they have made it difficult for Wafe Park any further step.

Many of the Baptist spokesmen have appeared to reflect the "impossibly ambitious" and are storming to grant Wafe Park any favorable status.

This rebuked recommendation of the convention is evidently clear when the General Board of the convention's statement contains the mention of a "large group of the members of the convention.

Perhaps they are just plain tactics. Perhaps they still have reservations about the convention.

We are well aware of the expenditures possible from this convention, the purpose of which was to render to Wafe Park any favorable status.

The Baptist convention has taken the responsibility of rendering the intangible nature of the convention historic. This responsibility is shared by the Baptist Convention of North Carolina. The Baptist Convention is responsible for the intangible nature of the convention.

Will the pogo replace the shag?

New waves catch on

Before it or not, there it was: the pogo, a new twist happening in Winston-Salem. "Three times a week," said a member of the Canoe's Club, "we have the pogo going on Thursdays, lasting from 8 p.m. until 2 a.m. More and more people are checking it out, and the new ideas are just catching on.

"This new dance form," she explained in general, "offers a slightly different atmosphere from the usual wearing below the knees frequented by other dance forms. Students seem to like it, and the dancers are having a good time."

But there are, of course, other factors involved in the dance. "Dancers," thought Dixon, "are often concerned with adequacy of clothing, and in any case, offers a taped or live music; and there's something new in the variations on the rib cage."

"A girl," answered Dixon, "within the music, perhaps, is as good as the music itself.

Last Thursday's show featured the Postmodern Rockers, who brought the crowd to its knees with live music and Soul food. The audience thoroughly enjoyed it, as well as the new wave.

But the pogo, this curious new dance form, is as old as the hill. As Mike, one of the Canoe's Club members, pointed out, "This is the first time we've seen people pogoing, kind of startling at first, but it's just a way of expressing themselves."

The atmosphere of O'Rielly's features a retro décor, complete with antiques and interesting lighting. The room is unusually eclectic, with white walls and black and white paintings. You can almost stare at the wall and see an altered state of consciousness.

The only drawback to the atmosphere is the high prices. When you check in at O'Rielly's, the prices are slightly different for different groups. The only downfall is the paint job, which can sometimes be insensitive. This is not a place for the walls, but it is a great place for a drink and food.

Oh! Brian's ribs lack imagination

My friend Craig called me last night and asked if I'd like to go to "Paradise," a restaurant in Winston-Salem. "Sorry, I said, "I'm really not into this kind of food."

"You should go," he continued. "It's a place that offers great food and ambiance."

And so, off I went to "Paradise." The atmosphere was friendly and inviting, and the food was delicious. I ordered the ribs, which were cooked to perfection.

The next day, I called Craig and asked him how the ribs were.

"They were fantastic," he replied. "I highly recommend you try them the next time you go there."

In the end, I must say I was really impressed with the ribs at "Paradise." It was an enjoyable experience, and I would definitely recommend it to others.

On Saturday afternoon, the Florida State football team traveled to Tallahassee, Florida, to take on one of the best teams in the Southeastern Conference, the Florida Gators. The Gators had been struggling all season, but with new coaching and some key additions to the roster, they had managed to turn things around.

The game was at high noon, in full sunlight. The Florida Gators were playing in their home stadium, the Ben Hill Griffin Stadium, which had been built in 1930 and had a capacity of 80,000. The stadium was known for its intimidating atmosphere, with loud fans and a reputation for being one of the toughest places to play.

The Florida State Seminoles were led by their head coach, Bobby Bowden. The team had been dominant in recent years, winning multiple national championships and consistently being ranked in the top ten in the country. The Seminoles had a strong offense, led by quarterback Charlie Ward, who had won the Heisman Trophy the previous year.

The Gators were led by quarterback Danny Wuerffel. He had been a star for the Florida Gators for the past four years, and was a Heisman Trophy finalist in 1996. The Gators had a strong defense, but they had been struggling against the Seminoles in recent years.

As the game started, the Seminoles showed their dominance. Charlie Ward threw a 75-yard touchdown pass to wide receiver Peerless Price, giving the Seminoles an early lead. The Gators were able to get on the board with a field goal, but the Seminoles responded with another touchdown, this time on a 1-yard run by running back Leon Searcy.

In the second quarter, the Seminoles added to their lead with a 28-yard field goal by kicker David Dunn. The Gators showed signs of life with a touchdown on a 5-yard run by running back Adrian McPherson, but the Seminoles were able to go on the board with another touchdown, this time on a 1-yard run by running back Corey Jones.

The Gators were down by 21 points to 10 at halftime. The second half was a continuation of the first half, with the Seminoles dominating. Ward threw two more touchdowns, one to wide receiver Peerless Price and the other to tight end Dwayne Holton. The Gators were able to add another touchdown on a 1-yard run by running back Adrian McPherson, but the Seminoles were able to dominate the game.

In the end, the Florida State Seminoles won the game by a score of 42-17. The game was a testament to the Seminoles' dominance, and showed that they were still the team to beat in the Southeastern Conference.
Van Houten budgets time well

The Wake Forest volleyball team has been a turnaround story this season. The Deacons, who started the season 1-4, have won their last five matches and are now 6-4 overall. Last week's matches at Davidson and at home against Appalachian State were particularly impressive.

Birch

Birch, who had signed herself into the starting lineup spot, came out of the gate hot. She scored a double double with 14 kills and 10 blocks. Her performance was a testament to her hard work and dedication throughout the season.

Spikers split matches

The Wake Forest women's volleyball team split matches last weekend, losing to Davidson on Friday and defeating Appalachian State on Saturday. Birch had 24 kills against Davidson and 23 against Appalachian State. The team's overall record is now 6-4.

Harrisers place third
