Homecoming, Revival Slated At Highland

Highland Baptist Church, New London, will observe its Homecoming on May 4th, beginning with the Sunday School hour at 10:00 a.m.

Along with Homecoming, their revival services will begin at the 11 o'clock worship hour to be followed by dinner on the grounds and lots of fellowship. The evening services for the week will begin each night at 7:30, commencing with Sunday night and continuing each night through Friday night. A nursery will be provided for each service.

The visiting speaker for the week will be Rev. Melvin D. Rabb, pastor of East Maiden Baptist Church, Maiden. Rev. Rabb is a native of Cramerton, and a graduate of Belmont Abbey College, Belmont, and Southeastern Baptist Theological Seminary, Wake Forest. He has also had clinical training at N. C. Baptist Hospital School of Pastoral Care, Winston-Salem. He has held many positions in his association and community, presently serving as president of the Maiden PTA. He is married to the former Emily Fisher of Cramerton, and they have one daughter, Melanie, a sophomore at Gardner-Webb College, Boiling Springs, and a son, Phil, a freshman at Maiden High School, Maiden.

Bert Daniels, prospective youth worker for the summer, will be a guest of the church during the homecoming weekend. Mr. Daniels is a student at Wingate College, where he is active on the youth evangelistic team on the campus. He is a native of Wilson. The youth of the community are invited to come and get acquainted with him.

"The church is looking forward to a joyful time together in singing and worship and we encourage all persons wishing to celebrate with us to come prepared to participate in joy and warm fellowship together," a spokesman said.

"The church hopes to see you coming with a Bible in your hand, a prayer on your heart, food in your basket and a friend or relative by your side," said Rev. Belvin W. Cox, pastor.
