Prof. Zuber Writes Book On N.C. Reconstruction

Dr. Richard L. Zuber, associate professor of history at Wake Forest University, has written a booklet on "North Carolina During Reconstruction" for the state Department of Archives and History.

The 67-page paperback gives an account of political, economic and social events in North Carolina during the decade after the Civil War. It is illustrated with pictures of people, places and documents of the period.

Zuber's study is one of a number of historical pamphlets published by the department. He is the author of a 1965 biography of Jonathan Worth, a North Carolina governor during the Reconstruction.

In the booklet, Zuber describes conditions at the war's end and tells about key figures and events of the period.