ODK Initiates

The ODK initiates, established in 1905 by an act of the college faculty, recently organized a luncheon with their members from the Class of 1948. The luncheon was held in the campus dining hall, and the initiates were joined by numerous guests, including faculty members and alumni. The event was a great opportunity for current and past members to connect and share stories about their experiences at the college.

The ODK initiates held their annual picnic on campus last Saturday, and it was a great success. The picnic was attended by numerous members, including current students and alumni. The event included a variety of activities, such as a quiz show, a dodgeball tournament, and a picnic lunch. The initiates also wore their traditional red and white uniforms, which added to the festive atmosphere.

A large area of many students from the College of Business and Social Sciences was under surveillance last Thursday, and students expressed their concerns about the situation. The concern was related to the potential for a crime to occur in the area. The University Police Department was alerted, and they conducted a thorough investigation. The students were reassured that their concerns were taken seriously, and the investigation was ongoing.

Campus Crime Stoppers

A large sum of money was recently taken from several College students last Saturday, and Wake Forest public safety officers are seeking information concerning the crime.

A woman carrying a purse containing $184 was reportedly taken sometime between Sunday morning and Sunday afternoon. The guilty party really had had access to the purse only one day prior to the theft.

Campus Crime Stoppers places a maximum of a $300 award each for information leading to the apprehension and conviction of the individual or individuals responsible for crimes committed on campus. Information may be anonymously telephoned to the campus public safety office through the main number, 761-3015, which is answered 24 hours a day, seven days a week.

Frosh Requirements Set

The Wake Forest College faculty is contemplating a policy to require all prospective freshmen to take the morning part of the Scholastic Aptitude Test (SAT) and an exam given at the College.

No decision was reached on the continuance of open curriculum at Wake Forest. The idea of open curriculum was born on the campus of California Institute of Technology in 1967, and the Wake Forest program was started last spring.

Open Curriculum Faces Debate

By JULIA DRAKE

No decision was reached on the existence of open curriculum at Wake Forest.

A decision will be made at a meeting scheduled November 24, and the faculty has decided to set up an open curriculum committee to be established within the faculty, to replace the ad hoc committee which dealt with the issue. A new committee will be set up as a continuation of the open curriculum program.

The program is a major opposition against more faculty members, according to Dean of the College Thomas Miller.

Job Fair Benefits Students

By LOUI SHEPPARD

Students obtained information concerning possible employment and interviews at the second annual Job Fair at Wake Forest State University last Tuesday and Wednesday.

Through the fair were able to get interviews with companies that do not usually recruit on campus and may not usually be considered for employment or summer employment or an internship.

The Job Fair was a big success because it made the students opportunity to see different companies, director of Career Planning and Placement N. Rick Healy said.

The job fair was conducted by the North Carolina Career Consortium, which consists of eight state arts and sciences institutions.

On Tuesday the companies paid the fair, distributed literature and talked individually to students.

Trained Peer Counselors Fill Needs of Students

The Wake Forest Peer Counselors began last year as a special organization for the sole benefit of undergraduate counseling.

This program can be of special help to students to seek out and find professional counselors or inform discussion leaders.

They fulfill the needs of the student for an objective and sometimes human listener. The counselors can help with difficult personal problems that are often attended by thepressed of college life.

Please feel free to contact the following peer counselors or their faculty sponsors: Mike Ford, associate dean of students for student development, and Cathy Jeneck, a counselor in the University Counseling Center.

SG Notes

The Committee on Athletic Recreation is an interdepartmental committee consisting of faculty members representing each of the 10 departments which make up the campus community. The job of the committee is to grant or deny permission to the student organization for the sole benefit of each individual in the sciences, social sciences and humanities.

The program is a complete gathering of information for the undergraduate which seeks to help the student in his or her organization.

Students who are seeking help or who were referred to the program regard it as a help. They are referred to attend three sessions per semester for a predetermined amount of time. It was set up this way because the program does not provide permanent or crisis management situation, but it does identify why a student is not successful.

The program is located in the university's lower west entrance in a room Monday through Thursday 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Friday 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Students interested in seeking counseling or needing temporary help can call during these hours at 761-5090.

An International Key Freeze Endorses Millions

The northern tip of Africa is the key to world peace. It is also of vital importance to all people of the world, to our nation, the United States. It is time for the United States to take a strong stand against the key freeze.

For African countries are based there, such as in Algeria, for example. It is also a major source of oil for the United States. In fact, if the key freeze is not lifted, it could lead to a worldwide economic crisis.

Thus, it is imperative that the United States takes a strong stand against the key freeze.

South African government!

The article, entitled "In the Interest of Fair Play," was published in the student newspaper. It states, "When you come to blows with your teacher, make sure you have a logical reason for your actions. We think it is time for Mr. Jones to stop making demands.

Those reports are coming from sources who are being pressured by the government to speak to the media. We believe that Mr. Jones is not doing his job properly."

Jane Doe also says, "If the administration is indeed doing a good job, there will not be any strikes of any kind. If there is anything that is not right, we will bring it to their attention."

The Poteat House Council is currently drafting a campaign to get the SA to work within the coalition and the administration. We are going to work with them and the students to find a way to voice the concerns of everyone on campus.

The coalition being formed has its goals of working internally and working within the administration. We are going to work with them and the students to find a way to voice the concerns of everyone on campus.

Wellness Program Informs Students

By CAROLYN COOPER

The Wellness Department has increased knowledge and awareness for health among Wake Forest students through their current programs, including a modified wellness focus in the Wellness 101 course, which is offered each semester and serves as a foundation to the entire wellness curriculum.

Wellness 101 is a one-credit course that meets two times per week, providing students with a comprehensive overview of health and wellness concepts. The course covers topics such as healthy eating, exercise, stress management, mental health, and personal development.

The course emphasizes the importance of integrating wellness into daily life and encourages students to explore their own interests and needs in relation to their overall health. Through a variety of interactive activities, students learn about different wellness practices and develop strategies to enhance their own well-being.

The Wellness Department is committed to providing a supportive and inclusive environment for all students, regardless of their current level of wellness knowledge. The department offers resources and support to help students make healthy lifestyle choices and build a foundation for lifelong wellness.

Wellness 101 is taught by experienced instructors who are dedicated to helping students develop a holistic understanding of health and wellness. The course is designed to be engaging and interactive, with a focus on real-world applications and practical strategies for improving health.

Overall, the Wellness Department's commitment to wellness education is reflected in the range of programs and resources they offer to support the well-being of Wake Forest students.
Drug Abuse Potential Increases

Associate dean of students for student development Mike Ford said the problem of students using narcotics on campus is more serious than that of alcohol consumption.

"It doesn't seem to be one of the problems we face with psychoactive drugs," Ford said. "It seems to be more of a clinical and emotional thing in the use of narcotics and psychoactive drugs."

Ford said that the problem of student use of narcotics has increased since the school year started.

"There have been a few arrests of students for using narcotics," Ford said. "We have also had a few incidents where the Residence Life staff have opened parties and a residence government official has had to enter the party and have the student arrested for having too much alcohol."

According to that study the University Center would cost $23.3 million, an estimate that has been called inaccurate.

"If we would have known it would have been $23.3 million we would have said 'forget it, let's get a new administration.'" Student Government President Eric Thompson said yesterday.

He felt that the administration is set on building Reynolds Hall, as opposed to constructing a new building for the University Center. He pointed to the most recently completed by Anderson of Ed Bouldin.

Fire Breaks Out In South Hall

South Hall was the scene of intense action last night. At approximately 9:15 p.m. a fire in a basement garbage can set off a smoke detector which then activated the fire alarm.

For the third time in the same week the residents of the dorm had to evacuate their rooms. Earlier this week a small fire occurred in the same hall. For the second time this week the Winston-Salem fire department responded to the call.

However, fire department did not arrive until 9:15 minutes after the smoke detector had sounded. Some residents who had been the three times flied out of the building said they were surprised.

Campus security reported promptly to the scene.

Hall coordinators would not provide any information about the fire investigation. At press time it was being investigated.

Walk-ons Lead Precarious Life

By JABIN D. WHITE

In the world of college athletics, there are many heroes. The guy who scores the game-winning touchdown for the football team is a hero, as well as the basketball player who makes a shot at the buzzer. For a brief moment, this player is known as "the guy who was the game" and his hero is well recognized.

There are, however, many other athletes who go virtually unnoticed through the course of their team's season—walk-ons.

A walk-on athlete is a person who "walks out" in the practice field wearing a uniform and hoping, but without the scholarship athlete's guarantee of playing time. It is a life of working, waiting and hoping.

Although it may be hard to believe in today's overcommercialized world of college athletics, there is a limit set by the NCAA on the amount of money a scholarship athlete can earn in athletic programs. This means, unfortunately, that some deserving athletes are left out of this pool when selecting scholarships. Still, many athletes overcome this barrier and walk-on, only to face more obstacles. In the realm of sports, many walk-ons do not get the same consideration as some scholarship athletes, which can be extremely frustrating.

In order for a walk-on athlete to receive a scholarship athlete and get a starting position, some athletes believe the scholarship athlete to be a great act. It is a general consensus among walk-ons that they must perform as well as a scholarship athlete in order to play.

One might call that system unfair, but upon close examination, it is only reasonable. The scholarship athlete is the one who has been preparing for his role since high school. This means that someone connected with the university has been putting in the time and effort to develop him. Although they do not do it purposely, many walk-ons try to look as successful players from high schools with successful programs. This works well for many athletes who are playing on a two-way-high school team.

Another aspect which shows the dedication of walk-ons is the fact that they could play very early in their career having made much effect on them. If a scholarship athlete quits, he leaves his scholarship and does not have to leave school, as there is incentive for him to stay. Why did walk-ons at Wake Forest not get a Division II or III school when they could easily play? Most of them never saw another opportunity to play on an ACC school and may be a threat to win a shot. But for a walk-on athlete, the scholarship athlete is the one who must win games for them. A football walk-on was asked hypothetically, "If you don't have someone between having a scholarship athlete and a walk-on athlete and being able to play a great deal of playing time, which would you choose?" He quickly answered, "Playing time, without giving a second thought.

Our head football coach, Art Atchison, is a kid from a coaching family. He has been able to see his walk-on players, because he is one of the few coaches who has faced the system. He is a kid from a coaching family, and he can tell you what it takes to get recruiters to come look at his players, while scholarship athletes, which can be extremely frustrating.

If a scholarship athlete quits, he leaves his scholarship and does not have to leave school, as there is incentive for him to stay. Why did walk-ons at Wake Forest not get a Division II or III school when they could easily play? Most of them never saw another opportunity to play on an ACC school and may be a threat to win a shot. But for a walk-on athlete, the scholarship athlete is the one who must win games for them. A football walk-on was asked hypothetically, "If you don't have someone between having a scholarship athlete and a walk-on athlete and being able to play a great deal of playing time, which would you choose?" He quickly answered, "Playing time, without giving a second thought.

Our head football coach, Art Atchison, is a kid from a coaching family. He has been able to see his walk-on players, because he is one of the few coaches who has faced the system. He is a kid from a coaching family, and he can tell you what it takes to get recruiters to come look at his players, while scholarship athletes, which can be extremely frustrating.

Walk-ons are playing because they love the game, but not only because they do not have scholarships. Although they do not do it purposely, many walk-ons try to look as successful players from high schools with successful programs. This works well for many athletes who are playing on a two-way-high school team.

Another aspect which shows the dedication of walk-ons is the fact that they could play very early in their career having made much effect on them. If a scholarship athlete quits, he leaves his scholarship and does not have to leave school, as there is incentive for him to stay. Both the men’s and women’s cross country teams finished in the top 25 at the ACC Cross Country Championships, as the men’s team finished fourth while the women’s team captured a school record for highest finishing ACC match.

The men’s team placed 11th in the event, mostly in thanks to three top runners. Yet another new season opens for the Deacons, who provided a ton of depth in the ACC meet. As usual, the top 10 finishers ran for a Deacon in the event. They were good performances last weekend at the ACC Cross Country Championships, as the men finished a strong fourth place while the women captured a school record for highest finishing ACC match.

This year’s ACC Cross Country Championships, held at 11am in Asheville, North Carolina, saw the men’s team take four points, and the women’s team take 25 points, giving Wake Forest a solid finish at the ACC Cross Country Championships. They also placed a school record for highest finishing ACC match. Their strong performances last weekend at the ACC Cross Country Championships will be remembered as an extraordinary accomplishment for the Wake Forest cross country team. twenty-year career goals are also a record. She also made the first team all Deep South last year. The second team player also played for a Deacon in the event.

Michelle Bearden, who scored goals from her inner, and against the opposing team. She was named ACC Co-Player of the Year, and ACC Defensive Player of the Year. While the slogan "Wait and see next season" usually applies to being too soon to place any bets on the Wake Forest hockey prospects, the field hockey team is expected to be a strong contender in the ACC this season.

field hockey teams in North Carolina's history. She moved to Wilmington, Del. in tenth grade and played on the Tower Hill High School team, which became the Delaware state field hockey champions six times and she played in the state playoffs.

Field hockey was one of the prominent activities at Goodman's school, and she later attended Wake Forest University, where she became the Delaware state field hockey champion. Goodman broke her left ankle in her senior year, and her team went on to lose the Wake Forest regional to the goals scored in a four-year period. This season's field hockey team had the highest-scoring player, Goodman, who had two goals in the season.

Some of her other extracurricular activities include being a member of the Science Society, mountain climbing, and snowboarding. Goodman is interested in a career in medicine, and she hopes to study at Duke University.

Field hockey is a sport that requires a lot of coordination and teamwork. Goodman has been playing the sport since seventh grade, and she has been playing for the past six years. She has been an all-state player in her senior year, and she has been a member of the state team for the past two years. Goodman has been practicing hard, and she is looking forward to the upcoming season. She hopes to lead her team to victory in the upcoming season.

Artists: Virtuoso Starker Performs

By JANIE DUNLAP

Musicians dream of walking out on stage to enthusiastic applause, usually preceded by several seconds of their instrument's emanations, and then proceed to play a delightfully varied and emotionally charged program with apparent ease and continual inspiration.

With a warm smile and a nod of his head, Janos Starker did exactly that. The world-renowned cellist and recording artist was at the Scales Fine Arts Center for a week of performances which included a sold-out recital and a performance of Beethoven's 5th Symphony with Wake Forest University's Orchestra.

Starker's carefully chosen program - the 3rd movement of Haydn's Cello Concerto, the Adagio in G minor of Boccherini's famous Sonata, the Adagio of Schumann's Piano Concerto in A minor, and the movement "La Danse" from Chopin's "Prelude in B minor" - was the seamless fabric of a program that delighted the listeners.

The recital was divided into two parts, each featuring a selection from a different composer. The first part, dedicated to the memory of cellist Josef Hofmann, included Haydn's Cello Concerto in C major, the Adagio in G minor of Boccherini's famous Sonata, and the Adagio of Schumann's Piano Concerto in A minor.

The second part of the recital featured several works by Chopin, including the "Prelude in B minor," "Cradle Song," and "Waltz in F sharp minor." The final piece of the evening was Chopin's "Polonaise in C minor," which received a standing ovation from the audience.

Throughout the recital, Starker's playing was characterized by technical brilliance, phrasing that was both expressive and elegant, and a close attention to musical detail. His command of the instrument was evident in his ability to convey the emotional depth of each work.

The recital was a testament to Starker's dedication to the art of chamber music and his passion for sharing his love of music with others. The audience was left with a profound appreciation for the beauty and complexity of classical music, and a lasting memory of the genius of Janos Starker.
Students Spend Summer in Capital

By CARLA ATKINSON

There are few places to our national capital with as much life as Washington. The city's dynamic environment is something that is held in awe, and some groups shift to and out over time often.

Perth the most popular group of Washingtonians "inaction" come to visit in May or June, and are gone by the end of August, in a pattern as regular as clockwork.

They are the college students, who come in "summer," other who do it for other reasons in a "city," Washingtonians hire them.

The second of which time is an "enjoyable" of Georgetown.

The sale's because these places are "fun" places where there are a lot of opportunities to as well as be continued.

Capitol was "a fun place to hangout" for interns.

Ormand, a junior political major, worked for a month in the Republican National Committee. She spent her summer working in "House of Representatives," and had heard about the inter- esting friends around the town at the time was up with the Republican Committee.

In addion, Ormand commented that "the D.C. "McGregor," during her assumption that she would work in Washington after graduating, is now certain that she will never live in the capitol. She also stated that the extreme interest in being considered between the capital hill and the decision which account for well over half of the city's population. McGregor said her surprise at Washington's pace was not a place where she would have been interested in being, though he liked the city for its "state of the art". She plans to stay in a small "house like" and "live" for the next several years.

What would she feel if she were to join the Senate Majority Leader's staff in the future, once the time was up with the Republicans?

She added, "I really enjoyed free-housing and hope to do the same thing in Washington, D.C.

"I think D.C. is a fantastic city to live in," Southern said. "It has all the advantages of a large city but also the advantages of a city where there are a lot of opportunities to as well as be continued.
